Gen. Twining Denies Rivary War Plans

Washington, Jan. 18 (AP)—Rep. McCormack (D-Mass.), the House Majority leader, said today it is President Eisenhower's responsibility as commander-in-chief to tell Congress how he thinks the Pentagon should be reorganized.

The Democratic leader, whose party controls both Houses of Congress, in effect served notice that the legislators would be reluctant to put through a major reorganization without a plan from the President whose constitutional duties include command of the armed forces.

Eisenhower said in his State of the Union Message in Jan. 8 that he would send Congress recommendations for reorganization.

McCormack, a top member of the House Government Operations Committee which handles reorganization plans, said he is "keeping my eyes open" on the subject.

McCormack said he has been asked by the House to conduct a study of the Pentagon's operations. He said he would like to see a study of the Pentagon's operations.

The South is Nudged
 Looking at the South in its effort to modernize its economy, one may have some doubts as to whether it is pressing forward or is being pushed.

For years, the South has waged a spirited campaign to woo industry from the North. Commerce groups, chambers of commerce and local state governments have dispatched hand-picked representatives to the North to present brochures by the scores to prospective investors. They have been successful in many instances, but the South has been reluctant to accept a fast long since taken for granted in the North—state government assistance.

A Sudden Convert
 It is one of the conveniences of Mr. Dulles' profession as a lawyer that he has adequate facilities in the business of arguing from either side of a given question. And Mr. Dulles' talent in this direction is such, as was discovered early in Washington Thursday, when the secretary of state suddenly appeared in court and argued against the advocacy of a summit meeting and of these very processes of negotiation with Russia which he had been arguing against for many months past.

The Divided Heart
 We find ourselves, this winter, in a state of divided heart. We are not quite sure of our own mind. We are not quite sure of the pulse of our administration and the pulse of the world as a whole. We are not quite sure of the pulse of our own people. We are not quite sure of the pulse of our own country.

One-Way Limit
 If one confesses to a feeling of fatalism with regard to things like the national debt limit, that is because the best intentioned of the best men have been tried so often, in such matters, and found wanting.

ness subcommittee in effect that he would turn in his uniform rather than criticize Eisenhower's defense budget.

Twining said in previous closed-door testimony made public yesterday that the Armed Services never got all the money they asked for. "A commander makes a decision and if everybody starts bucking it, it is just not good, and you have no military," he said.

Without mentioning Acheson's column, Twining said there was a "strong feeling" among the House Armed Services Committee members to start a "detection center" outside the United States.

Such a detection system would give the United States perhaps 15 minutes warning time—not enough for evacuation of U.S. H-bombers on their way to Soviet targets.

Dulles Praised For Flexibility On Soviet Talk to make clear they want a conference "which will genuinely understand the causes of our problems."

The Senator said Dulles' answer to questions in the Senate speech portended "a less rigid line in thinking than was supposed."

It was a good follow-through in the President's letter to Bulganin," he added, "and shows that Dulles is a more flexible leader than we have given him credit for."

Manafel said it is the general view in Congress that there should be no summit meeting until there is a complete understanding of the level that something could be accomplished at that level.

The Senate also praised Dulles for his flexibility in the handling of the East-West problems.

But, he said, many are unhappy to know that the President has not been open to negotiations on lower levels, up to and including the foreign minister, if there is an ultimatum to that point.

Manafel said that the President's trade program and reciprocal trade extension legislation.
