In the exchange of letters which has occurred between the Italian Foreign Minister who is also President of the United Nations General Assembly and Secretary Rusk, the United States has already actually discussed prospective conditions for a cease fire. Anything the United States can do, in the interal while this feeler still has life, to dramatize and sharpen its willingness to join in an equitable cease-fire, if it can conceivably be arranged and controlled, would be powerful diplomacy indeed. The word from Washington is that we are cautious and suspicious of Hanol's good intentions. It needs to be remembered that Hanoi cannot be expected to have great faith in our word or intentions either. But opponents who do not trust each other in the slightest have previously somehow managed to avoid destroying the world they live in. The present moment offers Washington not just an opportunity for reluctant parrying, or merely for making sure it can't be held guilty for the blow-up and break-down of one more peace possibil-Ity; it offers Washington the positive opportunity for moves which might break the Vietnam issue out of the horrible deadend of continued escalation of killing. And Secretary Rusk's letter, in contrast to the public speeches he has been making during these precise days in which this slight diplomatic feeler has been in existence, does show a touch of such positive, rather than merely negative, imagination and pol-

Meany's Resolution

The AFL-CIO Convention at San Francisco wound up adopting a resolution of support for President Johnson's course in Vietnam which had the unprecedented strength not only of backing what he has done there to date, but of promising in advance to support anything and everything else he does there. Such an historic "blank check" was made possible by the interplay of several factors. One, of course, is the hawk-school foreign policy of George Meany, presidemand for a change in the essential one, and Proposal Two had been put on dent of the national labor organization, the ballot without so much as a public as opposed to the familiar liberalism of such union figures as Walter Reuther. Proud Land (Continued from Page One) neers," which describe how the region was settled. The newest settlers, Basque shepherds from Spain, show Preston how their European ways survive in this new land. The Mormon Tabernacle Choir sings "Give Me Your Tired, Your Poor," Irving Berlin's musical setting of Emma Lazarus' poem on the Statue of Laberty.

Colorado cattle ranches Bob Johnston, who rides herd on his 102,000-acre spread from the pilot's seat of his small plane, explains that today's cowboy lives a most modern life. Preston points out that some traditions still persist as he mines gold with prospector Bill Knitzenheiser in Blackhawk,
