Miss Bollman, who has been making up Army and Air Force menus for six years, said in an interview that the most important thing is to give the troops the holiday meal they are accustomed to.

"We try to keep it pretty traditional," she said, She says that it costs only about $1.36 a meal to get the estimated three million pounds around the world. Miss Bollman said that the master menu, which she begins preparing 18 months in advance, is now being used by the Army everywehere except in Eruope and by all Air Force installations in the United States. She estimates her Christmas meals will fill half a million GIa.

It wasn't always that way. But, she said, every year more and more overseas commands adopted the master menu until now, every Army installation in the Pacific is using it — includ-ing those in Viet Nam.

Overrules Red Bloc's Opposition

UNITED NATIONS. N. Y. (AP)—The U.N. Budgetary Committee approved over Soviet bloc opposition today a resolution to appropriate $33.9 million to finance the Middle East emergency force through

The General Assembly's 117nation committee approved the eight-nation draft by a vote of 38-14, with 37 abstentions.

The United States abstained, U.S. Rep. Peter H. B. Frelinghuysen, R-N.J., told the committee he could not support the resolution since Congress decided in 1952 that the United States should pay no more than a third of the assessed U.N. expenses. The resolution, if approved by the General Assembly, would have it pay nearly two-fifths.

Frelinghuysen added, however, that if approved, the U.S. mission would ask Congress to make an appropriation. He is a member of the U.S. delegation to the General Assembly.

The resolution, introduced by Canada, ran into objections from the Soviet Union and other Communist countries. They voiced their usual argument that the Security Council - not the assembly — was the sole authority to originate and finance peacekeeping operations.

In an attempt to offset Communist bloc objections, Ghana proposed inserting a proviso to the appropriations. It said they were made "without prejudice to the positions of principle hich might be taken by member states on possible recommendations of the special com-

The Lesser Nightmare

It was the brave hope and proclamation of Charles de Gaulle, when he came back to power to resolve his nation's crisis in Algeria, that he would also, by means of a new French Constitution, create a more coherent and responsible pattern for French politics.

Whether there is, in the new Constitution which he did get adopted, any real pattern of reliable change in the game of French politics is still obscure, primarily because the answer has never been tried. The individual candidacy, leadership and rule of de Gaulle himself has been the substitute for any current French efforts at self government. Until de Gaulle goes, France will never know whether it has developed a new capacity to stand on its own politi-

But France, in the run-off election vesterday, made a kind of guess. Or, at least, it looked at what it had in the way and shape of any present alternative to de Gaulle, and drew back from the sight and prospect.

Yesterday, in a world which seems to be being beaten down, continually, toward choices between evils, the people of France had something of a choice between nightmares. One of these nightmares—the possibility of too sickly a national reliance on the image of one man-had dominant position in the fears of the French peobrought out a majority of votes against the very man who seemed to have saved the nation from defeat and chaos. But in the run-off election vesterday the nightmare of what French politics could be like without de Gaulle, the memory of what it had been like before he took over and resolved the issue of Algeria and promoted the new Constitution, had become vivid and threatening again, and the French people drew back. They drew back from the prospect of an attempt at government by an alliance of minorities. They drew back in fear and doubt that they had really progressed any farther under the Constitution of de Gaulle than reliance upon de Gaulle the man and symbol. Yesterday, the situation they will have to come to some day proved to be something they could not bring themselves to select voluntarily right now. If, in their tortured decision within themselves, they did make some resolve to begin preparing for the day that has to come, the election has done some good. And if de Gaulle himself has now been reminded that he is dealing with human and political nature, which will live after him, and not with things as they might be in some Arthurian legend, perhaps he too will begin to accept some responsibility for how his nation is going to be able to cope, some day, with his own inevitable retirement.

That Totalitarian Touch

It continues to be the case that some of the most un-American things we do are things we do in the name of a purer and stronger Americanism, and this is so with respect to the political pledge some 2,000,000 Americans who will be eligible for medicare hospital benefits next July must make before they can be admitted to the system. The great bulk of eligible Americans, the last 12 months have not been, s

Security Act of 1950, as amended, as a munist-front organization, or a Communist-infiltrated organization."

some 17,000,000, will be eligible because of their present enrollment in the social security system. But the 2,000,000 who are not in social security, and who want to get medicare are being required to sign an application form which reads as follows: "In connection with my application for hospital insurance entitlement, I certify that I am not now, and during

Once again, as in student loans, and as in passport applications, Congress has chosen to require a testimonial of political affiliation from American citizens seeking some benefit or service from their government. The excuse used by Congress is that the particular po-THE NATIONAL OBSERVER litical statement required concerns only uniam, which is not really a politimovement, but a criminal conspiracy. But if we ever let ourselves get used to the idea that government can label one thing in the political arena criminal and then require that its own citizens cleanse themselves by caths, then we confer upon future governments the right to define other political movements in a similar way and for That is why the practice is odious.

whatever its particular pretext or its particular target. And that is why conscientious Americans who never have been and never will be either Communists or sympathizers with Communist causes experience some instinct to refuse what they consider totalitarian commands from their own government. But elderly people seeking some security for themselves should not, any more than students seeking an education or other Americans seeking to exercise a freedom to travel, be required to face, with their own necessities so heavy, the touch of totalitarian torture involved in the quandary of whether to sign, as an unimportant routine which can be taken for granted, and accomplished lightly, and perhaps even interpreted as a voluntary assertion of patriotic lovalty, or to put up some feeble kind of battle for the traditional American freedoms under the Bill of Rights."

Whenever such encroachments on the traditional freedoms do find their way into our laws, there is some eventual correction, either from the legislative or the judicial branch. The disconcerting thing is that it always seems easier to slip such things in-as this present provision for medicare application was slipped in-than it is to get them out. We still have an apparently irresistible impulse to try to do battle with totalitarian creeds by adopting totalitarian measures for ourselves.

Help Wanted! One Scrooge

Where is Scrooge this year? How come he hasn't reared his grouchy head and roared out his usually dismal Bah! Humbug! Behind whose good cheer has he been hiding? Has he begun to lose his own convictions? Has he entered the terrible area of doubt, in which the suspicion gnaws at him that others have more fun out of Christmas than he Has something happened to turn him soft? Did he, by mistake, smile at somebody sometime during the year, and find, disastrously, that somebody smiled back and thus reversed the story of his life? Did he catch some fleeting glimpse of a Christmas tie which was something better than the ordinary Christmas tie? Did he make the crucial and irretrievable mistake of saying good morning to somebody when there was really no call for it?

Whatever happened to him, where is the old fellow, anyway? How does he expect anybody else to be fortified and reassured in holiday joy if he doesn't provide the horrible alternative of selfchosen exile from the community of good feeling? Would Christmas ever be half as much Christmas with no Scrooge? Who will play the role if he doesn't? Who could ever play it half so well, with such a grand and realistic

Are there any volunteer Scrooges available? We are sorry we can't offer Scrooges salaries, like the professional Santa Clauses get. But isn't there someone who is willing to take on the role on an amateur basis, and just for the inner satisfactions of it? Being a Scrooge doesn't start out like much, but the fellow who tackles it and puts top effort into it usually finds it develops into a year round occupation.

Sex Appeal And Working Girl

SEATTLE-Can the operator of a cocktail lounge fire a waitress for not being "sexy and exciting" without violating the law against discrimination in employment because of age? Washington State's Board Against Discrimination, studying this question for several months, has concluded that the answer is yes. The board has held that qualifications as to age and sex appeal are two distinct things.

The case involved two cocktail waitresses, Mrs. Darlene Smith, 32, and Mrs. Jean Strzelecki, 35, who complained to the board that they were fired from Seattle's New Viceroy Restaurant last February because they were too old and lacked sex appeal sufficient to satisfy "Sexiness as a job requirement weights the scale in favor of younger women and thus comes within the general subject of age discrimination," the board declared. The statement, however, went on to note that many job requirements not usually considered discriminatory also favor a certain age bracket, such as those for professional athletes or business executives. The board added:

"Some older women are sexy, and some younger women are not. Thus a condition of employment that a cocktail waitress be sexy is not strictly an age condition, although it is a condition that older women, as a class, may find more difficult to meet. . . . Even slight familiarity with cocktail lounges in 1965 demonstrates legitimate business

In its policy statement, the board said it would continue to investigate complaints of age discrimination involving those employed in cocktail lounges and that, if a management gives lack of sex appeal as the reason for dismissals, employers must be able to show that they

The board also promised to reconsider the complaint of Mrs. Smith and Mrs. Strzelecki to determine if age alone was the main factor in their discharges. - CHARLES DUNSIRE IN

WINDSOR LOCKS (AP) -The U.S. Weather Bureau says, emperatures this morning are he lowest so far this season, ranging from the teens and lower in Southern New England. Skies will remain mostly clear today but sunshine will have litle effect on the cold air, with highs rising only into the 20s. The morning weather charts showed a deep and large-scale storm centered off the east coast of New Foundland. The circulation around this storm extends into New England and is causing unseasonably cold air to pour into the Northeast A weak ridge of high pressure to the east will produce the clear, calm weather today. Cloudiness will spread over Southern New England tonight and minor occasional light snow should move in late tonight and continue most of Tuesday. Temperatures will remain cold both tonight and Tuesday, with lows tonight in the teens and highs Tuesday in the upper 20s. Five-Day Forecast Temperatures in Connecticut Tuesday through Saturday are expected to average near normal. Cold at the beginning and end of the period with some noderation during mid-week. The normal high and low in Hartford area during this period is 36 and 18, Bridgeport 38 and 23 and New Haven 39 and 22, Precipitation may total less than ¼ inch melted, occurring at the beginning and end of the

WE NEVER FORGET! OUR AUTOMATIC FUEL OIL DELIVERY IS CERTAIN

We record the average temperature for each days compute the number of degrees the average is below 65. Then we combine this temperature data with your known rate of fuel use to determine exactly how much fuel your burner uses each day to keep you as warm as you want to be. No matter what the weather, all you have to do is lean back and relax. You'll never have to rely on your memory or your tank gauge (which may be inaccurate) to tell you when it's time to fill the tank. We know when it starts getting low and we refill it without any bother to you. And we refill it with Mobilheat fuel oil. quality checked 21 times between the refinery and your furnace. Remember, there's a big difference in distributors. We'd like to show you just how big that difference can be.
