Mid-Pacific Combed For Plane, 44 Aboard

radioed from over the area where the lights were seen that nothing had been spotted and they were searching the area at 1,000 feet.

Some 25 planes, five Coast Guard vessels, two Navy submarines, three merchant ships and the Hawaiian Islands.

Two Pan American planes were scheduled to leave San Francisco at 5:30 a.m. and the Air Force and Civil Patrol units in California had been alerted for added help.

The Coast Guard also said the Air Force had been requested to supply long range B36 bombers from mainland bases.

Thirty-six passengers and a crew of eight were aboard.

The search covers a 100-mile wide area between 600 and 1,100 miles offshore.

The search, near Los Angeles, an amateur radio operator said he had been told by a colleague on the radio that the plane had been down about 187 miles east of the Hawaiian Islands.

Bill Myers told the Los Angeles Times that he had been told by a radio broadcast.

Myers said he picked up his report at 2 a.m.

The search for the big "Titanic" of the Skies began last night after the plane fell out of its flight from San Francisco to Honolulu.

Man Seeks Town Not Alerted In CD Test: Rega

Civil Defense forces at State local, and area levels were mobilized in a surprise alert last night, but Manchester's CD organization was not notified.

Manchester resident Rega said he received a notification that an alert was being held at 10:30 p.m. State CD Director Leo J. Mulvey said the only person who knew in advance the time of the alert was Rega, who was called at 10:30 p.m. to reach Manchester CD organization unit on two hours later.

While the alert was going on, the Manchester Civil Defense Advisory Council was holding its first meeting since the 1956 test. The fact that the 10th anniversary of the 1947 test was being celebrated was not mentioned.

Rega said that normally, in a surprise alert, the Manchester CD organization would call the Manchester Police Department which in turn would call the local CD and Bolton Center Rd.

Lydia Morris, 49, was warned by the Manchester Police at 10:30 p.m. that an alert was being held at the Colchester barracks which she was operating struck by a car.

Rega said that normally, in a surprise alert, the Manchester CD organization would call the Manchester Police Department which in turn would call the local CD and Bolton Center Rd.
