"That's Show Biz"

By Phineas Fiske

Over the fields and through the woods there is a place called Storrs, and the University of Connecticut, and as wonderfully varied a program of entertainments as you are likely to find.

Before its audience was quite over the pleasure of seeing "Oh Dad, Poor Dad, Mama's Hung You in the Closet and I'm Feelin' So Sad," the Department of the Theater announced that its students would perform Isen's seldom produced "John Gabriel Borkman," beginning Tuesday.

And in short order the university also offered up a vocal recital by mezzo-soprano Anne Gillard, and a visit by the Oberlin-Berchon Children's Choir (which has attracted full houses during two previous visits at the University).

The play "John Gabriel Borkman" is rarely staged, we're told, because the sets are ambitious and difficult. Students being what they are, they have overcome this problem by designing a symbolic set. The design was executed by Douglas Ridgeway, a junior majoring in fine arts and a resident of South Coventry.

The play has a theme reminiscent of "Oh Dad." It is about the attempts of two women to control the destiny of a young man—and the death of love in the young man's soul.

The young man of the title is played by James Hummert of Danbury. The two women, Borkman's mother and aunt, are played respectively by Carol Chubbowski of Ansonia and Jean Wegel of Simsbury.

"Borkman," which is directed by Carol Swafford, a UConn graduate student, is one of two full-length student productions to be presented by the Department staff. The play runs Tuesday through Saturday at the university's Fine Arts Center Studio.

She will appear Monday at 8:15 p.m. at the Von der Muehlen Recital Hall, accompanied by pianist Sarah Ramsey. The 21-year-old Miss Gillard will sing selections by Gluck, Sartorio, Handel, Shumann, Britten, Mozart and Johann Sebastian Bach.

At the Bushnell the Clebanoff Strings is an ensemble of 20 musicians which has turned out 14 record albums, including both popular and classical works.

The orchestra includes 15 bowed string instruments, piano, accordion, percussion and harp. It falls between the traditional small chamber ensemble and a symphony orchestra.

The Clebanoff Strings will perform at the Bushnell Monday at 8:15 p.m. in a Civic Music Association concert.

The Hartford Symphony Orchestra, under the baton of Arthur Winograd, will present its second subscription concert at 8:15 Wednesday. Works planned are by Haydn, Dvorak and Strauss. Lois Marshall is guest soloist. Tickets are available at the box office.

A full-length color travel movie called "Travels East and West" will be shown Friday and Saturday nights at 8:15 and Sunday at 3:30 p.m. (Nov. 20 through 22) by Thayer Soule, who will narrate. The movie was filmed within 10 miles of the actual Lewis and Clark route from Mississippi to the Pacific.

Elsewhere in a review of the Little Theater of Manchester's fall production, "Sisters of New York," tickets are available at the door for two more performances, tonight and tomorrow night at 8:30 at the High School's Bailey Auditorium.

Not too far away, East Hartford's Cie and Curtin group is presenting "Tender Trap" at 19.

Children's Choir, which performs at Jopansen Auditorium at 8:15 p.m. on Wednesday.

The 24-voice choir has appeared here in 1958 and 1962, and the response both times was tremendous. All the chorists are under 17—and as young as seven.

Founded 15 years ago, the choir has toured the United States eight times since 1954. During those years it has appeared at Carnegie Hall, the New York City's Town Hall, appeared at Disneyland, and made nine major television appearances besides five on the Ed Sullivan show.

Fire Brigade Quells Blaze

Quick action by 55 members of the Loyall and Fonda Fire Brigade is credited with averting what may have been a serious fire in the plant's finishing department, shortly after 3 p.m. yesterday.

The employees took only minutes to extinguish a fire in the east wing of the Parker St. building's ventilating system, and 8th District firemen, with bucket hoses, needed only to apply water on some smoldering wooden beams.

The fire, which company officials believe started in a small motor, located over a calendar stock, damaged some motors, fans and louvers on the roof of the building, plus some finished paper stock and chemicals.

Most of the latter damage was caused by water directed by the company's sprinkler system.

After a check-out of switches and wiring, the Parker St. building was opened within three and a half hours of the fire.

The monetary extent of the damage will not be known until an insurance company adjuster has completed an inspection.

Boy Hurt, Runs Into Car's Path

Thomas B. Haugh, 10-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel A. Haugh Jr., of 71 Garden St., is reported in fair condition at Manchester Memorial Hospital with multiple head and body cuts and bruises he received when he ran into a moving car at about 3 p. m. yesterday on Elm St.

Police said that the child, on his way to a Cub Scout meeting, darted from between two cars in a line of traffic on Elm St. near Center St., and into the path of a car driven by The Hag, a young man, who was thrown about 10 feet into the air and into an embankment. He was taken to the hospital via ambulance.

Police have not brought any charges against the motorist. At 9:35 p. m. yesterday, the vacant parked car of Carol E. Helm of South Windsor rolled down Center St., just east of Henderson Rd., rammed a utility pole. She was given a verbal warning for not using the hand brake on the car. The vehicle had minor damage and was driven away, police said.

Happyen Case Put Off Again

Francis Happyen's trial for evasion of a bridge toll, scheduled for this morning in East Hartford Circuit Court 12, was postponed to next Friday, after Judge Douglas Wright denied a defense motion for filing a writ.

Atty. James Egan, defense counsel, was detained in Hartford Superior Court, and had asked permission to file the writ, which would have stipulated that Happyen, on Oct. 7, had refused to pay a 25-cent toll on the Charter Oak Bridge, and which would have contained the right of the highway commissioner and/or the Bridge Authority to sue.

Judge Wright, in refusing to grant the motion, said "I am sick and tired of this annoyance," and requested court officials to inform Atty. Egan to return to court on Friday. Egan's defense counsel had telephoned his instructions on Nov. 2 when Happyen pleaded not guilty to this morning. Today's motion was also a telephoned request.

Happyen, 53, of 9 Hazel St., had been arrested by a state trooper, after having been notified upon State Police Commissioner Lou Mulcahy of the (Happyen) case, to insure payment of the bridge toll.

The self-styled "champion of the people's rights" claims that the Charter Oak Bridge tolls are being collected illegally, and has said that he will fight the case all the way to the U. S. Supreme Court, if necessary."

Close To The People?

It is no accident whatsoever that with the Republican party in trouble it should be its governors who come forward to the rescue.

They have served and rescued their party before.

They are always, somehow, better equipped to serve their party than their office-holding counterparts at Washington, the Republican members of the House and Senate.

They seem to stand closer to the people.

Perhaps they have to stand closer to the people in order to get elected.

They don't have to stand under the propaganda umbrella set up by the Republican National Committee, or by the party campaign committees in the Congress. They have to make their own issue, and find their own ways of selling them to their own people.

All this could be, in retrospect, an explanation of why, at the San Francisco convention, the Republican governors were in the mainstay section.

They could know, from their own experience with the electorate, what was coming. They would reject, from their own experience in political life, from their own development of political practices and convictions, the far-out directions of the path being taken by the temporary helmsman of their party.

Any review of the political history of the eight years of the Eisenhower presidency—being nurtured and budded and finally flowered out by the front and intelligent attention of the Republican governors of the time. They were the ones who captured the Republican National Convention in Chicago away from the apparatus of the National Committee, away from the party leaders in Congress, and who succeeded in nominating the moderate Dwight D. Eisenhower, the middle-roader, on a moderate party platform. Without the quiet meetings of the Republican governors which laid down the strategy and consolidated the principles for the big move at Chicago, the eight years of which Republicans should be most proud might never have come to pass.

If, in the present situation, it is reassuring to have the Republican governors conferring together, that is a mixture of memory of what they have been able to do for their party in the past and the present realization that any Republican who gets elected governor in these times must know a little bit about politics.

Sanity Is Always Welcome

Reports have varied, from day to day, and from source to source, on the progress of the Russian-Chinese relationship in the wake of the fall of Khrushchev.

Perhaps the latest public guess, that the Chinese Communists have succeeded in easing their Russian brothers away from the atmosphere and gestures of open rift, is as reliable as anything. Perhaps the showdown which had been scheduled in the Communist world is now to be postponed; perhaps, instead of shouting at each other across a continental chasm, the Russians and Chinese leaders are to enter a phase of cold arm's length statements to one another.

If so, this is civilized, and it is important.

None but the utter fools in the West—we do, of course, have such—has ever rejoiced over the spectacle of the Chinese and the Russians really going for each other's throats.

It is important for their own realism and their own sanity and their own possible control of their own policies that the Russians and the Chinese should admit to themselves and to each other that they have massive and historic differences and challenges existing between them.

This they have now obviously done. Having done this, it is equally important that they maintain good relations with the two extremes open to them.

One extreme—the euphoric one—would assume that these massive historic and geopolitical challenges between themselves can be wiped out and made to disappear by a little Polyaninist press agency. No kissing on both cheeks, no comradely embrace, wipes out so much continuity of border between two lusty giants, so much inevitable friction on the part of each to reach for points of influence in the uncommitted regions of the world. The tension between Russia and China, in their positions, and in their stage of development, is just as inevitable as the tension which has been the story of the life Russia and the United States have been forced to lead in the post-war world.

The other extreme—the dismal one—would conclude that, once Russia and China have found themselves in such a position of inevitable rivalry, tension and conflict, there can be nothing for it but a descent into a direct test of strength in which one attempts to exterminate the other or at least bring the other into a total subjection.

Obviously, it is in the interest of both Russia and China to realize frankly the nature of their collision and rivalry and conflict, and then to decide not to try to kill each other over it, but to try and live with it and sublimate it until perhaps, some day, the geopolitics of their mutual situation will dissolve the tension and clash between them.

This is not only a course of behavior in the interest of both Russia and China. It is just as important to the rest of the world as it is to them.

War is no longer a spectator sport. The United States and the American way of life could no more survive a war to the death between Russia and China than they could survive a war to the death between Russia and the United States. Nuclear war anywhere is war for everybody everywhere. This earth is too small for it.

Human minds, therefore, even government minds, have to become too big for it. This includes not merely American minds, which we would like to think closest to sanity, and not merely Russian minds, for whom we have perhaps some slight amount of hope, but also Chinese minds, to whom we are not likely to volunteer much advance credit for civilized thinking.

Even that coexistence which seems most unlikely in prospect and most unappealing in nature has to be made policy. If there is to be any policy higher than madness.

Any indication that Russia and China are learning how to be sane about their heritable position of challenge to one another is welcome.

Hamden Joins Ranks Of Cities

Hamden will be Connecticut's newest city. Voters made this decision Tuesday when they approved a strong mayor and council form of government to 3,800 in opposition of the Board of Selectmen after 178 years.

The vote was 7,506 in favor of a city form of government to 3,800 in opposition.

Hamden has been destined for city status for many years. With an estimated population crowding 45,000, the Board of Selectmen and the Representative Town Meeting were unworkable. Hamden is growing and will continue to grow. Its population increased from 29,715 to 41,056 between the 1950 and 1960 Federal census counts.

The will of the people must now be implemented before Hamden can join West Haven and Milford, other areas which have shed town formats of municipal government for a city operation. The effective date is January, 1966, with official incorporation on Jan. 1, 1967.

The future Hamden will be governed by an elected mayor and 12 councilmen. How strong the mayor will be depends on the strength of the men chosen for this highest office. The type of mayor described in a charter does not guarantee a strong mayor in the true sense of the adjective.

Hamden has taken the big step it has needed. It has bigger steps ahead in the selection of men who will ensure efficient and dedicated service while giving proper attention to the young city's present and future requirements.

The Missing Voice

By Phineas Kise

When the new board of directors convened Tuesday, it sat for the first time in six years. It was not Theodore Powell. This reporter felt he was the poorer for it.

Watching and listening to Ted Powell at board meetings through the past few months has not been an unalloyed pleasure. Powell has frequently been the center of controversy, and controversy is not always easy to take. But when controversy is based on valid issues and not false premises, its participants are the better for the experience.

For a reporter, writing about controversy as it happens is like skating on thin ice. Ted Powell's beliefs came highly charged with emotion; the effort to write dispassionately of them became that much more difficult.

Speaks for Board

The article appearing in The Herald on Nov. 10 titled "Board of Education Votes to Allow Secret Meetings" is irresponsible and is damaging to the Bolton Board of Education and to the educational system they represent. It does not accurately and fairly reflect the action of the board on establishment of policy on committee meetings. It leaves an erroneous impression in the minds of readers that the board is engaged in "secretly" suggesting underhandness and even dishonesty in its actions. It is a disgrace that the public will be denied the privilege of their "right to know."

The Bolton Board of Education has, and will continue to operate in an honest and straightforward manner in bringing about the best educational system by employing the most intelligent approach to economy and adhering rigidly to state and local laws. We have the confidence of our town and are justifiably proud of our healthy, growing educational system.

Editor's Note: The future conduct of the board under its new rule, will be the ultimate factor determining the public's judgment.

Sanity Is Always Welcome

Reports have varied, from day to day, and from source to source, on the progress of the Russian-Chinese relationship in the wake of the fall of Khrushchev.

Perhaps the latest public guess, that the Chinese Communists have succeeded in easing their Russian brothers away from the atmosphere and gestures of open rift, is as reliable as anything. Perhaps the showdown which had been scheduled in the Communist world is now to be postponed; perhaps, instead of shouting at each other across a continental chasm, the Russians and Chinese leaders are to enter a phase of cold arm's length statements to one another.

If so, this is civilized, and it is important.

None but the utter fools in the West—we do, of course, have such—has ever rejoiced over the spectacle of the Chinese and the Russians really going for each other's throats.

It is important for their own realism and their own sanity and their own possible control of their own policies that the Russians and the Chinese should admit to themselves and to each other that they have massive and historic differences and challenges existing between them.

This they have now obviously done. Having done this, it is equally important that they maintain good relations with the two extremes open to them.

One extreme—the euphoric one—would assume that these massive historic and geopolitical challenges between themselves can be wiped out and made to disappear by a little Polyaninist press agency. No kissing on both cheeks, no comradely embrace, wipes out so much continuity of border between two lusty giants, so much inevitable friction on the part of each to reach for points of influence in the uncommitted regions of the world. The tension between Russia and China, in their positions, and in their stage of development, is just as inevitable as the tension which has been the story of the life Russia and the United States have been forced to lead in the post-war world.

The other extreme—the dismal one—would conclude that, once Russia and China have found themselves in such a position of inevitable rivalry, tension and conflict, there can be nothing for it but a descent into a direct test of strength in which one attempts to exterminate the other or at least bring the other into a total subjection.

Obviously, it is in the interest of both Russia and China to realize frankly the nature of their collision and rivalry and conflict, and then to decide not to try to kill each other over it, but to try and live with it and sublimate it until perhaps, some day, the geopolitics of their mutual situation will dissolve the tension and clash between them.

This is not only a course of behavior in the interest of both Russia and China. It is just as important to the rest of the world as it is to them.

War is no longer a spectator sport. The United States and the American way of life could no more survive a war to the death between Russia and China than they could survive a war to the death between Russia and the United States. Nuclear war anywhere is war for everybody everywhere. This earth is too small for it.

Human minds, therefore, even government minds, have to become too big for it. This includes not merely American minds, which we would like to think closest to sanity, and not merely Russian minds, for whom we have perhaps some slight amount of hope, but also Chinese minds, to whom we are not likely to volunteer much advance credit for civilized thinking.

Even that coexistence which seems most unlikely in prospect and most unappealing in nature has to be made policy. If there is to be any policy higher than madness.

Any indication that Russia and China are learning how to be sane about their heritable position of challenge to one another is welcome.

Hamden Joins Ranks Of Cities

Hamden will be Connecticut's newest city. Voters made this decision Tuesday when they approved a strong mayor and council form of government to 3,800 in opposition of the Board of Selectmen after 178 years.

The vote was 7,506 in favor of a city form of government to 3,800 in opposition.

Hamden has been destined for city status for many years. With an estimated population crowding 45,000, the Board of Selectmen and the Representative Town Meeting were unworkable. Hamden is growing and will continue to grow. Its population increased from 29,715 to 41,056 between the 1950 and 1960 Federal census counts.

The will of the people must now be implemented before Hamden can join West Haven and Milford, other areas which have shed town formats of municipal government for a city operation. The effective date is January, 1966, with official incorporation on Jan. 1, 1967.

The future Hamden will be governed by an elected mayor and 12 councilmen. How strong the mayor will be depends on the strength of the men chosen for this highest office. The type of mayor described in a charter does not guarantee a strong mayor in the true sense of the adjective.

Hamden has taken the big step it has needed. It has bigger steps ahead in the selection of men who will ensure efficient and dedicated service while giving proper attention to the young city's present and future requirements.

The Missing Voice

By Phineas Kise

When the new board of directors convened Tuesday, it sat for the first time in six years. It was not Theodore Powell. This reporter felt he was the poorer for it.

Watching and listening to Ted Powell at board meetings through the past few months has not been an unalloyed pleasure. Powell has frequently been the center of controversy, and controversy is not always easy to take. But when controversy is based on valid issues and not false premises, its participants are the better for the experience.

For a reporter, writing about controversy as it happens is like skating on thin ice. Ted Powell's beliefs came highly charged with emotion; the effort to write dispassionately of them became that much more difficult.

Speaks for Board

The article appearing in The Herald on Nov. 10 titled "Board of Education Votes to Allow Secret Meetings" is irresponsible and is damaging to the Bolton Board of Education and to the educational system they represent. It does not accurately and fairly reflect the action of the board on establishment of policy on committee meetings. It leaves an erroneous impression in the minds of readers that the board is engaged in "secretly" suggesting underhandness and even dishonesty in its actions. It is a disgrace that the public will be denied the privilege of their "right to know."

The Bolton Board of Education has, and will continue to operate in an honest and straightforward manner in bringing about the best educational system by employing the most intelligent approach to economy and adhering rigidly to state and local laws. We have the confidence of our town and are justifiably proud of our healthy, growing educational system.

Editor's Note: The future conduct of the board under its new rule, will be the ultimate factor determining the public's judgment.

LTM Offers Tough Work

By PHINEAS FISKE The Little Theater of Manchester, unlike many amateur theatrical groups, never shrank from performing shows of dramatic or historic importance just because they were difficult.

The group has instead worked diligently to produce shows of more than conventional interest, because it believes those shows deserve to be more than just memories.

To this admirable end the Little Theater this week is producing a work by one of the original 19th Century melodramatists, "The Streets of New York" by Dion Boucicault.

And it really is melodrama, from the mustache-twirling villain to the legions of the noble poor who finally vanquish evil.

The play is undoubtedly a difficult one for it is acted in a formal and stylized fashion that requires much of actors to keep it moving.

That the Little Theater has packed so much entertainment into so demanding a medium is much to its—and director Ernie Cirillo's—credit.

The essence of goodness is noble young Mark Livingstone, played by LTM member Jay Hersey. His melodious voice is particularly effective in his emotion-packed scenes.

Ann Russell plays Lucy Fairweather, Livingstone's true and self-sacrificing love, with the proper dewy freshness and expressively mobile features.

Lucy's mother is portrayed by Toni Fogarty, another newcomer to the group who has taken a major part for her first role and has filled it admirably.

Lucy's father is played by Paul Fairweather, who sadly passes away early in the play (necessarily if there is to be any plot, since it is his money evil Bloodgood escapes with her, as set by Fred Blum).

DRER IN PLAYPEN

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (AP)—The Fred Ledig family found the body of their 10-year-old son, who was killed by a car, in a playpen in the living room as a nursery for the Standard first two weeks of life.

Nine months old, the deer was found in the playpen, but she's at the back door each morning to greet the family.

The family has some trouble with dogs chasing the deer, but in which the major nations, fleets—those of Japan, Russia, the Netherlands and Norway—could catch only four-fifths of the then-permissible quota.

Views Split on Plan For Region Land Use

None of the about 50 persons at last night's public hearing on the proposed regional plan of development either approved or rejected the general concept of the plan.

From questions and comments made during the hearing, it appeared that Manchester and Andover gave the plan the most support; South Windsor, the least.

Many townspeople present, presumably representing the 12 towns of the Capitol region east of the Connecticut River, expressed fears that the plan, approved by the Capitol Region Planning Agency (CRPA) might be imposed on all of the towns by some exterior force. This fear was always during the meeting.

Before the floor was opened to comments and questions, Chairman Edward Sorant of Bloomfield turned the program over to Robert Chase, regional planner of the agency. He briefly described the project of the towns under the linear plan around the year 2000. Then, he said the most serious problem would be a saturation point and would have no vacant land left for development.

The linear plan is the alternative selected from five by a majority of the region towns as the most likely to work in general. It provides for a high density of development in the Connecticut Valley and a lower one east and west of the valley. Although, within the area east and west of the valley, a linear development is planned, the plan is designed to accommodate an eventual doubling of population.

Manchester: A two-fold increase in population and a three-fold increase in jobs, especially in the central business district and the planned northwest industrial site. Industry would increase by over 1,200; the continuation of the economic type of the town as dormitory, meaning that for every eight residents employed anywhere there would be two jobs in town; open spaces would increase about 500 acres; the tax rate would decrease from 22 per cent above the 1960 regional average to slightly below it.

Andover: A seven-fold increase in population and a 17-fold increase in jobs; economic type would go from rural to dormitory; increase in open spaces would be 1,000 acres.

Bolton: Rural to dormitory; increase in population would be 100 per cent; tax rate would decrease from 15 per cent above the regional average to 10 per cent below it.

Bolton: Rural to dormitory; increase in population would be 100 per cent; tax rate would decrease from 15 per cent above the regional average to 10 per cent below it.

Bolton: Rural to dormitory; increase in population would be 100 per cent; tax rate would decrease from 15 per cent above the regional average to 10 per cent below it.

Rockville-Vernon Pearl Asks Bickering End In City Road Rebate Split

An appeal to the "bridge war" between the city and the district was issued today by Pearl Seligman Samuel, mayor of Pearl. His comments were made regarding a split between Pearl and Mayor Robert Flaherty Jr. over a $400,000 rebate which the mayor insists is due the city and Pearl insists should be paid.

The Lake Street School will sponsor a Book Fair at the school auditorium Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday of next week.

The hours of the fair, whose proceeds will go to the school to support the implementation of the city taxpayers; the town of Pearl is financed by town taxes which are paid by both district and city residents.

Brown repeated several times in the course of the hearing that the city should not be asked to pay for the rebate. He said that the city should be asked to pay for the rebate. He said that the city should be asked to pay for the rebate.

At a recent meeting, selections were split over the rebate he said. Seligman Robert W. Deming favors the rebate to be paid by the city. He said that the city should be asked to pay for the rebate. He said that the city should be asked to pay for the rebate.

The city council, at the suggestion of Mayor Flaherty, voted to consider the $400,000 as a payment due and would consider the rebate in setting a tax rate. The mayor explained that if the funds are not received, the city would enter into consolidation in July with a $400,000 deficit which would then become a town-wide debt.

Yesterday, Pearl terminated this move "irresponsibly."

"It is obvious that the city administration is not entitled to be paid twice in one year," Pearl said.

Today, the mayor said, "I think Stan has forgotten he was elected first selector of the town government and represent both city and rural taxpayers."

Flaherty charged that Pearl is "unfamiliar" with previous actions regarding the rebate. Pearl said today, in answer to the charge, "It is my hope to end this civil war. The important thing is cooperation and progress not the substance of the battles of four years ago."

Cars Attract Dogs

NEW YORK—For dogs it was a mystery why Stripes Steamer cars attracted so many dogs, howling and yapping merrily as they drove them down the street. Then it was found that these cars emitted a high-pitched whistle that dogs could hear but human ears couldn't.

NHS Holds Campus Tour

The annual Campus Cruise of the National Honor Society was held Friday, Oct. 30. Forty-two persons left the school by bus at 7:30 a.m. and toured and visited several colleges, returned at 11:15 p.m. the same night. Mr. Polterton, the advisor to the chapter of NHS, accompanied the students.

The first stop was Mt. Holyoke in Northampton, Massachusetts. Norman Edwards, '64 graduate of Manchester High School, was a member of the tour. The boys particularly enjoyed it when an all-girl college band played for them.

Next came Smith which the girls saw and Amherst which the boys saw. The group returned to Manchester at 11:15 p.m. The group then toured the University of Massachusetts by bus and after lunch went to Jackson and Tilton in Metford, Mass. Most of the girls agreed that Jackson was their favorite college. Radcliffe for the girls and the boys saw the group around the agenda. The group found these both very impressive.

The students ate dinner at MIT after seeing impressive science and mathematics laboratories and huge computers. Bill Frank and Larry Preston, both '64 graduates of MHS, guided the tour of MIT.

The last college visited was Boston University with dining night views of Boston and the Charles River. Ed Hachetourian, '63 graduate, and Jackie Corbett, '64 graduate, showed the group BU, which they also particularly enjoyed.

During the long trip home the girls gaily played and singing on the bus.

At the Monday night meeting of the NHS, Sally Chavis spoke and showed slides on her stay in Germany.

Students desiring to be tutored or tutor other students during their study halls should sign up in the office of Mr. Arthur Glaeser in room 217.

AFS is holding its first fund raising party of the year, a ball room, on Nov. 20. The party will be held at the same time and place as last year's party.

The evening was highlighted by "The Words of David" presented by the orchestra and the choir.

State Bands Hold Concert

On Friday, Oct. 30, 1964 the University of Connecticut Auditorium was the scene of a concert performed by the Connecticut Musicians. The band, chorus, and orchestra entertained a large audience of the beautiful hall.

The band under the direction of Frank Fregol began the performance with the first of the numbers. The line has also come again for the sign-up. The sign-up will be held on the night of Nov. 16-20. All girls who are interested are encouraged to take part in this and all other intramural sports.

The volleyball program will consist of a round-robin tournament in which games are played on the gym floor. The line has also come again for the sign-up. The sign-up will be held on the night of Nov. 16-20. All girls who are interested are encouraged to take part in this and all other intramural sports.

Girls' Field Hockey II Ends Season

With one defensive work and a sharp offensive drive the Girls' Field Hockey Club played to a record of three wins, one loss, and two ties in the season.

The highlight of the season came in a hard fought and decisive victory over E. O. Smith High School. The 2-1 margin marked the first time in three years that either team had won a game.

The last college visited was Boston University with dining night views of Boston and the Charles River. Ed Hachetourian, '63 graduate, and Jackie Corbett, '64 graduate, showed the group BU, which they also particularly enjoyed.

Heidi DellaFera Reigns at Prom

219 couples attending the 1964 Junior Prom surely must agree with the statement made by vice-president, George Emmering. "This year's prom was one of our finest."

The idea of tables was unique. When the guests were transformed cafeteria to a world of magical enchantment to find an "Evening at Tiffany's" of "Breakfast at Tiffany's" to the last notes of "Tonight." Paul Landerman's superb orchestra provided the lovely background music for the guests. Although there were only 5 men in the group, the music was of unusually high quality.

Upon entering, each couple was ushered through the revolving archway to the receiving line. The chaperones were Mr. and Mrs. George Emmering, Mr. A. Raymond Rogers, Mr. and Mrs. Bill Miller, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Glaser. Invitations were extended to all family members and friends. More than one couple, clear-eyed part of the floor to let them know the "Words of David" was the lovely background music for the guests. Although there were only 5 men in the group, the music was of unusually high quality.

After luncheon at the Mat's Restaurant, the group returned to the school for the presentation of the trophy to the winner of the "Words of David" contest. The trophy was presented to Heidi DellaFera by Mr. Raymond Rogers, Mr. and Mrs. Bill Miller, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Glaser.

Indians After First Home Win in Two Years Saturday

Entertain Central, Eagles Play Away

Winless at Memorial Field for two years, Manchester High's football team will attempt to break the jinx tomorrow afternoon at 1 o'clock when it engages Bristol Central in a CCLL game. It's another long road trip for East Catholic's Eagles who will have to travel early to keep a 10:30 appointment again with Hill High of West Hartford.

Winners of but one game in two years—a 12-6 decision over Bristol Eastern in the Big City—the Indians hope to have the services of Bobby Hamilton on again. The highly talented running back was a member of the team last week's game with Hill High of West Hartford.

Lack of punch has been the biggest drawback Coach Norman Gerber's club has been able to score but one touchdown in its last five games. The offense is limited almost to an aerial game with Mark Heller doing the throwing.

Following an opening game loss, and rolled up three straight wins. They are slight favorites for Sunday's game despite an earlier 35-17 loss to the defending champions, Hill High of West Hartford.

But Wade's passes and the running of Jarrett and Marconi won't help the Rams Sunday when they meet the visiting Bears in a National Football League return match. All three will be wearing Chicago uniforms.

The 1963 victory was one of the Rams' biggest regular season wins. They are slight favorites for Sunday's game despite an earlier 35-17 loss to the defending champions, Hill High of West Hartford.

Trio Still an Entry But with New Club

NEW YORK (AP)—Bill Wade, Jon Arnett and Joe Marconi were in the Los Angeles Rams backfield in 1958—When the Rams last beat the Chicago Bears on the West Coast—and the trio still runs as an entry.

Toast of the football world on the college scene, once again, is the University of Notre Dame. The Irish are the mad collegiate gridiron king back on top of the heap in the mad college gridiron scramble and South Bend followers are coming out of hiding and jumping on the bandwagon as the team continues to roll along undefeated. The Irish alumni include a number of performers.

The New York Jets, who beat Denver 30-4 in their season opener, have scored over 100 points in the past three weeks. They are slight favorites for Sunday's game despite an earlier 35-17 loss to the defending champions, Hill High of West Hartford.

Big Thrill for Former Olympian

NEW YORK (AP)—"It was the greatest comeback in the history of basketball," That was Dolph Schayes, coach of the Philadelphia 76ers, beaming after his 76ers had come from 25 points behind in the third quarter to upset the champion Boston Celtics in a National Basketball Association Thursday game.

Lakers tied the score in the last five seconds then went on to beat the New York Knicks 121-123 in overtime.

Buffalo Passing Ace Lamonica Got Self-Confidence from Ara

NEW YORK (NEA)—In a vaguely contiguous way, Ara Parseghian, weaver of magic rugs, might be responsible for the two most celebrated football players in the nation today.

His reputation job at Notre Dame is in the records. But does anybody realize what he did for the Buffalo Bills?

End of the Line

Two years ago, after a media fantasy career, the Green Bay Packers drafted Jim Taylor. He was a first round pick. He played for the Packers and was a star.

Shadow of Four Horsemen

SOUTH BEND, Ind. (AP)—The spirit of Knute Rockne and the shadow of the Four Horsemen will be in the wings when Notre Dame defends its No. 1 football rating Saturday against perhaps its toughest obstacle, Michigan State.
