30 Days to Better Spelling

Summing Up Matter

By The Reading Laboratory, Inc.
Written for NEA Special Services

So far in our column we have covered the two most difficult words to spell, and it should be clear that they are really not so difficult as you may have been told. To modify the gains we have made and before going on to still other areas, it is wise to sum up and to test ourselves.

First, we shall repeat the verses covering the rules and exceptions. If you have not memorized them by now, re-read them. Then it follows to do so today. Write both sides again with these annoying details.

The first rhyme told you when to place the e before the l. If you know all the times and when the precedes, then it follows that on all other occasions the l will precede. Here is our rhyme:

When e precedes l in perceive, When e precedes l in receive, And foreign sovereigns we receive, Then e precedes l. Add neither, leisure, seize and weed.

In other words, e will precede l after soft c (sounded like s), when the combination of c and s precedes l, when the combination is pronounced like height, in all other cases, e precedes l, except the last line of the ditty—either, leisure, seize and weed.

Our second rule dealt with the matter of keeping or dropping the final silent e of a word before another e. The ditty goes like this:

When suffixes begin with silent e, When suffixes start other ways, Then silent e—make sure it stays.

The correct exceptions to this rule we stated in these verses:

If suffixes start a, u, o, W, g, precedes, it's g in change, To save soft g keep you must, And save the g like j in join.

As for the i in profession, Seek the meaning, not confusion. What these last two rhymes are saying are:

(1) In order to keep the original soft g, the word must have a suffix starting with an a, o, u, or w, then leave the final silent e. (2) Use your head and make exceptions when common sense calls for it.

For example, avoid thing and ling, and write thing and bring, and avoid thing and thing mixed up with burning, keep the e in singing so as not to get confused with singing.

A Quiz: Pick out the correct spelling in the room. The correct answer is the appropriate part of the rhymes which lead you to your answer.

1. Father Jay (saying, dying) while mother was (saying, dying) in the hospital. 2. The check was returned for (insufficient, insufficient) funds.

3. Ever since (arriving, arriving), he has been a large pest. This umpire is simply (contagious, outrageous). 4. (Neither, neither) of them

Bolton Selectmen Hear Cooper Describe NCRD Quilms

Selectman Bernard Sheridan gave Kelly, and Hayden Grillo, his fellow selectmen last night that they were Raymond Cooper's "debt of gratitude" for his plan to study the NCRD legislation on the North-Central Refuse Disposal District before the town.

A letter from Cooper read at the annual town meeting Oct. 11 outlined the town's plan to study the new refuse disposal district with Vermont and South Windsor.

Cooper appeared at the selectmen's last night to explain his objections more thoroughly. He said that, under the special district, it is not clear how a town could withdraw from the district.

High Stool For Singing Or Slipping

NEW YORK (AP)—Andy Williams accidentally slipped off his stool Monday night in mid-show—one of those hopeful portents we've been looking for.

NBC's weekly "Andy Williams Show" is taped, usually several weeks before we see it on our screens. It would have been fairly easy to have retaped the sequence with guest Bob Hope in which Andy lost his balance and dropped momentarily out of sight. They did not choose to retape, however.

Boy and man, girl and woman, we've been watching singers and guest stars climb up on high stools at least once per variety show ever since Dave Garroway—may he be forgiven—started the whole thing back in Chicago.

A pair of high stools, set in stage center, has come to mean that it is time for the star and his guest to engage in some informal, carefully written and well-rehearsed banter leading up to singing a song.

Maybe Andy's minor mishap will persuade him to drop the weekly bit. And since Andy Williams is considered to be an authority on what is in with the "in-people" of Hollywood—or more important, an authority on what is out with the in-people—maybe the whole tired sequence will disappear.

The Williams show, incidentally, remains one of the most handsome color programs, but after a couple of seasons that predictable format could do with a little revision.

The Ratings

The first national ratings of the new television season, released Monday by the A. C. Nielsen Co. put CBS' "Lucy Show" in sixth place. Thus it appears that the popularity of the comedy series has not diminished with the departure of Lucille Ball's long-time costar, Vivian Vance.

Those Nielsen ratings, covering the two-week period ending Sept. 26, has the three most popular programs of last season still on the top of the list—NBC's "Bonanza," ABC's "Bewitched" and CBS' "Gomer Pyle." Four new programs made the top 10—CBS' "Hogan's Heroes" and "Green Acres" and ABC's "Man Called Shenandoah" and "F Troop." The top 10, incidentally, consisted of eight comedies and two westerns.

"ABC Scope" will examine the problem of illegitimate births in a broadcast tonight from 10:30-11.

Its Easy To Falsify On a Film

By JOAN CROSSBY
NEW YORK (NEA)—"Film," says Pulitzer prize-winning author Theodore H. White, "is the easiest medium in which to lie."

And by way of proof, during the making of a television documentary based on White's best-selling book, "The Making of the President: 1964," the David Wolper production unit put together some film footage, for their private enjoyment, that was, as White says, "giddy comic, but a lie."

The Making of the President: 1964 will be telecast on CBS, Tuesday. Those who have viewed the film in advance say it is eminently fair to both sides and a fine reportorial job on contemporary history.

"Film has to be exciting and honest. If we cut Johnson well and Goldwater badly, we would be lying. If we pictured Goldwater as a prophet and Johnson as Uncle Cornpone—and that's easy to do—we would be lying."

White, who aims to continue his book series (which began with the 1960 campaign) through 1980, considers the present film superior to the one which won five Emmys when it was telecast two years ago.

The last one was cut from stock footage. This time we knew we would do a television show as early as January 1964. So we had our crews taking pictures our own way. Sixty per cent of the footage here is our own."

The agony, White says, in preparing a show like this is the final tailoring.

In March of 1965 Mel Stuart, who produced and directed and who is a man mesmerized by the art of the documentary, came to see me in New York. I had the manuscript of the book. For three days we ate sandwiches and blocked out the structure of the show. When I got out to Hollywood in June, they had the film edited down to two hours and 15 minutes. It had to be cut to 78 minutes for the 90-minute show. Eventually, they got it down to just 15 minutes over, and that's when the sweat comes. Humphrey's speeches had to go, and so did Lady Bird's trip through the South. And a big Johnson biography wound up about 46 seconds long."

NBC's tour on the nation's capitol, broadcast last January, will be repeated tomorrow 6:30-7:30 p.m.

Review: A Soap, a Fantasy

NEW YORK (AP)—Soap opera is easily recognized even when attempts are made to disguise it.

There are, of course, continuing characters and a continued story. More than that, there are the tense emotions—all the continuing characters have their individual problems. Then there is the tendency to sit around and talk and talk and talk about the problems. In daytime soap operas they usually sit around in the kitchen drinking coffee and talking. In the nighttime soap they move around more because the production budget is larger and they have more sets.

There are also some stock situations with which the veteran soap opera watcher is familiar. One is the naive young man mixed up with a scheming sophisticated woman. Another is the fatal accident for which the wrong person is held responsible.

Producers, stars and even the publishers of ABC's "The Long, Hot Summer" have been busy denying for months that the series is basically a soap. They call it a "character dramatic show." However, this viewer dialed in Thursday night on the windup of a story continued from last week and found that a naive young man was mixed up with a scheming, sophisticated woman and that the wrong person was being held responsible for a fatal accident. And they were talking, talking about it.

It may not be a soap opera, but things seemed pretty sudsy around Frenchman's Bend, the town in which all this was going on.

"The Long, Hot Summer" obviously is considered to be a woman's show—no fist fights or gun play and the commercials are aimed at the feminine consumer. But it may have had tough going Thursday night. Cary Grant was starring in a 1966 feature movie on a rival channel.

"Bewitched," the gay fantasy that spawned so many would be imitators this season, introduced another amusing character Thursday night—A square warlock. Paul Lynde joined the cast as witch Samantha's Uncle Arthur who had a passion for corny jokes and dreadful practical jokes. Another of the sorcerer relatives is an absent minded witch of an aunt played by Marian Lorne who constantly is messing her up spells and forgetting how to fly through walls.

Fantasy, however, is both extremely delicate and extremely rich. It is best digested when taken in small quantities and not as a regular diet. "Bewitched," seen once a week, is about the limit of this viewer's tolerance. More than that, and it becomes downright boring.

Highly Thought Of THURSDAY TV PROGRAM

NEW YORK (NBA)—Marriage, Joan Rivers has discovered, is not only fattening, but it can also ruin a perfectly good comedy routine.

Joan, married since July 15 to producer Edgar Rosenberg, is a pretty and funny comedienne, so highly thought of by NBC that the network has signed her to an exclusive contract to appear on their shows (namely "The Tonight Show"), as well as in a possible series, which she is to develop for herself.

Where, as a bachelor girl, Joan often dined on a dish of elderly cottage cheese, she is now faced with efforts to cook ("even my color schemes turn out wrong and the vegetables don't go together") full courses, fattening meals for her husband.

Additionally, many of her self-written comedy routines concerned the single life. "Don't think I haven't considered getting in touch with Phyllis Diller, now that she is divorced, to see if we couldn't exchange material."

Joan was born in Brooklyn and raised in New York. She says she had always wanted to perform, and she began her career with the improvisational Second City group. But she drifted into writing for people with talents as divergent as Phil Foster and Zsa Zsa Gabor.

Then she hit a deadly dull spot and, to keep herself in food, went to work for Office Temporary.

"A year and a half ago, I was typing for them. Over a period of three years I kept auditioning for 'Tonight'. After my fifth audition, they put me on—but late."

She clicked and has returned for "nine shows if you count reruns, and I do." She has several more appearances lined up.

She's a confirmed New Yorker and says that all the pilots she is writing for herself take place in New York. "I don't think they will be able to shoot them on a back lot in Hollywood. I think if I was very exquisite I would love California very much. But I'm the kind who can put on a neat sports shirt, and it immediately wrinkles. Once I had lunch with a large table full of people in California and I was the ugliest one there—and they were all men."
