ferences open to the assembly of nations than permit them to feater in silent danger.

What a polite dismissal of the world organization American statesmanship helped found? What a gentle denunciation of that organization to the status of a "club" or "clubhouse" that has a total lack of awareness that anything in particular needs to be done about the present condition of the United Nations? What a gross neglect of the real "silent danger," which is not very silent after all, that almost anyone will soon take a hand in taunting and ignoring the United Nations, and thus destroying the one symbol of the rule of law the world must have if it wishes to live!

Even here, however, the speaker had to supply his own questions, and introduce his own suspicion that perhaps something very vital to the United States was not being discussed, or being glossed over, or being given answers which were too short and too glib.

But from all the platitudes-covered speech, the interesting and surprising surface assurance, one dominating impression emerged. The America of President Johnson's thinking, as was a large degree the America of President Kennedy's thinking before him, is a do it yourself America. The only law cited or suggested is that of American decision and intent and force. From the way he talks, President Johnson intends really, at least, to inaugurate the "American Century." Publisher Henry Luce described so elegantly a few decades ago. So far as this speech could tell us, the style was set in that mid-night, television-announced bombing of the shores of North Vietnam, last summer. That is the kind of America we are in the world. If things get worse, we may have to make bigger television announcements and bigger raids, or even order military moves without formal announcements. In a real crisis, the President himself may go abroad, or even arrange a personal confrontation with Communist leaders of the Russian, but not the Chinese, school.

Luce told us that, at least, Monday night. We don't see how, if the world listened, it could fail to have been soothed and pacified.

Monday night, East Lyme. In all our tomorrow, one fears, reality.

Lyndon's "World"

In the "world" section of his state of the Union message, President Johnson said that he had a "vision" of a world that was free and just, and that he was determined to make it so. He said that he was determined to make the world a better place, and that he was determined to make it a place where everyone has a chance to live and work and grow.

The trouble was that Lyndon, in the final summary and conclusion, there was almost nothing, and almost nothing, that might be real and tangible evidence of a policy direction toward a fundamental mistake.

The President said, after all, that the state of the Union depends, in large measure, upon the state of the world.

This could have been realistic good news.

But the Lyndon heartland was soon betrayed by such an admission as soon as he began to talk about the state of the world.

"Our concern and interest, compassion and vigilance," the President said, "extend to every corner of a dwindling planet. . . . Our nation was created to strike away the chains of ignorance and misery and tyranny wherever they keep man less than God means him to be."

"We are moving toward that destiny, never more rapidly than in the last four years."

"In this period we have built a military power strong enough to meet any threat and destroy any adversary. . . . We are determined to stand with the free people of the world, and the unity of the Communist empire has begun to crumble."

"What we must do, then, is fight Communism, to make the state of the world safe for the state of the Union."

"But we do not need it, we do not need it in Asia. Where Russia is European, we are to be pleasant to Russia, but we are to be firm. We are to be firm in Asia, we must play the game more toughly, and fight for freedom with us."

Just at this point, where one might perhaps begin to twist the President's meaning the outside world purely in terms of the Communist world, he himself admitted the picture.

"But Communism," he said, "is not the only source of trouble and unrest. There are older and deeper sources of the misery of nations and in man's irresistible ambition for liberty and a better life."

In Latin America, in Asia, and in Africa, President Johnson saw the "irrepressible" unfolding of new nations and continents.

For this situation, he enunciated what seemed like a policy:

"We are committed to help those seeking to strengthen their own independence, and to work most closely with those governments dedicated to the welfare of all their people."

Did this sound like pretty strict standards for those who might seek our help and favors? One had only to wait for the next paragraph to be reassured:

"We seek not fidelity to an iron faith, but a diversity of belief as varied as man himself. We seek not to extend the power of America but to progress of humanity. We seek not to dominate others but to strengthen the freedom of all."

One could hear the angels sing.

One could also hear the boom lowering on those whose definitions and ideas of such things as "freedom" and "independence" and the "welfare of all their people" and "diversity of belief" and "progress of humanity" might differ from the definitions formulated in Washington, the center of help and giving.

In a place of honor, toward the end of his discussion of the world in which our union seeks to live, President Johnson mentioned the United Nations, as "freedom."

"We renew our commitment to the continued growth and effectiveness of the United Nations. The frustration of the United Nations is a product of the world we live in, not the institution which gives them voice."

It is far better to throw those dis-

NEW YORK, Jan. 6—"Oh, let me look at that," Duke said. He put his hand on the sleeve of the guy's jacket and then began to look him up and down. "Wow," Duke said. "You really look something. That's style. I'm telling you." The guy was dressed in one of the three and a half million blue suits in New York City. But Duke was looking at the "T" cord in the guy's hand and the hand was big as a football.

Duke did that to everybody on the block he worked, 52d St. between Eighth and Broadway. He was the best man merchant in the street ever. When Duke needed a couple of dollars, and he took aim at a guy, he always came out with the money. He was short and thin and had big eyes and a big nose.

"Make it $200 and I'll be happy," Duke said. "You got it," Duke said. "Ten, just give me a fourer until I get my money." He got the four and ran for the corner with it.

Then two box office men from the Shubert Theatre came into Gallagher's for a drink and they said they heard about the money in the will. "He must be getting it then," Joe said.

Everybody on the block had the same story and Duke was running Lee Shubert's will into his best move ever until somebody met one of the lawyers handling the Shubert estate and the lawyer said he didn't know a thing about it. That hurt, but it didn't really stop Duke. He was too tight in his neighborhood to let an story stop him.

Duke's inside gave out from whiskey a couple of weeks ago and they took him to the hospital and he died. "I miss the guy," Joe Weber was saying last night. "It's a shame he died. Do you know that if he lived this was the week he would've got the $20,000 from Lee Shubert's will? A lot of people on 52d St. still believe that."

That's style. I'm telling you." The guy was dressed in one of the three and a half million blue suits in New York City. But Duke was looking at the "T" cord in the guy's hand and the hand was big as a football.

Duke did that to everybody on the block he worked, 52d St. between Eighth and Broadway. He was the best man merchant in the street ever. When Duke needed a couple of dollars, and he took aim at a guy, he always came out with the money. He was short and thin and had big eyes and a big nose.

"Make it $200 and I'll be happy," Duke said. "You got it," Duke said. "Ten, just give me a fourer until I get my money." He got the four and ran for the corner with it.

Then two box office men from the Shubert Theatre came into Gallagher's for a drink and they said they heard about the money in the will. "He must be getting it then," Joe said.

Everybody on the block had the same story and Duke was running Lee Shubert's will into his best move ever until somebody met one of the lawyers handling the Shubert estate and the lawyer said he didn't know a thing about it. That hurt, but it didn't really stop Duke. He was too tight in his neighborhood to let an story stop him.

Duke's inside gave out from whiskey a couple of weeks ago and they took him to the hospital and he died. "I miss the guy," Joe Weber was saying last night. "It's a shame he died. Do you know that if he lived this was the week he would've got the $20,000 from Lee Shubert's will? A lot of people on 52d St. still believe that."

"That isn't the point," protested a longtime Republican critic of the Tuesday-Thursday Club, Rep. H. R. Gross of Iowa. "They can schedule business on Friday. They are not speaking in the House chamber and they can and should schedule business on Thursday."

He said the system is an accommodation, largely for members from the Eastern seaboard, "who want to go home weekends, to practice law or spend their time golfing or on the beaches."

Republicans, realizing that most of the weekending congressional session is scheduled and the House completes it by Thursday, are not likely to be a big party by forcing late week sessions.

WESTPORT (AP)—A state police drive has been launched to halt a rash of sniper incidents and the smashing of auto windows on the Connecticut Turnpike and Merritt Parkway in the Fairfield County area.

Two arrests were reported Tuesday in Norwalk shortly after the crackdown began.

State police said two boys were picked up after they were seen growing hunks of snow into the paths of cars on the Merritt Parkway. They were released in custody of their parents and their cases referred to juvenile authorities.

Police said at least 40 incidents have been reported on the Connecticut Turnpike since last June.

One of the worst has resulted in the loss of an eye by Stamford man who was struck by an unidentified missile while driving along the turnpike in that city last month.

State Police Lt. Louis D. Marchese said in most cases youths using .22 caliber rifles have been seen running from passing vehicles over overpass bridges.

Leo J. Maloney has ordered an all-out effort to halt the vandalism, said Marchese.

NEW YORK (AP)—A soldier home on leave from Ft. Campbell, Ky., killed himself with the first pull of the trigger Tuesday night after telling his roommate that "I'm going to show you how to play Russian roulette," police reported.

The soldier, Pfc. Sergio Almeida, 21, a Cuban, died of a head wound in an apartment he shared with two friends.

Police said Almeida's roommate told them Almeida put a single bullet in a revolver, aimed the cylinder several times, leveled the gun at his right temple and pulled the trigger.

The 12-year-old son of a Portuguese immigrant, Sgt. Almeida, 24, and Valentin Olarte, 42, said Almeida told them he had won the revolver in a poker game.

Big Story of 1964 U.S. Politics

AP Newsfeature Writer
Editors of AP member newspapers and radio and TV stations voted the campaign and landslide election of Lyndon B. Johnson as President the top news story of 1964.

For the Republicans, the campaign started with Henry Cabot Lodge, who wasn't even in the country, winning the New Hampshire primary; the polls showed Gov. Nelson Rockefeller of New York moving ahead after he won the Oregon primary; then Gov. William Scranton of Pennsylvania announced his candidacy. But it was Barry Goldwater, a conservative who swept in a first-ballot nomination at the convention in San Francisco.

The only suspense for the Democrats before their convention in Atlantic City was the question of whom they would name as their running mate. Not too surprisingly, Lyndon B. Johnson, a former vice president of the United States, was named.

On Oct. 15, Johnson announced that Khrushchev, 70, had requested the total vote in the history. Goldwater carried five Southern states and Arizona.

The editors who made the list of Nixon-Khrushchev as Communist Party candidates, U.S.S.R. premier the No. 2 story of the year.

Four of the five jobbers were represented when the check for $320 was given yesterday to Norman Fendall, left, president of MAHRCA. From his left are Edward DeLorenzo of Manchester Auto Parts, John Litwin of Windler Auto Parts, Emory Hohenbush of Shibley Bros., and Al Rossetto of Alcor Auto Parts. Missing was Leonard Brennan of Grand Auto Parts. Fendall said the money will be used to provide vocational training for young retardates in Manchester, giving them an opportunity to become taxpayers rather than tax burdens. ### South Windsor Warner Sees Education Here Is 'as Good as Anywhere'

Supt. of Schools Charles Warner told Orchard Hill parents last night that "an average child in South Windsor can get as good an education as anywhere else."

Speaking before PTA members, he said he had done a personal study on foreign languages in the lower grades. Last year South Windsor had French in Grade 3 and this year it was dropped and the program was moved to Grade 4.

Supt. Warner said he is proposing in his budget to be submitted to the board of education that the program again be begun in Grade 3 next year. He indicated that he did not see what the final financial judgment would be.

He noted that the Fairfield Report would soon be out. An evaluation study was made of children who had started French in Grade 3 and those who had started in Grade 4. The report is being prepared by the superintendent of the school system.

Supt. Warner was questioned by the board of education. He said that the school had already voted to lengthen the school year by two days next year. He said, "Hopefully, by 1967 there will be a different arrangement of school opening."

He noted that by lengthening the school year it would not decrease the home-to-school distance. He said that the high school would be more for time for supervised study by the superintendent.

Renowned Poet 87 Today Sandburg Celebrates By Lifting Big Chair

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Carl Sandburg, the white-haired poet and Lincoln biographer, celebrates his 87th birthday today by lifting a heavy oak armchair over his head for exercise.

"He spends his best days apart and lifts a big, heavy oak armchair over his head three times," said Harry Golden, Sandburg's friend and biographer. "That's his exercise and he does it every day."

Golden said yesterday telegrams had been sent to Sandburg's mountain home in Flat Rock, N.C. by the President, Secretary of Interior Stewart Udall, Ambassador Adlai E. Stevenson, Sen. Paul Douglas, D.Ill., and all that Chicago crowd.

President Johnson also had a gift for Sandburg. It was a color photograph, inscribed by John F. Kennedy, President, Sandburg and Sandburg's brother-in-law, photographer Edward Steichen.

Johnson arranged for William Friday, president of the University of North Carolina, to visit Flat Rock to present the gift to Sandburg.

Golden, who edits and publishes the Carolina Israelite, and has written several best-selling books, said his telegram to Sandburg read: "May you go on to 95."

Golden, who visits the Sandburgs about once a month, says Sandburg still does a lot of reading and is working on the second volume of his autobiography, "The Complete Poems." He said he'll die at an advanced age, but he's not sure.

Sandburg has gradually withdrawn from public life. He shuns the telephone and his wife and two of their three daughters protect him from the press.

"We do a lot of talking," Golden said. "He talks a half hour, then I talk a half hour."

"Then we have the list of 'Americans who are not what's wrong with this country.' Sometimes we add a guy; sometimes we take a guy out. And sometimes we switch the names around."

Sandburg has been married to the former Paula Stetson, sister of Edward Stetson, for 27 years.

"He's a great family man," Golden said. "They hold hands all the time. And they don't do it for effect. Fantastic."

"Once I asked her: 'Paula, how does it feel for a woman to have Carl Sandburg as a husband and Edward Stetson as a brother?'" Golden recalled.

"Then Carl asked her: 'Satur-day, you answer the fellow?'" Golden said.

AUGUST TOP MONTH
RENO, Nev. (AP) — June may be the big month for brides elsewhere, but August is the wedding month in Reno, where it includes more marriages, divorces, 2,538, during August than any other month of last year.

And maybe it's because of all the hard work and flowers associated with Valentine's Day that February was the low month for divorces last year — 274.

County Clerk Harry K. Brown says his office sold 2,622 marriage licenses, five times the number of divorces. There were 21,363 marriages total in 1965.

Divorces last year totalled 4,741, compared with 4,896 in 1964. August also was the high month for divorce, with 871.

British Girl Visits Viet Nam Americans 'Sweet' But They're Losing

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — A young British girl who visited Viet Nam in the northeast part of the country and placed some 80 Americans and 800 Belgians under house arrest "until U.S. and Belgium troops arrived," said Wendy Myers, 22.

"In North Viet Nam you have a lack for permission to do anything, even to buy your own food," she said. "The Viet Cong are winning the war. If the Americans stay, there will be a long blood."

The husky, brown-haired British girl arrived in Warsaw on the last cut and Civil Rights bills be enacted as memorials to President Kennedy. The bills were signed by Lyndon Johnson on Feb. 26. LBJ signed the law after the biggest political fight in American history, a 118 million cut in individual and corporate taxes.

July 2 he signed after a bitter fight in Congress, the country's most sweeping Civil Rights bill. Legislative action moved to what they call when on Feb. 17 the Supreme Court ruled 4 to 3 that congressional districts within each state should be substantially equal in population, to end voting inequities.

What would it mean? Whole state redistricting, the states giving cities greater representation and altering the structure of many state legislatures.

"The North Vietnamese border inspectors were horrible," she reported. "They took everything out of my luggage and searched it like a mad dog. I was in a skirt and inspected their backs of my eyes."

Supt. Warner continued, "to inspect or make up on women, except those who sneaked it on to imitate American imperials."

She said the imitations took place late in November, when hundreds of thousands of Peking Chinese staged huge demonstrations against the U.S. Belgian paratrooper drop on Stanleyville.

"Some were dressed up to look like Americans and others like the Chinese," she said. "It was a huge, frightening charade."

Fifth Straight for East, 54-38 Nod over Aquinas

Malin Paces Winners Again with 18 Points

By JOHN GOLDEN

Another victory was added to its growing string of consecutive wins at East Catholic last night, making it five straight. The latest victory was 54-38, Thomas Aquinas, 54-38, in New Britain before a capacity crowd of 500 in Aquinas' gym.

Once again Captain Tom Malin led the team with 18 points while Ray LaCaze accounted for 12 and Paul Walkowski provided 11. Frank Kinel with nine and Joe Lacy with four came up with the other high marks.

Malin opened the first quarter with blistering offense and an aggressive defense and was able to cross the Eagles, trading basket for basket with a total of 15 while Walkowski handled down 11 and Kinel grabbed six.

Malin's lead soon disappeared as the second stanza got underway and the Blue and White quickly picked up a three-point margin which they held throughout the rest of the game.

Loss Third Straight, Second in CCIL Play

By PETE ZANARDI

Despite scoring only six points from the floor in the entire second half, Maloney High handed Manchester High its third straight defeat 57-54 in Meriden last night, Regular Indian center Bob Evans watched his teammates from the bench as they fought back from a 33-21 disadvantage at halftime with a rally that just fell short.

Evans' rebounding proved to be the key factor as Manchester came roaring back in the last quarter. With less than 30 seconds left, Carl Hohenbalk's hoop cut the lead to 55-54. Don Romano stole the ball back for Manchester but Hohenbalk's timely hoop attempt was without success and Fred Gumkowski grabbed the ball for Maloney. Jim Hesel killed the rally with two foul conversions with eight seconds left.

NCAA-AAU Are Headed For Battle

Businessmen's Basketball League, which has successfully operated for a number of years at the East Side Rec, appears to be a casualty for an unusual reason. It's not because there isn't enough players, teams or sponsors. In fact, there is, surprisingly, an abundance of teams—eight—and players—80, but there are no officials, except one who will work for the fee the town wishes to pay.

There isn't any shortage of officials in Manchester by any means. In fact, there are active members of the Central Connecticut District Board. However, the town board and several more will "over the line".

Excitement grew as midway through the final chapter Manchester's 421 and Ron Romano's 50-49. Mark Heiser and Romano's 50-49. Mark Heiser and Romano's 50-49. Mark Heiser and Romano's 50-49.

End of the Line
Johny Nucola, supervisor of officials for the P.E.C.A., has been asked to resign. He has been asked to resign.

Injury-Hit UConn's Routed by Crusaders

Who do the Huskies of Connecticut miss more—B.S. Captain Toby Kimball, or hot-shot sophomore Wes Biskamp?

Either man might have made the difference between defeat and victory Tuesday night at Storrs, but neither was able to play.

UConn's lead soon disappeared as the second stanza got underway and the Blue and White quickly picked up a three-point margin which they held throughout the rest of the game.
