THE SEARCH FOR SANITY
 James Reston, of the New York Times, felt moved in his column Wednesday, to compliment the United Nations upon its assistance in the Congo. He described how, through its existence and its agency and its astute and astounding secretary-general, it was able to provide the United States and Russia with a formula for avoiding the direct challenge by force to each other in Africa they might never have been able to avoid by themselves. He described how the United Nations, in its right long debate on the Congo situation, "was devising an instrument of authority, no matter how weak, which could bring the sanity into an essentially chaotic situation."
 His tributes to Secretary General
 Dag Hammarskjöld said this:
 "That he has exercised these powers with such skill as to win the respect, if not the affection, of the contending states is one reason why the U.N. is now a refuge for common sense in a satanic world."
 As if to underline a satanic conclusion that in a silly, chaotic and satanic world, the United Nations was becoming unique because it still provided common sense and sanity, the United States Senate, in the same House session, was using to write his piece, was demonstrating just how hard it is to find common sense and sanity elsewhere.
 As against the sane acceptance, and by the United Nations, of the proposition that was good action to keep the world's big powers from making a grab for Africa, there was being advanced, in the United States Senate, the exactly opposite idea, which was that it would be folly to guarantee any area of the world immune from such conflict. In the Senate, the effort was under way to postpone ratification of the Antarctic Treaty. And the core of the argument being used against the treaty was that, since it forbade all powers to undertake national exploration of Antarctica, it therefore was a condescending equality to Russia in Antarctica.
 It would be, and perhaps will be similar logic to argue that we should not agree with Russia that neither of us should claim nation-alistic title to the moon because, in such an agreement, we were conceding equality to the moon to Russia.
 If, by such logic, as has been expressed by Senator Dodd and others in the Senate, we must fight for Antarctica, and ought to fight for the far-off moon, it would seem that we are making a grave mistake not to be fighting for the populated, resource-rich Congo, and that what Columbia Trevelyan said in the United States Senate in reacting to us from that prospect is really an intransigent refusal of the American destiny. For when neither we nor Russia go into the Congo with armed forces of our own, we are conceding equality to the Congo to Russia, are we not?
 Well, as Reston obviously thinks, sanity and common sense are hard to find these days. And where do you find it? Is it in peace for the Congo, or in war for Antarctica?

Just How "Remote"?
 If so many strange and almost unbelievable things had not already happened in the realm of diplomacy this year, one would join with President Eisenhower in refuting the possibility of another meeting between Khrushchev and Eisenhower as something "too remote" that it could not yet receive Eisenhower's serious consideration.
 Yet this is already a year which has seen the course of personal diplomacy upset by the surprise of the U.S. incident, and then by the unbelievable, if temporary, defeat of a Russian flight as a legiti-

Later on, he was asked whether if Khrushchev did come to the United Nations, he, Eisenhower, would see any advantage in having him down here for a talk.
 He gave a meeting in New York City. "Well, frankly," the President responded, "I have considered the possibility of Khrushchev's coming down here. If he were to come down here, I would of course invite him to come down if he so chose. But I haven't given it the kind of consideration that would allow me to make a decision at this time." This stands in contrast, of course, with the attitude of the President really have said. He might have said that he could conceive of no circumstance in which a meeting with Khrushchev would be either useful or tolerable. He might have said that Khrushchev's recent conduct had proved the impossibility of trying to deal with him about anything. He might have slammed his door, angrily.
 The fact that he did not has to be taken along with the fact that Khrushchev, for some compulsive reason of his own, is once more itching with the idea of personal diplomacy, considering journeys to places where he is not really wanted. It is a matter of the fact that he is coming to the United Nations, a meeting with Eisenhower, the man he would not be going to meet again, would not be ruled out.
 All such possibilities are so remote as to be almost fantastic. But there is, in the Eisenhower stance, one slightly healthy sign. It may be that Eisenhower has stopped believing in Khrushchev's sincerity.
 Khrushchev got mad at Eisenhower. If such an analysis makes sense, it is that Khrushchev has something like a bark fence quarrel, that is what they are like, in

Compliment To A Sir Some years ago we ventured to write an editorial advising the natural, graceful stride of a lady who walked Main St. like a queen.
 While we carried out our duty, the subject we ventured the opinion that the lady in question was not wearing a dress. We made that comment in the form of a further compliment to her. In subsequent days we were several times forced to be polite and admit to various ladies who made to us the delicate confession that they knew we had been wrong about them that, yes, they were right it was their mattress. We were not, however, never read the editorial. Or perhaps she was wearing a girdle.
 That experience has made us calculate certain risks in fre comment on the passing scene, and we would like to have it firmly understood in advance that, this time, we had no subsequent involvements or confidences of a semi-romantic nature. This is strictly objective comment, and any manly cheta it may puff up will get nowhere trying to check with us.
 And, again, what we admire is freedom and ease of movement.
 This time, as now and then, some distinguished Manchestersite male wears Main St. as though he owned it.
 There is no secret about his attitude. It is a short and shorts feeling, as contrasted to all the regional attitudes which merely proclaim servitude to Main St.'s toll and trouble. His is the ease of a nation and holiday. But what one senses, as one watches him, is that only his informal dress, with its comfortable, its coziness, its easiness, takes the poor human male out of countless centuries of social evolution and makes him once again the rather noble animal he was before women learned to sew. Not all noble, perhaps. There may be a touch of the savage lurking in his eye, as it too latches the freedom of being on Main St., irresponsible and unaccounted for. But the main stance is one of greater po-lace and straightness than he would exhibit in a conventional suit, or even in slacks; he is at once assured and alert; on the mark for a sudden sprint; this man has physical well-being in the way of his stride, that, although he is toward middle age, one could draw an uninterrupted straight line from chin to toe. He could, we bet, even hold his breath while you did it.
 Our compliments, Mr. No compliments will be necessary. You are the one.

 you going to put them in?"

"I want that woman arrested.
 Just because I eat her to the last jar of pickled relish, she demanded much better than my shopping cart."

 James Reston, of the New York
 Times, felt moved in his column
 Wednesday, to compliment the United Nations upon its assistance
 in the Congo. He described how,
 astute and astounding secretary-
 general, it was able to provide the United States and Russia with a
 challenge by force to each other
 been able to avoid by themselves. He described how the United Nations,
 in its right long debate on the Congo situation, "was devising an instrument of authority, no matter
 sanity into an essentially chaotic
 situation."
 His tributes to Secretary General
 Dag Hammarskjöld said this:
 "That he has exercised these
 the contending states is one reason why the U.N. is now a refuge for
 common sense in a satanic world."
 As if to underline a satanic conclusion that in a silly, chaotic and
 still provided common sense and
 sanity, the United States Senate,

2 Saved, 2 Drowned In Boating Accident

The girls were unable to stay afloat. They were picked up by a passing vessel captained by Robert Bendick, 26, of the Essex. The vessel was nearby and it was raining at the time.
The Grants arrived in Connecticut for a visit two days ago.
Bendick, a television producer, said he was returning from Cape Cod with his wife and a party of friends on a 30-foot power motorboat. The boat, owned by TV star Garry Moore.
Bendick said he heard cries just before dark last night and at first he thought it was because they were being made by sea gulls.
He said he circled the area, which was full of rocks and small islands. He saw two girls. Only the crew of their boat was above water, Bendick said.
Bendick said the girls could not have lasted much longer.
The girls were taken aboard the Redfern and taken through the Stamford harbor where they were transferred to a police launch.

It's a Borrower's Market
So Shop Wisely for Terms
If you've suspected lately that the bankers' words have gone bad because in one and the same breath it begs you to save and borrow, relax.
If it were not for savers there would be fewer houses — 65 cents out of your savings bank dollar goes into home building and the mortgagee of saving and loan associations money goes into mortgage investments. If there were not savers, it would be impossible for the mortgagee to finance the output of all we consume.
But if credit were all we readily available, we might not be able to consume as much as we are now. Young families, 25-35 years of age, 75 per cent of you have some installment debt. In the 35-45 age group 67 per cent of you are indebted. After 45 years of age the indebtedness of you is 55 per cent. At 65 and over you are indebted in installment buying.
Because credit is so much a part of our lives, it is important that you know how to use it. Are you aware that there are growing concerns to lenders? Are you aware that where you borrow is growing more important to lenders? Are you aware that there is a credit competition for your credit dollars as your savings fall?
The big contest for your borrowing is being conducted by commercial banks, consumer credit companies and retailers.
Growing faster than the expansion of consumer credit is the number of sources you may tap for a loan. An observation at the American Bankers Association's National Conference noted that installment credit purchases may be nearing a temporary peak and you may understand why the fight for your patronage is so hot.
Carl A. Blinn, ARA vice president, said that the reason for the growing concern on such things as mortgages, automobiles and credit cards is that new totals more than $172 billion, a 140 per cent increase in the total while personal income, after taxes, has risen but 61 per cent in the same period.
Personal debt has been climbing more than twice as fast as possible income, he says.
Does this mean that we are borrowing too freely? Are we borrowing what we can't pay? Are we borrowing what we can't afford to pay?
The National Consumer Policy Council, which has studied income-to-debt ratio, thinks you record of delinquent payments, running considerably below 3 per cent at both banks and finance companies, shows that you are handling debt well.
On respect appears worrisome. The initial concept of consumer lending was not to keep a family in constant debt. The revolving credit plans of both banks and retail stores do that.
In periods of high employment this probably won't create the problems which might arise if the type of credit were to be used when a family's current income is reduced by illness, unemployment or other difficulties.
But the way you borrow won't create future hardships. Borrow carefully, you can avoid about using one institution as another. Get your credit terms — how much you pay for the funds you borrow and the length of time allotted to repay. Choose wisely among the banks who are eager for your debt dollars.
Small Gas Leak Said Not Serious
Officials of the Hartford Gas Co. blamed the leak and resulting fire on N. School St. last night as a minor occurrence, with no cause for alarm.
They said a small leak developed in the main near a culvert, the gas came to the surface and somehow became ignited.
Eighty District firemen were called to stand by in case of trouble. A company official said such leaks are more or less common and, because the main is not located more than three feet below ground, there is no danger of gas seeping into the main.

Hunting Law Again Tabled

The proposal to legalize hunting in Manchester is once again in the hands of the town council and chief of police, who will work out a new approach intended to allow the sport on leased land only.
The Director Theodore Powell recommended the approach this week. Powell said that Mayor Eugene T. McNamara had last winter. Powell said it is probably the only way of allowing hunting that would have a chance of being favorably received in Manchester.
In a number of public hearings, townspeople have protested allowing the discharge of firearms. The ordinance passed during the World War I still prohibits in town on penalty of a $20 fine for each offense. However, the ordinance has been ignored over the years. Hunting continued, and rifle clubs are in operation.
The move to legalize the sport, started this year by sportsman Wilbur Little, 105 Spencer St., has been opposed by townspeople who either oppose hunting outright or else what they have called irresponsible gunplay. At public hearings, the Board heard stories of youngsters firing shotguns near residences, and shooting from cars.
Powell said today that the Board must consider Little's proposal from the point of view of protecting townspeople. His recommendation is that the Board should consider Little's proposal at a public hearing at 9:15 a.m. at the Dillon Funeral Home, 53 Main St., Hartford.
The funeral will be held Saturday at 9:15 a.m. at the Dillon Funeral Home, 53 Main St., Hartford. Friends may call at the funeral home tonight from 7 to 9 o'clock.

Sen. Byrd to Fight Forand Health Bill

"We ought to have ample time for a thorough study of all these factors before we take action," he added.
Yesterday, the Senate group tentatively struck from the House bill a section which would have placed an estimated 150,000 physicians in violation of the old age insurance, disability and survivors coverage of social security.
Officials of the American Medical Assn. have opposed including their members under social security although some state medical societies have voted for it.
Survivors include his wife, Mrs. Mary M. Byrd, of Boston. The move to legalize the sport, started this year by sportsman Wilbur Little, 105 Spencer St., has been opposed by townspeople who either oppose hunting outright or else what they have called irresponsible gunplay. At public hearings, the Board heard stories of youngsters firing shotguns near residences, and shooting from cars.

Chief to Attend Ribicoff Confab Police Chief James Reardon will attend the Governor's conference in Hartford tomorrow on all phases of highway safety and enforcement of traffic laws.
Gov. Abraham Ribicoff recently called the conference of local officials and police officers to discuss the mounting traffic death toll on roads not patrolled by the State Police.
The Governor, along with State Police Commissioner Leo Mulvey, Chief Judge James J. Cullen, and Bernard J. Ackerman, chairman of the State Safety Commission, will address the group.
Nothing on N.H.I.T.A. United Nations, N.Y., Aug. 11 (AP)—The Soviet U.N. delegation said today it has no word whether Premier Khrushchev is coming here for the U.N. general assembly that begins Sept. 29. "The Soviet Government has not named its assembly delegate," Press Officer Mikhail Polotski said.

Bolton Firemen-Citizens Vote $17,500 for Pumper

Bolton firemen put on "behind" the elementary school. Mrs. John Chapin of South Rd. is well child chairman for the PTA and would be called by those interested in appointments for their children, or in obtaining more information.
Manchester Evening Herald Bolton correspondent, Mrs. Louis C. Dimock Jr., telephone BR-6822.
The 34 people at the special town meeting at the Community Hall, not more than half a dozen were unaffiliated with the fire department. In the 15-minute session, some questions were answered about the truck the department proposes to buy, but the transfer of funds from the reserve fund was voted in less than a minute with no discussion. There were no votes against the proposal.
Robert Gorton asked how the figure of $17,500 was reached. Paul Managia, chairman of the fire commissioners, explained that average of $17,500 is the estimate of $17,500 to be made.
Vicent Kreskosi, one-time commissioner and a fireman, asked why the town needed a new truck. Raymond E. Cooper, asked if the new equipment had been purchased merely because of the age of the present pumper, if the old truck was to be traded, and if the new truck would provide more adequate protection for the firemen. The new truck will have a more powerful motor and pump, as well as more powerful lights and sirens. The addition of this piece of equipment will enable the department to take some of the load of the present smaller pump, making it available for other fire departments. It will also be retained as an emergency or utility truck.
A comment on the value of the present truck after the meeting, Francis Strong, chairman of the fire department, pointed out that in the new capacity the new truck will relieve the town of complete dependence on mutual aid from other towns. It is necessary to pump water over a considerable distance. The new truck, where a steady, certain supply of water is not available, Street 20, this is a distinct gain in fire protection.
The new truck was made by the U.S. Government was made at the time of the meeting.

The addition to the plant, which will provide an extra 50 square feet, is the second expansion of the business since it was founded in 1951. The first addition was constructed in 1957.
Klock also said that new equipment will be necessary because of the enlargement of the plant. She was on her way to Manchester Memorial Hospital to visit her husband who had been operated on for a heart condition only yesterday. The tragedy is compounded by the fact that if Tucker were completely a foot or so further to the left he would have missed the car completely.
Tucker is a sheetmetal worker at Pratt and Whitney and has been on strike. It is conjectured that he may have been on his way to the East Hartford plant to register for work at the time of the accident.
He is married and has a son and daughter, both of whom are married.

Native Apple Season Begins

By WILHELM SMITH
Manchester, Conn. — The season for native apples is beginning. The first of the native apples are appearing. The outlook in Connecticut this fall is for a somewhat smaller crop than last year's, but of high quality.
There is a gap of several weeks between the last apple in the spring and the new early crop. So if your family hunger for fresh apple pie and home-made apple sauce, now you can make them. The names of the early apples are:

Klock Co. Gets Permit to Build

The need to expand assembly operations and to enlarge quality control and research and development facilities of the plant has prompted the 4-year-old Klock Co. to construct a $15,800 addition to its building.
A building permit for the work was issued today by Building Inspector Thomas C. Monahan. Specific details of the building are: a two-story building, one on the southeast end and the other on the east end. The building will be used for research and development.
