THE WAY I HEARD IT

By John Gruber
Some years ago, at a woman's college not too far from here, some of the townpeople were quite distressed to notice young ladies in the dormitories in various states of undress as viewed through the lighted formulary windows in the evenings. With true New England candor, they called out to the young ladies, pulling down their window shades in pain of dismay.

Let's get a few things straight. I don't hate music or musicians. I've been accused of doing both. I've reviewed a hundred concerts a year and of this I usually give about four or five "rave" reviews. I also give about three or four "roasts." The rest are in between, or "mixed."

Actually, this is pretty fair. I am a graduate of the New England Conservatory of Music where I also did graduate work, and was elected to Phi Beta Kappa in scholastic circles. For some years I further studied in Europe under Felix Petri and Arnold Schoenberg. For some years I was a practicing concert pianist, and I did conduct and arrange for the radio in the days before TV. Further, I have appeared locally as both a pianist and a conductor, which is something I can't say for critics in general. I don't claim to be the world's best pianist or the world's best conductor, but I do know where to look for trouble, which is more than most critics can say.

I learned the trade of music critic under Warren Sturges Smith, music editor and critic for The Boston Post, in those days, and sufficiently the musicologist to be a contributor to Who'll pay the bills... if you can't work?

An audience can easily be stampeded by an engineered demonstration, as was evidenced the other night. If you think that reception for a touted diva was spontaneous you are more naive than ten years of opera attendances should make you. It was well planned in advance. Just where do you think the young ladies got the flowers they used to pelt the prima donna? Did they run out during intermission and gather them from around the base of Ladygate's statue?

Events In Capital

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Paul Douglas has called upon labor leaders to help defuse congressional efforts to modify the one-man-one-vote decision of the Supreme Court.

The Illinois Democrat said: "The Supreme Court decision on a population basis of both houses of the state legislature is the Magna Carta of representative government in the United States."

Douglas said efforts to undo the court decision "are no less a threat to the future of representative government than the worst of the last-century proposals to give the future of congressional action to the future of Congress."

Douglas gave his view in remarks prepared for a conference sponsored by the International Union of Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers Union.

Spurt Pushes Economy to High Level

By SAM WATSON
AP Times New York (AP) — The final days of the year's first quarter are seeing a spurt that is pushing the nation's economy to an unexpectedly high level.

The spurt is being made possible by the help of some unusual increases, such as a rise in steel prices, but also in the face of some setbacks that normally would have dragged it down.

"All hail, Macbeth, hail to thee, Thane of Cawdor," shrieked the three witches (Christina Kutcher, behind the building, and Jan Cruckshank) to smiling Macbeth (John Lombardo) and smiling young Banquo (Ledy Butcher) as they performed their own production of Shakespeare's "Macbeth" at the school Friday night.

Revolutions Don't Relax
 One doesn't have to scratch very deeply into the thinking of any of us Americans of a supposedly normal amount of conscience and good will to discover that the news we would do best to hear from Alabama would be news of a respite, a relaxation, a period during which the great moral victories at Selma and Montgomery would be celebrated, a period during which the spotlight would shift to Congress, a period during which the responsible citizens of Alabama itself would have endeavored to fight for progress through moderation.

It was nice to have a church in Selma desegregated enough yesterday to allow four Negroes to sit in the congregation. It is nice to have the more responsible newspapers of Alabama begin writing editorials about the news we would like to hear from Alabama which have news of the first small but courageous organization of white people into groups who believe their state has to do something more than try to hold fast and stand still with what has been.

Such developments, such strains in the wind, probably are the news we would do best to hear from Alabama. It is nice to have the first small but courageous organization of white people into groups who believe their state has to do something more than try to hold fast and stand still with what has been.

But the practical application of that law of gold" which seems to have flooded the wrong way seems to be that our wealth isn't so solid as it should be, and that, as a result, the patriotic urge for Americans to do this year, and perhaps for years to come, is to stay home, not travel abroad, and, if we travel abroad, to do so parsimoniously as possible. This would be quite un-American, in most of us, were not being told that all folders depicting the possible delights of foreign travel have been removed from government passport offices, were we not being scolded, in the Senate and elsewhere, on the virtues of seeing our own country, first, were we not being lectured, suddenly, on how expensive and costly the vice of Paris can be.

Even after we begin to believe it, the situation remains amazing. "Stay home, Americans" seems to be becoming an official slogan. "Think not of what you personally can afford in the way of foreign travel, but what your country can afford" seems to be becoming an official maxim.

And, as the crisis in gold continues, there are suggestions that other sacrifices, equally startling, may be required of the American people. We notice a statistic to the effect that the use of gold for fillings drains almost as much of our supply as it is being lost abroad. We wonder what the statistic would be for wedding rings?

Beginning To Live? One of those juxtapositions of news items which, happening together, create a happy relationship appeared in the New York Times the other day.

In one news item an expert on computers delivered a paper on computers in which he warned that computers should be required to get out in the world and see more of life. "The computer that lacks an ability to communicate with the outside world," said he, "is in danger of remaining an isolated marvel numbing to itself in the air conditioned seclusion of its company's data processing room."

What should be done, this expert said, was to link computers directly into all kinds of communications systems, so they could be continually on the alert to the latest, and not fall into the danger of functioning like stuffy old humans.

This modern formula for better communication among computers and the systems of inquiry, data-collection, message-switching, and input which service computers happened to have, nesting right along side it, a quaint little news story concerning the studies a University of Indiana scientist has been making—communications between animals.

The horse, the Indiana professor has discovered, moves his ears; the honeybee dances; gorillas beat themselves, and mania leaves trails.

We are not sure we certainly wouldn't want to substitute any such possibility for the kind of scientific linkage we are sure the expert had in mind, but the last time we saw two computers in the same room we thought they were indulging in a cold, calculating halve of one another which was on the verge of expressing itself in some new kind of signal such as had never been programmed into them. We think that, left to themselves, the computers might create for themselves a wider, closer to real life kind of life of the expert recommends.

Gas And Peasants The Vietnamese peasant is the most important factor in the war in Viet Nam. And he is the most consistently overlooked, except by the Viet Cong. Wholeheartedly, the relationship in guerrilla warfare is that between the fighters and the peasantry. If the peasantry, whether in China, Cuba, or South Viet Nam, opposes the guerrillas, the guerrillas will be unable to survive.

In almost every case of successful guerrilla warfare the revolutionaries have been assisted by the indifference of the incumbent regime to the people on the land. It should follow, that actions which further alienate the peasantry actually help the guerrillas.

But such is not the American reasoning in South Viet Nam. Perhaps experts in Washington don't know it, but the conflict in South Viet Nam is not an immensely popular one, either among our Allies or in this country. Now the introduction of nonlethal gas in South Viet Nam has made it even more unpopular.

The Viet Cong and other Asian Communist will, of course, make giant propaganda strides because of the American decision to gas villages which contain Viet Cong. Vomiting Vietnamese peasants are not going to condone the United States because the source of their sickness is nonlethal, and many will believe the Viet Cong assertion that the Americans are trying to poison them.

Our argument is that, whether they know it or not, or whether they like it or not, the United States is saving their lives from the compulsory death which "strategic hamlets," bombing, and gasings are saving them from a worse fate.

The truth, however, is that South Viet Nam happens to be the battleground where the United States is putting at stake its strategic interests in all of Southeast Asia.

But the manner in which we are defeating the Saigon regime from the Vietnamese Communists, and defending our own posture from the power encroachments of Asian Communist nations, leaves much to be desired.

What will it profit us if we destroy all Viet Cong supply dumps in North Viet Nam and at the same time alienate Vietnamese peasants?

If we are to protect what has been an illusion of self-government in South Viet Nam, perhaps we should consider the "governed." For whether or not the United States remains, or the Viet Cong remains, the people will remain. Inasmuch as we proclaim their safety and freedom as the goal of our intentions, our policy should be to utilize the people. We cannot solve the Vietnamese crisis without the Vietnamese REPUBLICAN

Retreat From Selma

NEW YORK, March 28 — Pat Thomas, who in his retirement decided to see the Jefferson Davis Hotel in Montgomery, Ala., and registered as "Martin Luther King."

The room clerk got a great kick out of this. He smiled at Pat Thomas. The same way the sheriff smiled at Pat Thomas. And the same way Mr. L. B. Sullivan, Police Commissioner of Montgomery, smiled at Pat Thomas in fact every place Pat Thomas went in Alabama last week he made people feel good. Apparently, Southerners love to speculate on how many men it would take to carry a guy like Pat Thomas out of town on a railroad tie.

"You people don't have enough tar to handle me," Pat Thomas proclaimed. He then set up daytime headquarters in a back booth in the Selma, Ala., which is in Selma, Ala., and he began ordering little snacks for himself all day. By the middle of the week, the waitresses in the Selma, Ala. were limping. At least each day Pat Thomas would come around the street to the third floor of the Albert Hotel, where Bob Gay, proprietor, had a private saloon set up. There, at a white leather bar, Pat Thomas would drink up all his friends, and they would come in and sit on a couch and watch Pat Thomas drink.

"Man down here, if he's big as you, you can't get enough work to feed himself," one of the locals observed one night. "Food? What about my drinking?" Pat Thomas said. "Take Federal aid," the local said.

Fat Thomas then did some sightseeing. He took a look around the Selma jailhouse, visited the city jail in Montgomery and then drove out to look over the Alabama State Training School for Boys. He was so in love with the place that he made only one phone call out of town. He called Dick Conlan, Gallagher's Steak House.

The Viet Cong and other Asian Communist will, of course, make giant propaganda strides because of the American decision to gas villages which contain Viet Cong. Vomiting Vietnamese peasants are not going to condone the United States because the source of their sickness is nonlethal, and many will believe the Viet Cong assertion that the Americans are trying to poison them.

A Thought for Today

WE read of Enoch in Genesis 5:24 that "he walked with God." What does this mean? Is it possible for us in our day to walk with God in any kind of meaningful way?

To walk with God means an intimate association with Him—what an honor! It means protection—what a comfort! It means to keep in step with God—what an opportunity! It means going home with Him—what a marvelous hope!

How good to be able to say, "Friendship with Jesus, fellowship divine; O what blessed, sweet communion. Jesus is a friend of mine!"

Perhaps before we can truthfully say this about our fellowship with God, we need to pray, "Friendship with Jesus, fellowship divine; O what blessed, sweet communion. Jesus is a friend of mine!"

The Editor, I have read with interest the recent letters regarding John Gruber, and I can't help but feel that these self-styled critics, either being or are closely connected to an organized effort, Mr. Gruber has criticized. They obviously feel they have a trained, ready-made staff of Gruber's or they would not be quite so vehement in their opinions.

I find Mr. Gruber's articles extremely informative and highly entertaining, although I feel few people accept every remark. I have never seen the man who has attended a performance, and I disagree with his criticism. Perhaps if my name were Joan Sutherland or Arthur Winograd I would be more inclined to be supercilious and downgrade bad reviews, but I think Mr. Gruber should be commended for his ability to be unimpressed by names or reputations.

Any town can have a noisy party, but Selma is a critical and Manchester should be grateful to have a man of Gruber's stature in its midst.

Break Reported At Country Club

Police are investigating a break Saturday night into the clubhouse and pro shop of the Manchester Country Club. An undetermined amount of cash and liquor has been reported stolen.

Patrolman James McCoo discovered the break during a routine check of the country club buildings about 5 1/2 years ago. Entry into the clubhouse was made through a window on the east side. Inspection of the clubhouse revealed that a desk, a metal cabinet and a small safe used by the club's treasurer had been forced open.

That is the amount the town hopes to be able to contribute to its local clinic, and toward educational and research efforts for the state and national organizations.

Dr. David Caldwell Jr., president of the Manchester American Cancer Society, has offered these statistics in support of the fund drive. During the past year a total of 33 cancer patients from Manchester were assisted in their operations by the Manchester cancer unit.

For example, ten patients were transported to and from the hospital, although they feel few people accept every remark. I have never seen the man who has attended a performance, and I disagree with his criticism.

Three persons received financial assistance toward the cost of speech lessons, operations for cancer of the throat and for cancer of the larynx.

Funds collected in Manchester will also be used both to support the educational levels to provide pamphlets, brochures and literature to be distributed to patients and to encourage smoking among the young.

Dr. Charles Garmann, chairman of the Society's 1965 Crusade for Cancer, said that the fund drive will help pay for educational films that can be made available to patients. One of the most common causes of lung cancer, according to researchers, is excessive smoking.

Funds collected in Manchester will also be used both to support the educational levels to provide pamphlets, brochures and literature to be distributed to patients and to encourage smoking among the young.

Dr. Charles Garmann, chairman of the Society's 1965 Crusade for Cancer, said that the fund drive will help pay for educational films that can be made available to patients. One of the most common causes of lung cancer, according to researchers, is excessive smoking.

South Windsor Education Group Reports On Town Career Program

The South Windsor Education Association has completed a report clarifying the present status of the career program in South Windsor.

The career study committee has stated that the task was two-fold: To clarify the requirements and procedures of the program, and to make a recommendation to the membership regarding the continuation of the program.

The SWEA career study committee was convened early in October, 1964 to study the present program. Weekly meetings have been held in an attempt to define procedures for application, selection and notification for career and master applicants.

The study includes the criteria to be used in evaluating an applicant, procedures to be followed by applicants and evaluators, duties of the committee, and salary adjustments for applicants.

Committee members included: Sup. Charles J. Perry, Richard A. Duffy, E. LaVoie, Evalyn S. Malloy, Ann Duffy, Saul Finestone, and Richard S. Kelley.

A teacher is eligible for placement on the career schedule after the completion of one year of tenure in South Windsor and upon completion of requirements for a master's degree or 60 hours of approved post-baccalaureate work as defined by the board of education.

The career study committee has recommended that the career program be continued and that the criteria for placement be revised.

Any teacher wishing to be considered for placement on the career or master schedule must submit a formal letter and resume to the superintendent of schools.

Application for career status must be made during September and master schedule applications will be accepted through the end of the year.

Special teachers working with more than one principal shall be observed in the Par. East by each observer.

There will be a minimum of two visits within two hours by each observer.

Med Auerbach 'BA Coach of Year'

First Time In 19 Years Of Coaching

BOSTON (AP)—Red Auerbach has been selected Coach of the Year for the first time in his 19 years of guiding a National Basketball Association team.

He'll celebrate by putting his record-breaking Boston Celtics, seeking a seventh straight title, through a grueling practice today.

The high general manager-owner is concerned over timing and momentum in the two weeks before Boston's entry into the Philadelphia-Cincinnati winner.

"So people finally have decided that I belong around here," Auerbach said with a wink. "I have heard for the first time how it could never be a winner without my players. And I could."

"But I'm glad that people finally think I can handle a trophy. I've never had one before."

Auerbach has a 384-433 record over his 19 seasons and owns 96 coaching victories including 11 championships.

He has coached 11 NBA champions and 11 MVPs. He was named Coach of the Year in 1956, 1957, 1958, 1961, 1962, 1963, 1964, 1965, 1966, 1967, 1968, 1969, 1970, 1971, 1972, 1973, 1974, 1975, 1976, 1977, 1978, 1979, 1980, 1981, 1982, 1983, 1984, 1985, 1986, 1987, 1988, 1989, 1990, 1991, 1992, 1993, 1994, 1995, 1996, 1997, 1998, 1999, 2000, 2001, 2002, 2003, 2004, 2005, 2006, 2007, 2008, 2009, 2010, 2011, 2012, 2013, 2014, 2015, 2016, 2017, 2018, 2019, 2020, 2021, 2022, 2023, 2024, 2025.
