South Windsor Town Council Guarantees Avery Water Line Payment

The South Windsor town council has authorized the town to guarantee payment of $2,000 for the installation of a water main to serve the Pond Lane area in the Avery Heights subdivision.

The council authorized Town Manager Jerry Sprentel to enter into an agreement with the Water Co. to guarantee payment of the sum for the purchase and installation of a main 300 feet from the company's terminal water main to a main on Pond Lane.

The motion was made on the understanding that the Avery Heights Water Assn. is to save the town harmless on this guarantee.

Town Atty. Frank Ahearn said that residents of the area would be responsible for the water service provided by the Water Co. if the town were to take over the system as an association. Unfortunately, several weeks after the transaction, the pump broke and the association was without funds to have it repaired.

The group had previously planned to connect to the Manchester company's system on a stand-by basis in case of a breakdown, but the breakdown occurred before action could be taken.

Ahearn said that 217 houses in the development are without water and the situation is of an emergency nature.

The council was requested to guarantee payment of the charge for establishing service until January, when bills for water service would be paid into the association and it, in turn, could pay the Manchester Co. for the water service.

Area Weather

WINDSOR, LOCKS (AP)—Connecticut is getting a preview of winter today, with temperatures in the 20's and very strong northwest winds.

The weatherman says that temperatures are not expected to rise above the 20's, and that the northwest winds will reach gusts of 40 miles an hour or more.

Southern New England will get no significant amounts of snow, but some flurries are expected.

Winds began diminishing tonight and temperatures fall into the 20's again. The same wind will also hold the temperature up tonight. Friday is expected to be more pleasant, with lighter winds and highs in the low 40's.

The very intense storm center that brought the cold weather to New England is located just north of Maine this morning. Because it is moving very slowly eastward, it will continue to dominate Connecticut's weather through Friday.

TRAVEL OUTLAY DOUBLES

NEW YORK — The number of American overseas travelers has more than doubled since 1955. American travel expenditure in foreign countries has also more than doubled and now is $2.2 billion a year.

The consulting firm of Brown, Donald and Associates has been engaged by the commission to prepare a proposal for updating the comprehensive plan.

Carino said at the Nov. 3 meeting that he had just been informed that in order to be able to file the application for federal aid before Jan. 1, the request had to be presented to the State Development Commission by Nov. 1.

(A three day extension was granted by the state before the Nov. 3 meeting. The planning commission subsequently made its application, although funds had not been approved by the state.)

Carino said the commission sought assurance that funds would be made available when the request for assistance was approved by the government.

The council held an executive session with four members of the planning and zoning commission after the meeting for further discussion and consideration of the matter.

A meeting was held last week with a representative of the consulting firm, the council and planning and zoning commission on professional services, he said.

Carino said that, "Rejection tonight of the appropriation is, in effect, rejection of the plan."

Del Mastro said that the plan was not being rejected, but that the appropriation of $10,000 in the proposed budget was the proper basis upon which to question the plan.

East Windsor said that he had a comprehensive plan drawn that cost $12,000 in the town share being $4,000.

The two towns are very close to the same area.

Mayor Throve said that the State Development Commission has suggested to him that bids or alternate proposals be sought. He said that he would further study the plan, and that the plan would be presented to the planning and zoning commission, the same plan and same firm was recommended, at least $10,000 would have been completed a plan at a total cost of $9,000, of which the town paid only $4,000 under the government assistance program.

Throve said.

Plans may be submitted to the federal agencies every three months, the mayor continued, and government assistance has been con-

STUDY Seed Labels

WASHINGTON — In buying grass seed—or any other seed—it pays to read the label. Any seed shipped across a state line—and most of it is—must carry a truthful label listing the percentage of pure seed, the amount of inert matter, the germination rate, and the date of the test.

School Plan Fund OK'd, But Debt Brings Doubts

Plans for a $210,000 school building fund were approved by the town board last night, but the heavy debt it would create has caused some doubts.

The board voted to issue $210,000 in bonds to pay for the building. The bonds will be sold in two series, one for $100,000 and another for $110,000. The first series will be sold at a 6 percent interest rate, and the second series at a 7 percent rate.

The board also approved a plan to issue $100,000 in bonds to pay for the building. The bonds will be sold in two series, one for $50,000 and another for $50,000. The first series will be sold at a 6 percent interest rate, and the second series at a 7 percent rate.

Product Not an Issue Debate Centers on Reasons For Vote on Constitution

Although Prof. Albert Waugh of Storrs and Miss Vivian Kellems of Vernon both agreed last night that the recent Constitutional Convention produced excellent results, the two Republicans were at opposite poles on the Dec. 14 statewide consideration of the new constitution.

Prof. Waugh, who was a convention delegate from the Second District, strongly urged approval, saying, "I think you should support the work of the convention, even though I agree with the majority who say that it is not unusual to find a ratio of one adult for every 8 to 15 pupils. For exceptional children, the adult staff numbers even higher. The percentage of national income spent for education increased to about 15 per cent in 1964."

Miss Kellems, who, at 69, has cut down her own income to a minimum, urged rejection of the new constitution, saying, "I am not justifying the U.S. Supreme Court decision in 'Brown v. Board of Education' as a triumph of justice. I am not justifying the U.S. Supreme Court decision in 'Brown v. Board of Education' as a triumph of justice. Cold Rains Clear Steps Of Loafers

ROME (AP)—The first cold rains of fall have helped police clear Rome of the unwashed, unshaven, unruly loafers who cluttered the Spanish Steps all summer.

Amused tourists, ashamed Romans and perplexed police were glad to see them go. Francesco La Mola, chief of the foreign section of the Rome police, summed up the shabby set: "They stink."

"Twenty of the foreign beatniks were deported. A dozen unshaven Italians who loitered with them on the steps beneath Trinita Dei Monti were scolded off by threats of haircuts by force.

Rain and cold discouraged the rest.

Police couldn't remember anything to equal the Spanish Steps loafer problem which developed this year.

Unkempt youths swarmed in and all but took over the wide stairs beneath the window of the room where Keats wrote his poetry, where fashionable shopping streets where tourists throng.

They annoyed passing women with their remarks and other tourists by insistently begging alms. And they annoyed every body by their looks.

Subversion Key Problem At Inter-American Talks

RIO DE JANEIRO (AP)—Foreign ministers of the West, Of the five Latin American nations which sent troops to join the Americans in the peace force formed by the Organization of American States, Brazil sent the biggest number.

Rusk, heading the U.S. delegation to the conference, declined public comment on the Brazilian proposal at this time. He planned to deliver the American speech early next week, after some other delegates have had their say.

Neither Castello Branco nor the U.S. delegation have proposed that this conference create a standby OAS force to tackle future Dominican-type crises.

A U.S. delegation source said a standby emergency unit might well be desirable and probably a bare majority of the 18 hemisphere ministers here could be mustered for it. But he said the issue is worth discussing rather than forcing a division at this time.

Further action, such as amending the OAS Charter, could be taken at another conference called for this purpose next spring. The current meeting is undertaking a basic relook at the concept of aggression and intervention," he said.

His keynote rang harmoniously with a theme sounded by Castello Branco, a former army chief of staff who came to power in a military coup just weeks ago. He said it was promoting real peace by November.

New England Restoration—Part II

Projects Moving Forward In All Six Area States

BOSTON (AP)—Despite a momentary stir over a suggestion that New England scrap its "Pilgrim Image," restoration projects in all six states are moving ahead at full tilt.

The 208-year-old Wash Webster House in West Hartford, Conn., the Calvin Coolidge birthplace in Plymouth, Vt., the Robert Frost home in Derry, N.H., all are the objects of current restoration projects.

Here is a brief account of some of the restoration projects.

The core of the original business district of New Bedford is undergoing restoration of its architecturally interesting old buildings.

The Waterfront Historic Area League is operating in conjunction with the city's urban renewal program to restore the best of the old buildings.

Old forts in New Hampshire, Maine, Vermont and Rhode Island also are being attacked by the restorationists.

Others suggested there was room for both the modern and traditional and that restoration was an attempt to save "the best of the old." In fact on several New England projects urban renewal funds are being used for restoration.

Johnsons Anniversary Too Gala White House Party Honors British Princess

WASHINGTON (AP)—It was "Everything's Coming Up Roses" as President Johnson launched the dancing with Princess Margaret at a candlelit White House party honoring the royal British visitor and her husband.

The gay, informal festivities, also marking the Johnsons' 12th wedding anniversary—went on until 2 a.m. and the fragrant wafts shared equal billing in the East Ballroom.

The princess and her husband, Lord Snowdon, were enjoying themselves "wildly," said lady-waiting Elizabeth Cavendish.

And the President, in a happy mood himself, drew rounds of champagne toast to the princess, capped by advice to Lord Snowdon from his own formula for a happy marriage.

He said: "I have learned that only two things are necessary to keep one's wife happy.

"First, let her think she is having her own way. And second, let her have it."

Paul Beatifies Pope Pius, John

Pope Paul's statement on the beatification of Pope Pius and John the Baptist had long been expected. He said he felt there was no need for great changes but the "reformation" would be slow and partial, but that the status on the Holy Office would show his intentions.

A jubilee is an indulgence, or a remission of temporal punishment due for sin, granted over a specific period to persons taking part in prayers and services for a special intention announced by the Pope. In this case Pope Paul said the jubilee would be to spread the message of truth and charity of the council and to exhort Roman Catholics to a "ministry of reconciliation" with all men of good will.

Pope Paul established the synod—or senate—of bishops, with representatives from various nations, to advise him on various matters after the council ends. Many experts feel it will amount to a sort of continuation of the council.

The two decrees of the Ecumenical Council promulgated today were on the apostolate of the laity and on divine revelation.

During the council session, the prelates took a final vote on the two documents. The divine revelation decree was approved by a vote of 2,344, the laity decree by 2,352.

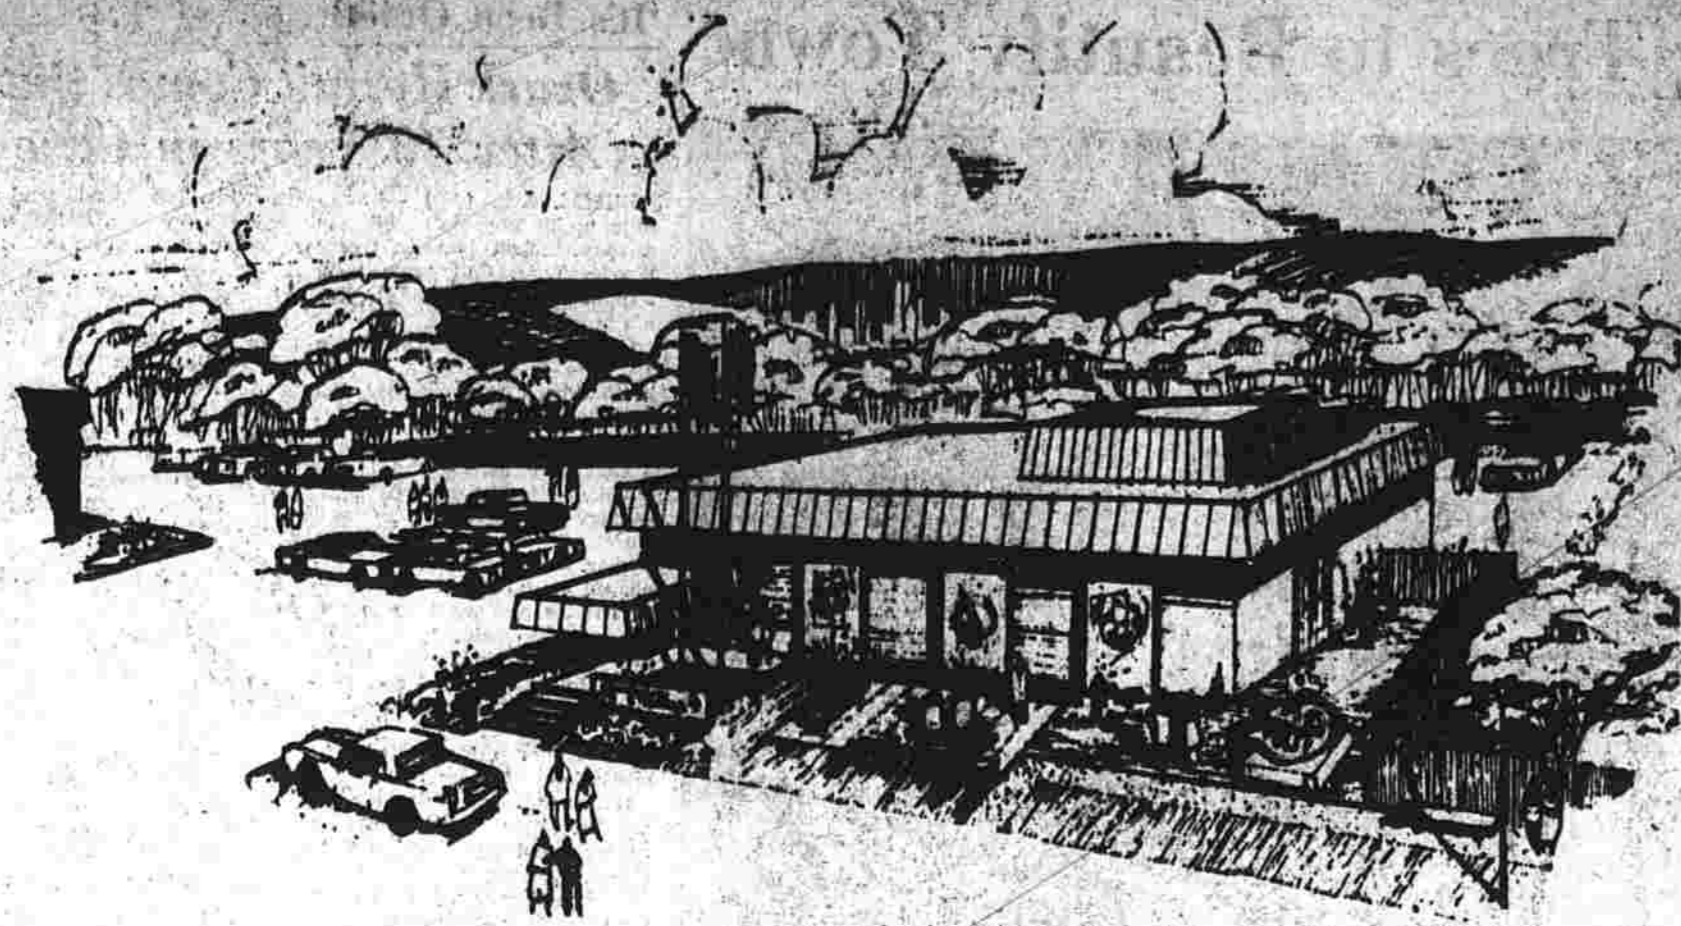

Pope Paul then promulgated the two decrees.

The decree on the laity bids Roman Catholic laymen play an active role in their church and recommends creation of a Vatican secretariat for the laity.

The decree on divine revelation says both Scripture and the traditions of the Church "merge into a unity" in handing down the word of God. It encourages the preparation by Protestant and Catholic scholars, working together, of Bible translations for interdenominational use.

The general contents of both decrees were known before their promulgation. The complete texts became public with today's ceremony.

The documents are the 11th and 12th issued by the council since it began in 1962. Four more will be issued before the council ends Dec. 8.

Nike Garage Transformed into College Building

In an architect's imagination, any homely, unassuming stonework is a Cinderella waiting to be transformed into a palace. This is Manchester architect Philip diCorcia's conception of what a once military garage for jeeps and trucks at the old Nike site off Kee-ney St. will look like about a year from now. Outside wall panels of pre-cast concrete and an overhead, brightly colored fascia will have transformed the now yawning garage into Manchester Community College's campus theater and lecture hall. What is now only a scraggly patchwork of dead grass and gravel will be transformed into a promenade of greenery and cement, encompassing an attractive waiting court with benches. With a probable capacity of about 250 persons, the hall would also serve as an auditorium. The view here is to the west with Hartford lying out in the distance. Other buildings on the new campus for the community colleges will display a similar modest beauty, colorful, patrolled by shrubbery, enhanced by the natural attractiveness of the surrounding landscape. DiCorcia, chosen for the community college project in September, has also designed the new, almost completed, United Synagogues building in West Hartford and has been designated as the architect for the new Pioneer Aerodynamics Inc. plant in Manchester.

WATES Program Surprises Ward

Harvey Ward of Hartford, the only male member of Manchester WATES, was surprised Tuesday night by being chosen as the subject of a "This is Your Life" program at a meeting at the Italian American Club on Edridge St. The occasion marked his 10th anniversary in the club.

Director of all the "Tons of Fun" shows presented by the WATES, Ward has also directed many of their activities.

He was presented with a book filled with all the events he participated in during the past 10 years and his wife received a large corsage. A relay tray was also presented to the couple.

Mrs. Kenneth Griffin made and decorated a "This is Your Life" book cake.

Members of a program committee were Mrs. William Krar, Mrs. John Fawcett, Mrs. Felix Gremmo, Mrs. Charles Thompson, Mrs. Allen Hoffman and Mrs. Bertram Bennett.

Members Sought By Skating Club

The Skating Club of Bolton has announced that it is opening its membership to all Manchester residents and those in surrounding communities. Family or single memberships are available. Those interested in joining may contact Mrs. Daniel Donovan, Converse Rd., Bolton, membership chairman.

First organized by three Bolton families, a clubhouse was erected in 1907 on the edge of Sperry's Glen. In 1964 the board of directors voted to replace the small building with a larger, heated building at the same location. Sperry's Glen on Rt. 86, just over the Manchester-Bolton line.

Hired help with professional equipment maintain a clear ice surface for skating. Coffee is served in the clubhouse. Mrs. Ruth Arendt of Bolton, professional ice skating director, is available for lessons. Music for skating is played over loud speakers.

More than 60 families are members of the club and ages range 3 to 80. The club produces skating shows each season and has many special activities. The public may skate, whenever the flag is raised, by paying a nominal fee.

The board of directors are Arthur Kehl, president; Russell Foster, vice president; Kenneth Matthews, Mrs. Joseph Hadden, Mrs. David Donovan, Mrs. George Sloanberg, Edward Gimolanski and Don Foxworth.

From Your Neighbor's Kitchen

By DONIS BELDING

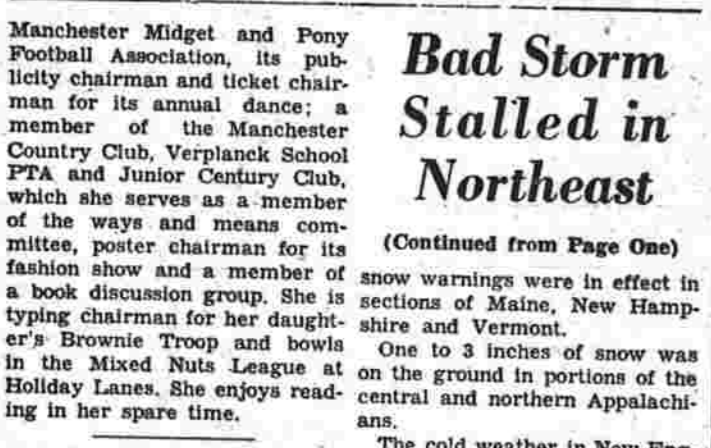

- Mrs. Rodney Dolin of 11 Linn St. makes Marble Cake and Swedish Rolls from recipes that came from her husband's grandmother, who originated the idea for the variation of the cake.
- 1 Marble Cake
 - 2 cups cake flour
 - 1 teaspoon baking powder
 - 1/2 teaspoon salt
 - 1/2 cup shortening
 - 1/2 cup sugar
 - 1 cup milk
 - 1 egg white, beaten
 - 1 Chocolate Mixture
 - 3 squares melted chocolate
 - 1/2 cup boiling water
 - 1/2 teaspoon baking soda
 - 1 large tube pan

1. Sift together flour, baking powder, and salt and set aside. Cream shortening and sugar until light and fluffy. Add to stiffly beaten egg whites gradually, beating after each addition. Gently fold in beaten whites of eggs and chocolate mixture. Mix all ingredients of chocolate mixture and add to one-third of white batter. Stir well. Grease large tube pan and by spoonful alternately fill with chocolate and white batter. Run a small knife around the pan once to blend colors. Bake in 325-degree oven for 55 minutes or until cake springs back when tested.

2. For the variation, after separating the dough and blending one-third of it with the chocolate mixture, separate the remaining white batter into small amounts and color each a different shade with food coloring. Place alternating colors in pan by spoonful. Run a small knife around pan to blend colors. Colors may be used to complement the season or occasion. Bake the same as for basic marble cake. Do not use cake or cake will be dry.

- 1 Swedish Rolls
 - 1/2 yeast cake, dissolved in warm water
 - 1/2 tablespoon shortening
 - 1 quart milk, plus
 - 1/2 teaspoon salt
 - 1/2 caraway seeds, crushed
1. In large bowl cut shortening into five cups flour. Add salt and sugar. Add milk gradually with additional flour until milk is used up and mixture is the consistency of bread dough. (This usually takes about five cups flour.) Add remaining ingredients and mix. Cover top ingredients and mix. Cover dough and let rise about six hours or overnight. Form rolls about one-half inch thick on cookie sheets and let rise again until double in size. Bake in 400-degree oven for 15 to 20 minutes or until golden brown. This recipe yields 35 to 40 rolls. They may be frozen and heated in a bun warmer before serving.

The cold weather in New England followed a major storm which deposited 2 to 3 inches of snow in the northern hills Wednesday.

In the early-morning hours, 9 inches of snow covered the ground at Newport, Vt. seven inches of it fell within six hours. Berlin, N.H., reported a 4-inch fall within the six-hour period, which, nevertheless, remained the most important buyer, taking 100 million pounds.

Behind the storm, a vast pool of cold air settled across the nation's midsection and forced its way deep into the South, where 40-degree readings were noted in the Gulf Coast states. Early morning readings ranged from 15 to 20 degrees in the South.

Daytime Break Occurs at Home

Police are investigating a daytime break yesterday into the home of Mrs. Peter Sterns at 800 Center St.

Somewhat 100 items were taken, a desk and other furniture after breaking a small pane in a window and then locking the window. The window is off an enclosed porch. The porch door was unlocked. A number of items were disturbed, but Mrs. Sterns was unable to tell police what was taken, without a further check. The break occurred between 8 a.m. and 7 p.m.

Paycheck for the Retarded Brings Escape from Oblivion

By RICHARD KRASDA

Awesome that the poor in intellect must, as though by divine decree, inevitably be withy plodding in the dust of societies they can never fully join, shunned or reviled, thought of as something on the fringe of humankind.

There is no escape from the mathematical certainty of this rule of biological probability — that a certain small percentage of births must produce individuals whose mental capacities are either diametrically below or strikingly superior to the narrow range of intelligence shared by the vast majority. There is only an escape into the unreality of hiding the poorly endowed from sight, forcing them into institutions or into the anonymity of family protection.

Historically, this drastic retreat from the world has been the natural fate of the mentally deficient; prevented from exercising any human quality at all, he has been expelled into the oblivion of the criminal or the insane, or to the ghastly ward to himself and expensive care for society. History has started to think more logically about this problem only within the last decade.

Perhaps impelled by the philosophies of the Kennedys, administration, educators and businessmen are now looking more objectively into the possibilities of training these individuals for careers in the active world of normal people, humble though they might be. In Connecticut, for example, the Southern Training School and the Manchester Training Center have for a number of years been known for their efforts in nurturing in their repertoire of paying skills. Southernbury has even succeeded in this with a man having an I.Q. of 36.

This year, on a determined quest for the first time in its history, Manchester is trying to educate for a fuller life those students previously thought uneducable. Combining work experience with classroom time, Manchester High School is preparing 15 students for a place in the working world.

Six of these students are now actually spending half of their school time at work at Manchester Memorial Hospital, at Bunce Center and at W. T. Grant, doing, naturally, their routine tasks. Most important though is that each is working for a wage, part of which is reimbursed to the employer by the state's division of vocational rehabilitation.

A very ordinary thing, a paycheck, something that most people look upon as almost too small. But consider what it might mean to one of these students, possibly already resigned to a life of total dependence on someone else.

Norman Fendell, director of the program, describes the first time in their lives a sense of success. Each has spent years in failing at virtually everything. In fondering helplessly while their playmates go through life in comparative ease.

"Now they can feel as though they were a real part of their own families because they are earning money just like their parents. This program also gives them a head start in the job market after graduation, now so complex that it would otherwise be almost impossible for such an individual to obtain employment in competition with school dropouts or transients who might be more alert mentally."

Fendell thinks that the primary role of the mentally limited in society could be in the realm of the repetitious and the otherwise monotonous duties which will remain no matter what the complexity of the civilization. He points to the simple task of a never-endingly changed and thereby hold.

Where Manchester's program to be copied throughout the U. S., it would mean an invitation to a productive job for about five million persons now handicapped and thereby held.

Some are witty to a remarkable degree, others are highly sophisticated, some seem to understand humor, a few are shy, and one seems to have a temperance habit of the part of the scholar who always seems to know all the answers.

Of course, the answers in this class are not like those in the regular classes. Much of the academic work is based on the practical work experience they are receiving. For example, in arithmetic they would study how deductions are made on paychecks; their work material would be tax withholding forms and income tax forms.

In spelling exercises, instead of wrestling with words such as—egregious, fatuous, parliamentary, they are asked to check—swiss on ty, galsin, chocolate, words that they might later use in cafeteria work, for example, they are asked to spell correctly words that might be required in filling out the children arranged for the program.

Lawrence Studt, might be the hospital procedure manual. In a home economics class they would learn how to experiment in the Head Start and do simple flower arranging. Some of the students with higher aptitudes would be worked into an auto shop class million would probably remain untrainable for paying jobs. What it might mean to the nation's economy is quite calculable. The average cost in an institution for the lifetime of one individual is about $200,000. This they become taxpayers rather than tax burdens.

Much remains to be said for the mentally deficient person, however, beyond his capacity for enduring monotonous work. In the first place, it must be understood that a mentally retarded individual need not necessarily be socially retarded or artistically retarded. It is true that often one condition produces the other, but on the other hand those individuals can sometimes demonstrate a certain narrowly bounded areas.

It is perhaps a childlike deduction to ask that an employer might not consider it a waste of money to employ a few of these students, maintaining that "their job becomes the center of their lives; they are much more sincere in their work than their 'normal' counterparts. In hiring such an employee, we gain a faithful worker for years, not a few months."

They are definitely not like the Mendelian images conjured up by many people. Many of these people identified as imbecile or idiotic in their childhood, but these people don't realize it that while some are mentally deficient persons are readily identifiable characteristics, many others have walked through their lives without even being recognized.

Fendell avers that this label of "retarded" is his greatest aversion. "It immediately brings to a person's mind a medieval image of an animal, a deformed, monstrous being, a creature that is not human. It is a degrading and a humiliating term, but the majority look and behave like the average person in many respects. In fact, they are a very heterogeneous group; some are deficient in only a couple of areas, some even look bright, others are handicapped, basically by eyesight. Some are deaf, some are epileptic, some are autistic. You can't put a coat of one description over them."

The students need to be as diverse in their psychological patterns as any typical collection of high school students.

Some are witty to a remarkable degree, others are highly sophisticated, some seem to understand humor, a few are shy, and one seems to have a temperance habit of the part of the scholar who always seems to know all the answers.

Of course, the answers in this class are not like those in the regular classes. Much of the academic work is based on the practical work experience they are receiving. For example, in arithmetic they would study how deductions are made on paychecks; their work material would be tax withholding forms and income tax forms.

Lawrence Studt, might be the hospital procedure manual. In a home economics class they would learn how to experiment in the Head Start and do simple flower arranging. Some of the students with higher aptitudes would be worked into an auto shop class making the former especially valuable in working with little children.

One explanation comes from Miss Josephine Handley, teacher at the Wadwell School Head Start center, who says that "These children have a great deal of love to give and they give it all." Fendell believes that much could be made of the students' services in nurseries and kindergarten classes, help the teachers in their routine tasks and thus freeing them for more actual teaching.

Finally, the program is a blessing for the parents of the students who helped out in the Head Start project didn't have a care. He has already spent a summer cooking at a drive-in. Two of the students have had experience in carrying pre-school children during last summer's experimental program. After the sessions were over, the students were given a project—the report that seems to flow between the mentally handicapped and very young children of normal intelligence.

Two Thai Visitors Study Local Government Set-Up

South Windsor's town government is the subject of a study being conducted by two government administrators from Thailand this week.

Compressor Bids Opened by Town

The Construction Equipment Co. of Windsor is the apparent low bidder for furnishing the town water department with a new compressor.

The men have been in Connecticut for four weeks, and it submitted the two lowest bids for a compressor was $24,610.

Both have expressed great interest in the political party system in this country and during their stay here, have attended a board of education meeting and last night's town council meeting.

Suppose noted that one interesting policy they had observed in town participation in attracting industry to locate in specific areas.

In Thailand, the men commented, the national government has primary responsibility for local functions, rather than local government.

The education system in Thailand is also under national control, and is compulsory for seven years.

While Buddhism is the principal religion of the country, Moslem and Christian sects are also represented.

Freedom of religion is allowed by the king, Supote said.

New U.S. Studies Opened to Slow Gold Outflow

WASHINGTON (AP) — A heavy flow of American money overseas late this summer has triggered new studies of foreign travel and investments in an effort to bring the nation's international accounts into balance.

The moves were announced after a government report released late Wednesday showed a balance of payments deficit of $485 million for the July-September third quarter period.
