Lupton Asks GOP Invite Sen. Dirksen

HARTFORD (AP)-The regular state Republican organization has been asked to invite Sen. Everett M. Dirksen, R-III., to speak in Connecticut.

The request was made Sunday night by John M. Lupton, executive director of an organization before which Dirksen had been scheduled to speak Nov. 29.

Dirksen canceled out on the appearance Friday because of what Lupton called pressure from the regular state GOP organization.

Toll Tops '64 Mark

HARTFORD (AP) - With two months still to go in 1965, the traffic death toll in the state already exceeds the figure for all of last year.

Six highway deaths this weekend boosted the total for the year to 330. The total for all 12 months of 1964—with an extra day for leap year-was 325.

CR&L Strike Off

BRIDGEPORT (AP) - A scheduled strike against the Connecticut Railway & Lighting Co. was headed off early this morning two hours before the bus drivers had threatened to walk out.

Negotiators for CR&L and the Amalgamated Transit Union, AFL-CIO, began their meeting at 3 p.m. Sunday and successfully concluded it after 1 a.m. Details of the contract agreement were not disclosed. The pact will be voted on by the ion membership, with the ion recommending approval.

questions of where was Lyndon. But an examination of the actual "endorsement" reveals that it was most slapped down on a candidacy. It was in that convalescence which we think is sometimes good for both the nation and the President, another of those instances in which Press Secretary Bill Moyers was acting as the President's official spokesman.

And the statement in which, in answer to news conference questions, he expressed the President's support of the Democratic candidate in New York was a remarkable document.

It included, as one of its ringing phrases on behalf of Beame, the follow-"The President has never supporte a Republican nominee for office." The inference might have been that the President has never supported a Republican nominee for office no matter how great the temptation. Press Secretary Moyers produced another dynamic thrust in behalf of Beame in the following passage about the Presiden't position: "You asked me, and this is his position. Mr. Beame knows that if the President voted in New York he would cast his vote for Mr. Beame and his ticket." And, at the very end of the news conference, the following exchange oc-

Mistakes Within The Mistake

The error was a "simple one." All it involved was the transposition of two numbers in a six-digit "map coordinate" given to the pilots of two American planes. Instead of writing 23, somebody wrote down 32. When the two American planes dropped their bombs by that coordinate, 48 civilians in a possibly peaceful Vietnamese village died as a result of the white phosphorous and the fragmentation bombs dropped on them. The American pilots flying this mission had had their own doubts that this was a village they were supposed to bomb. But when they checked back before they dropped their bombs, their mission was confirmed for them.

One of the pilots noticed that the villagers down below didn't seem to be hurrying out of the way of the bombs. But he had noticed civilians pursuing normal tasks in other villages that had been bombed. This was one of the regrettable errors of war. The transposition of the two numbers which caused it was apparently the mistake of a native Vietnamese officer—apparently his innocent mistake, although he may have to prove that in court-martial proceedings. The other day, in Vietnam, there was another similarly tragic error. This time a small group of American soliders paid for it with their lives, when, by mistake, they walked into the fire of one of their own units. And the other day, in Connecticut, there was another tragic error in the grim business of war. Somebody subdituted live ammunition for the harmless variety in reservé training maneuvers, and a life was taken, on the training field in Connecticut, which was probably just as precious to its own owner and to family and friends as the other lives, American or Vietnamese, lost w mistake in Vietnam.

Few of us need to have such tragic ecidents remind us that war itself is a edy. It is tragic when it kills by mildly shocked and ask why when there is an accident, or a transposal of two imbers, or a mistake with ammunition, and somebody is killed unintentionally. It is to be hoped that people still have an instinct, now and then to ask some kind of why when they see a supposedly civilized mankind devoting its most lavish resources to the business of killing intentionally. Perhaps if that too, the intentional killing, could be viewed as some kind of secident some unintentional transposition of digits, some mistake with ammunition, some lapse in intelligence work, some kind of human error, we might work a little harder at eradicating it Meanwhile, however, the irony of our civilization continues asserting itself. It is being regarded, over in Vietnam, as more of a crime to kill somebody unintentionally than it is to kill somebody This concept is faithful enough to the rules and principles of the institution of war. It is, in fact, part of the legal defi-But there are many who think that we, in our fated time, have reached that moment in which we can no longed afford the moral luxury of pretending that war can be a "civilized" thing in any way or degree or standard—that moment in which, if we want anybody to be able to live on this earth, we must abandon the organized use of military force which makes man kill man either by accident or by intent.

Vocational Morality

In today's discussions about morality and young people, sex usually gets the headlines. Yet the effort to define mature sexual ethics is only part of the moral challenge faced by the young. For many of them it appears that questions of private mores are accompanied or overshadowed by questions of blic responsibility. Sometimes a show of social commitment may be irresponsibly used to excuse lack of moral concern in personal relationships. But the more perceptive young people see that public and private morality must develop together if they are to grow as

An obvious point of contact is in what has been called "vocational morality." It has some of the old sense of "vocation"—what am I as an individual meant to do? And it has some of the new sense of service to society-what can I as a human being do for my fellows? It refers both to the values sought in choosing a vocation and to the standards observed in practicing it, A colloquial reference to the topic appears in the back-to-college issue of Esquire magazine. "Once I saw this Ingmar Bergman movie, "The Magician," says a former math major who dropped out to participate in a freedom school. "There was this guy in it who was a traveling actor who says he's had just one prayer all his life: 'Use God,' he says, 'make use of me.' And all of a sudden it's like looking at myself, you know? Because that's meno kidding, it really is. I mean I've asked myself all sorts of questions like: Why was I born? What am I doing here?' I want to serve some useful purpose. . . . I mean, if a man's life serves no useful purpose he might as well be a vegetable or something." This is almost like a caricature of what others put in different ways. Many who drop out of school do so only temporarily, until they have better clarified what they want to do. Many do not drop out but see how they can maintain their vocational morality while pursuing regular channels toward its fulfillment. For those in positions to choose their life work-and not merely take what they can get-the kind of choice matters. The job with the easy buck is out, the job with the tough challenge is in. But, again, private and public morality converge in the way that any job -whether chosen or taken of necessity-is done. This is a vocational morality that has been practiced throughout history by many who have never heard the term.

Perhaps vocational morality is now cause for comment in the United States because the prevailing affluence could tempt the young to forget it. To one professionally concerned with young people, there are signs that American youth "will not easily resist a cult of private sunshine, and secluded complacency which denies them a capacity or freedom for sympathy, fellowship and compassion for others."

Yale Chaplain William S. Coffin has urged the importance of vocational morality in a society "that is encouraging us to love things and use people." It is in an effort to reverse the case, to love people and keep things in their place, that the conscientious young are trying to match moral precepts with moral action. In effect, they are saying, "By their fruits ye shall know them" - an idea many accept not because "the Bible says so" but because its accuracy can be rationally discerned as much today as in Biblical times. The continuing need is to take the next step, to see that moral action depends on-and results from-an understanding that, as Jesus said, "inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these my brethren, ye have done it unto me."

The validity of this insight derives not only from Scriptural authority. I comes from the fact that what Jesus said and did can, and must, be preved in personal and public morality today, CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR

How do you get our oil burner serviceman to come at 3 A.M.?

PHONE HIM AT 2:30

3 A.M. or 12 noon. Our own serviceman stands ready to come to the aid of any chilly homeowner 24 hours a day-7 days a week. What's more, because we're backed by Mobil's Technical Research, our man uses the most modern methods and materials to prevent heating failure and to keep your fuel bills lower than you thought possible. Take our furnace-cleaning service, for example. A clean furnace burns more efficiently and saves you money on fuel, heats more dependably and saves you money on furnace repairs. We use Mobil Oil Burner Cleaner; it's a liquid chemical that thoroughly and safely cleans internal burner parts while your burner is actually operating. Remember, there's a big difference in distributors. We'd like to show you just how big that difference can be.

Red Raiders Bow In Finale, 20-14

Ending the season on a dismal note, the Manchester Pony Red Raiders were upended by Windsor, 20 - 14, Sunday. The Raiders, last year's champions, wind up the campaing with a 2 5 record. It was the second loss to Windsor this fall.

Doing all the scoring for the locals was Frank Woods, collecting two touchdowns and two extra points on a rush to gush his season total to 35 points.

Woods went 60 yards with a punt return for Manchester's first score and added another on a 40-yard pass play.

Elsewhere in scattered, offyear elections, statewide balloting in New Jersey and Virginia plus contests in a half-dozen Eastern and Midwestern cities - held the spotlight. Moderate to heavy voting was the word from polling places in Virginia and elsewhere. President Johnson was first man to vote at his home polling place in Johnson City, Tex. A big issue in Texas was whether to add two years to the constitutional provision setting the terms of governors at two In many of the contests here and there in the nation, Republicans were trying to supplent Democratic office-holders. The results will be scrutinized closely for possible portents for the 1966 congressional and 1966 presidential elections.

Most interest has centered on New York City. An estimated 2.5 million of the city's 3.6 mil lion eligible voters are expected to decide a hotly contested may or's race between Democrati Beame and Rep. John V, Lin say, a Republican running with Liberal party backing at the head of a fusion ticket.

Straw polls indicate a close vote. The race is complicated by the presence of a third candi-
