Briton Has Found a Place Skating Report For Intellectual Inquiry

By CLEMEWELL YOUNG In a peaceful old Cape Cod house on High St., just beyond the Nethan Hale Monument, are three newcomers to Coven-try: Prof. John Bremer, his wife Anne, and their 17-monthold daughter Anne Jr., whom they call "Small."

The Bromers are British. The peacefulness, from an intellec-tual standpoint, is deceptive, for Bromer is a man of many interests, and conversation can be so stimulating that what begins as a morning coffee chat could easily run through tea time, without a lag.

Prof. Bremer has just joined the faculty of the University of Hartford, where this semester e will teach three courses is the graduate program in education, as well as a section of freshman English. Students who have signed up for these

He says he is as interested in the psychological basis of dancing as in the dancing itself, and notes that many of the dances, most of which were some kind of fertility rite, were common to many cultures. When asked what folk in struments he himself plays, Bremer produced two versions of the three-hole pipe, one in metal, looking for all the world like a child's toy, and one in rosewood. The pipe, which produces very shrill notes, is play ed with two fingers and the humb, while a tabor, or drum hanging from another finger, s beaten with the other hand. Seader plans a 224 - unit apartment project on the 42-acre tract. About 12 of those acres are planned for a recreational area, and that section contains a pond presently loaned to the town for use as a public ice skating rink. Seader told board members that if the zone is changed from ndustrial to multiple family use, he will either deed or lease for $1 a year the recreational "We would be willing to enter into such an agreement with the town." Seader said. "The area (12 acres) is too much for a private developer to handle for a recreational area." The proposal would have 12-three bedroom units, 160-two bedroom units, and 52-one bedroom units. Richard D. Cosgrove of Manchester, engineer and planner for the project, appeared to display his plans. Philip J. Di Corcia, Mancheser architect, presented plans and an architect's rendering of the proposed layout. Seader noted that he would be willing to give the zoning board final approval of the plans to insure against changes from the alans submitted last night. A number of objectors appeared at the hearing. Fred Billow, a developer and member of the Vernon Board of Representatives, appeared. He syplained he was representing only himself. Bilow said his home is adjacent to the proposed project. I will have to sell my home. and that will not be easy know ing that there are 224 apart ments going up next door There isn't enough industrial land left in town: We need more and more industrial land." Mrs. Esther Kemnitzer, for mer member of the Rockville Planning Commission, estimated that if the apartment project an estimated 250 to 350 new children. "This would use up all of the planned recreation in the area, and would considerably inerease our school pupulation." "A number of single resi dences in the area would be much better," Mrs. Kemnitzer said, "Then we would bring in a more permanent resident Apartments bring in transients who take more from the town

Manella Will Retire Monday After 41 Years at Hamilton

Alexander F. Mannella of 114 N. Lakewood Circle, general superintendent of Hamilton Standard Propel-ler at Windsor Locks and one of the company's pio-neers will retire Monday from its top executive post after more than four dec-ses of continuous, unin-terrupted service with the organization—a span ex-ceeding any other employe. Mannella's friends and Hamfiton associates will hold a retrement' dinner honoring him for his 61% years of service tomorrow night at the Tobacco Valley Inn, Windsor.

During a career which led him from the lowly post of propeller inspector up through the ranks to the top manufacturing position, Mannella has rubbed elbows with many of the great names of aviation, and it was he who inspected the propeller for the "Spirit of St. Louis" before Charles A. Lindbergh's historic Atlantic crossng in 1927.

Mannella's beginning in avi-ation dates back almost to its infancy, when in 1924, he joined the Standard Steel Propeller Co. of Pittsburgh, Pa., one of the two firms that merged in 1929 to form Hamilton Stand-A native of Pittsburgh, Man-

LEND A HAND-In this tangle of arms and legs there are five arms in plain sight. The action was during a match of visiting Japanese National High School All-Star wrestlers and a team made up of wrestlers from Colorado and Wyoming. The Japanese team scored 13 wins in 13 contests since arriving. The extra hand it turns out belongs to the referee. (AP Photofax)

and what it means

At the annual convention of the Connecticut Association of Real Estate Boards this past year, the Manchester Board of Realtors was one of five Realtor Boards throughout the ENTIRE STATE honored for a significant increase in membership.

The Manchester Board, naturally, is proud of this achievement. We are gratified too, at the tangible things that this award symbolizes. For instance, more and more people entering the real estate field full-time are making early—sometimes immediate—inquiries about Board membership qualifications. Increasing also, are membership applications from firms outside Manchester proper—a sure sign of efficient and effective operation.

One of the prime factors behind this membership increase is the unqualified success of the Manchester Multiple Listing Service. More and more clients are asking for their property to be Multiple Listed. (This is something only a Realtor firm can do for you.) They realize that the Multiple Listing Service is by far the best, most efficient method yet devised to sell property. The year just ended has seen another sizeable gain in total sales volume of Multiple Listed properties.

The aforementioned award is a result of wise leadership, both past and present, plus a broad spectrum of member participation in Board activities. This augurs well for the future. The future in real estate will undoubtedly see many changes—but these changes will be anchored on the solid bedrock of the Realtor Code of Ethics. We think this is good.
