Bolton The Roar of the Pupils, The Smell of the Skunk

It wasn't a grounding that saw the shadow in Bolton yesterday. It was a skunk. And to the relief of the school, the skunk never saw its shadow again.

Unlike groundhogs, skunks don't hibernate. They usually don't wander around school yards either. This particular skunk, a rather rosy-colored one, was seen along the elementary school driveway (the side marked "Bourne") at about 2:30 yesterday afternoon.

Classes in the north wing came to a halt, while students peered through windows.

Principal Lincoln Nyström prohibited black and white alert. Recreases were held down, and as the hour for dismissal came closer, and the skunk still posed a potentially pitiforous threat, the dog warden was called.

No one, not even the bus patron, was allowed out of the building until the warden came. A large school bus drove its way into the driveway, right behind the skunk, who now dejectedly followed the road to the town garage.

It was on this road that the warden took the skunk to a safe place, but not before the skunk delivered a parting message. The warden, a black and white dog, however, and within a few minutes, the evidence had disappeared in the winter air.

The 204 add a firm touch, though, to the usual information accorded by children as they enter their homes.

"Guess what, Mommy? We couldn't come home until they shot the skunk!"

School Costs I

Philip Ligouri, superintendent of schools, says that the total to be raised to cover the school operating budget this year is about $4,000 less than in 1964-65.

In 1964-65, Ligouri says, the operating budget for the schools, including principal and interest payments, was $581,000. The town received $150,000 in school aid from state and federal governments, leaving about $431,000 to be raised by taxes.

In 1965-66, the operating budget, including principal and interest payments, is $630,000. Ligouri says that the town will receive $150,000 in school aid from state and federal governments, leaving about $480,000 to be raised by taxes.

Ligouri says that, although the cost per pupil for education has gone up, the cost to the town has stayed about the same because of the increased aid funds.

School Costs II

The cost of educating a child in Bolton in 1964-65 was $490.07, according to figures furnished by the Connecticut Public Expenditures Council. The average public school cost in Manchester High School, but does not include transportation of principal or principal on school buses. If interest on bonds is added to the per pupil cost, the figure rises to $581.74. Adding transportation brings the figure to $574.57 per pupil. None of the figures include the payment of principal on school bonds.

In basic per pupil cost, Bolton stands 51st among the towns in the state. Manchester stands 51st at $484.45. Coventry's per pupil cost is $468.12. All of the figures exclude interest on bonds and transportation.

School Costs III

The board of finance, at its last meeting, reviewed a schedule of payments to be made over a 20-year period for the junior-senior high school. The $800,000 bond for the school is to be paid back in 20 equal installments, plus three per cent interest. The state pays half of the principal, but none of the interest.

The net cost to the taxpayer over 20 years is listed as $685,000, with $400,000 in principal and $285,000 in interest.

The statement, drawn up by a member of the board, says that: "From this schedule, it becomes obvious that interest charges amount to 31.5 per cent for the 20 years on the $800,000 loan. "This also means that, based on the total cost of $1,085,000, the state grant of $400,000 amounts to only 37.8 per cent, instead of the 50 per cent it is believed to be" by the board of finance.

The statement goes on to note that interest rates have been rising, and that the cost of new construction being requested by the board of education will be greater. A second schedule, based on a $600,000 bond issue at four per cent, was drawn up. The net cost to the taxpayer for the loan, based on a four per cent interest rate, is listed at $461,000.

The finance board took no action, just passed the statement for the taxpayers to consider.

Substitutes Sought

Substitute teachers are needed at the elementary school and the junior-senior high school. Anyone with a bachelor's degree may qualify. Education courses are not necessary. Applicants should call the superintendent's office.

This amount was collected on Tuesday, the last day for paying current taxes without penalties. All delinquent taxes will now be charged one half of one per cent interest per month, dating back to July 1, 1965, the due date. (Herald photo by Statens.)

A Footnote For Hope

U.S. Ambassador Arthur Goldberg, whose part in advising President Johnson toward the policy of turning to the United Nations at last, may prove interesting when the memoirs of these days are written—had this to say after yesterday's vote at the United Nations Security Council...

The vote result, said Ambassador Goldberg, was "a vindication not of the United States... but of the U.N. Charter and the role the Council must necessarily play."

Ambassador Goldberg had been engaged to the point in the previous day's debate, when he had observed: "The choice before us members of the Council is not whether to support the United States... or to deal with it at all."

The choice, by the vote yesterday, was to try to deal with it.

What this means is that, at long last, the issue of the war in Vietnam has been taken into the area of possible international discussion and international solution.

The issue, which the United States had previously reserved to its unilateral jurisdiction, has now been internationalized.

It has long been apparent that, if there were ever to be any change of pace or peace in Vietnam, any chance of keeping the conflict there from escalating into World War II, that chance would have to be in the internationalization of the issue.

The first step in that internationalization of the issue has now been accomplished.

There remains much to be done. What has to be done, what ought to be done, is unbelievably difficult and complicated. There is no easy summary of solutions. There could come no success at all, but merely the worst, failure of all, which would seem almost the final failure of sanity for civilization.

That the point is that people, and nations, are at last beginning to do things. The neutrals at the United Nations are beginning to bestir themselves out of their stony slumber and look for ways to assume and assert their own responsibility.

The action of the United States in giving to the United Nations an ultimatum to North Vietnam a statement that the Geneva Conference is the only proper place for settlement of the war. It may be that this development, together with the potential action of the United Nations in urging and sponsoring such a move, may help produce that reconvening of the Geneva Conference which Russia has hitherto been unwilling to sponsor.

There is a chance for hope, in other words, if the United Nations retains any portion of the integrity, persistence and courage it found it could possess in other peace-protecting functions, as in Korea, in Suez, in the Congo, in Cyprus.

To this revival of hope—still slim—but however slim it is still so much more than the total absence of hope which prevailed before President Johnson's decisions have made two important contributions. The first is that of turning to the United Nations at all, which the United States had previously refused to do. The second is that of having the United States resolution at the U.N. state that the first task of any conference negotiations is the United Nations could sponsor should be to try to establish a cease-fire in Vietnam, which is a reversal of previous United States contentions that settlement would have to come first, then the cease-fire.

Let us hope that, while the hawks and the doves wonder nervously which one really had the better track at the White House, ordinary humanity takes the small new opportunity it has to regain some control of its own fate.

The Senator's Blank Checks
Members of the United States Senate are acting as if Lyndon Johnson was the first President who ever stuck his country's back out and then came to Congress for some blank check and authorization for what he had already done and anything else he might do as a result of it. They are precisely the actions of President Johnson in connection with such tactics because he has been the first President to reach in and stick a blank check in it. It is time to ask the question: when some Senators would like to have their signatures back, back in August, 1964, when we thought some North Vietnamese torpedo boats had tried to attack some destroyers we had off the North Vietnamese shore while some South Vietnamese craft were attacking the North Vietnamese shore, President Johnson ordered retaliatory bombing of North Vietnamese port installations, and then asked Congress and got from Congress, with all but two of the 100 Senators voting yes, a special resolution which wrote him, he now claims, a blank check to do anything and everything he might feel necessary "relating to operations in Southeast Asia."

Now Senator Fulbright, who sponsored the 1964 resolution through the Senate, regrets having done so, and says he will vote through the Senate before he does anything like it ever again. There were, of course, a few Senators who, even while they were voting for the 1964 resolution, made little speeches stating their reservations.

But the main language of the resolution, in what stands as it remains a blank check, on which President Johnson has been demanding full payment. Actually, Congress, and the Senate, have been writing standing blank checks, and not always with a very clear understanding or assurance of how and when they would be used. President Eisenhower, as we recall, it is said, and not several of them. One of them which was presented to him as if it were a blank check for unleashing Chiang Kai-shek, which was the way it seemed to be used, was actually employed by President Eisenhower in order to launch Chiang Kai-shek and make sure he didn't start any trouble we might have to fight. So long as a President uses his blank check discreetly, and asks for a new one before he tries to use it too high, he can get away with it. By right and to the point in the previous day's debate, when he had observed: "The choice before us members of the Council is not whether to support the United States... or to deal with it at all."

The choice, by the vote yesterday, was to try to deal with it.

What this means is that, at long last, the issue of the war in Vietnam has been taken into the area of possible international discussion and international solution.

Inside Report

By Rowland Evans Jr. Robert D. Novak

WASHINGTON — Some of President Johnson's top military advisers now are pressing hard for a "poisoned" blockade of the harbor of Haiphong and lesser ports along the coast of North Viet Nam.

Their purpose is to block shipments of oil essential to fuel Hanoi's military aid to the South. Their object is not, as is usually charged, to force Kennedy imposed during the 1962 Cuba missile crisis. Instead, they want to mine North Vietnamese ports after giving advance notice to all countries — Western and Communist — that trade with North Viet Nam.

It should be quickly said that President Johnson is not yet close to approving any such escalation in the U. S. effort to cut Hanoi's oil supply. He is still to be accompanied by destruction of supplies now in storage. This would mean an extension of bombing to the oil storage depots (many of them clustered in the Haiphong area) which have been exempted from bombing up to now.

In fact, in the range of escalation that the Administration is planning now that bombing of the North has resumed, mining of North Vietnamese harbors would not come first. More probable first step: More bombing, milder, closer to China, and attacks on North Vietnamese targets previously ruled out of bounds (such as oil storage depots and most steam generating plants).

Nevertheless, mining of the ports is a subject now getting high priority attention in the President Johnson's top military advisers now are pressing hard for a "poisoned" blockade of the harbor of Haiphong and lesser ports along the coast of North Viet Nam.

The second real five-point nomination has now appeared front and center. He has, so far, been accorded a trial, but rather significantly different from that accorded the first front and center character in the current small parade of Republican favorites.

The first front and center appearance was that of former Congressman Abner Sibal of Fairfield County, and the immediate result was that everybody everywhere else immediately began playing the game of knock Sibal down.

The second appearance, front and center is that of former Senator Peter Mariani, of Groton, a not-so-far, but significantly different from that accorded the first front and center character in the current small parade of Republican favorites.

Whereas the short prominence of Sibal was one in which Sibal himself would find out whether he could go anywhere, the appearance of Mariani in the middle of the stage results from a combination of his assumed permanent employment as a member of a disposition of all the party leaders and groups engaged in the search of a candidate to have somebody—somebody—available.

Mariani seems to be going—something we can have if the search for any more exciting possibility turns out to be as fruitless as it seems to be at the moment.

Since this is the way that the talk seems to be going, the appraisal being given him as he stands there is considerably different from that accorded Sibal.

There is, for instance, hardly any instinct to knock Mariani down so far and so decisively that he will still be available.

To the contrary, there is a general disposition to take his potential weaknesses as representative of the annual National Inter-Fraternal Conference. For several years, he has been the Director's scholarship officer and also served as its extension secretary. He is still a member of the Executive of his National Endowment Fund.

Tiros Satellite In Right Orbit

The plan called for ESSA 1 to be rocketed into a circular 400-mile-high orbit and preliminary data indicated, it was very close to normal. Officials of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration said.

The last stage of the 90-foot-tall Delta kicked the satellite into orbit over the Pacific Ocean about 300 miles west of Ecuador. To get there it rode southeast from Cape Kennedy, Fla., and sailed over Cuba and Central America.

The 105-pound, drum-shaped satellite was to be first positioned on one of its flat sides faced the earth. Within 30 seconds the ground during the next 34 hours was to gradually tip it on its side so it would roll like a hoop around the globe.

Its cameras point out from opposite sides of the curved shell. The shell are supposed to take many snap pictures of cloud formations and storm patterns below as the satellite speeds along at 16,000 miles an hour.

Once properly in orbit, project officials planned to name the satellite ESSA 1 since it was paid for by the Environmental Science Services Administration, parent organization of the U.S. Weather Bureau. A second case of escalation. What concerns U.S. policy makers is not so much the reaction in Peking as in Moscow.

The Soviet Union, the major supplier of oil to North Viet Nam, would face a most difficult dilemma if Haiphong harbor were mined. If Moscow accepted this limitation on its assistance to an ally, it would suffer in its rivalry with Peking for world-wide Communist supremacy.

If it threatened the United States, it would risk a direct involvement in the war. But now that President Johnson has ordered renewed bombing of the North, further escalation of the war is certain. Somewhere down that road, the U.S. will come to grips with the hard question of how to deal with supplies moving into North Viet Nam, the source of aggression.

At that point, the potential blockade may be essential whatever the risks.

Bailey Honored By Fraternity

Edison M. Bailey, former principal of Manchester High School for 25 years and now assistant professor of education at the University of Hartford, was recently honored by being named to the Distinguished Service Chapter of Phi Mu Delta, national honor society.

Bailey was presented a plaque and wristwatch in recognition of his long service to the fraternity at a Trinity College pledge banquet, where he is helping establish a new chapter of Phi Mu Delta. He is only the fourth member of the fraternity ever chosen for such a distinguished service award.

Active in the fraternity since his undergraduate days at the University of New Hampshire, Bailey served as its national president during the 1970's and several times was its representative at the annual National Inter-Fraternal Conference. For several years, he has been the Director's scholarship officer and also served as its extension secretary.

Pirates on Corregidor

MANILA—Corregidor Island, the last fortress of Filipino and American troops as they tried to defend the Philippines against the Japanese in World War II, was once a base for Chinese pirates, who raided Philippine shipping. When Spain began her 400-year domination of the country in the mid-16th century, they landed at the mouth of Manila Bay and used as a penal colony.

Retailers See Film On the Shoplifter

A restricted movie, "The Shoplifter," was shown by W. Delmar Barker, security superintendent of G. Fox and Co., at the annual banquet of the Chamber of Commerce Retail Division at Villa's Steak House last night.

The banquet is sponsored by the Retail Division, which is held annually. Barker said the film is not shown to the general public because it shows too well the techniques used in shoplifting. It is generally only shown to retailers, so that they may learn how to spot shoplifters and prevent them from stealing the two billion dollars worth of merchandise that is taken by shoplifters each year.

According to the film, one out of every sixty persons that enters a store during the average day has an impulse to shoplift. The best preventative for this is alert, courteous salespersons who give prompt attention to each customer.

Barker displayed a booster box which is used by professional shoplifters, and showed how it is used. The booster box is an empty truck box, which appears to be sealed completely, but which is easily opened and closed by the person who carries it.

Displayed also was a hollowed-out book which is used to conceal small items. Barker said that a school-girl in Hartford used such a book over several weeks time, and was stealing 800 worth of jewelry each day.

In a question and answer period, Louis Apter of Regan's asked how a smaller store may protect itself against shoplifting. Barker suggested the use of convex mirrors for special observation, police security, and emphasized that store personnel should be made aware of and be on the constant lookout for shoplifters.

Leo Juran of Fidelity Stores asked "How do you apprehend a person you suspect of shoplifting?" Barker said that, first, you must know for certain that the person in a store simply conceals an item and is seen doing it, according to the law, this concealment is evidence of intent to steal. If a suspected location of stolen goods.

South Windsor Votes Urged For School Bond Issue

MANCHESTER (AP) — A school bond issue for the South Windsor school district is being urged by school officials.

The bond issue would provide for the construction of a new school building and the purchase of new equipment.

The school board is currently holding public hearings on the bond issue. The board is expected to vote on the issue in the near future.

The bond issue is expected to be a significant source of revenue for the school district. It would allow the district to improve its facilities and provide a better education for its students.

Overweight Yes, But Obese, No

BOSTON (AP) — Harvard scientists say that being overweight is not necessarily a sign of obesity.

The scientists conducted a study of the relationship between body weight and health. They found that many people who are overweight are not obese and do not have health problems.

The scientists also found that many people who are obese do not have health problems. They believe that obesity is a complex condition that is influenced by many factors, including genetics and diet.

The scientists conclude that being overweight is not necessarily a sign of obesity, and that obesity is not necessarily a sign of poor health. They believe that a more comprehensive approach is needed to understand the relationship between body weight and health.

Scientist Says

The scientist says that the health risk of being overweight is not as high as previously thought.

He believes that many people who are overweight are not at risk of developing health problems. He believes that a more comprehensive approach is needed to understand the relationship between body weight and health.

From Your Neighbor's Kitchen

By DOMS BILDING

Chocolate refrigerator cake is a boon to housewives who like to prepare their food well in advance of entertaining. Mrs. William G. Bryce of 172 Irving St. uses her mother's recipe for the cake and says it never fails to receive compliments whenever she serves it.

Chocolate Refrigerator Cake

10 ounces package chocolate bits
 2 tablespoons sugar
 3 tablespoons cold water
 1 cup heavy cream whipped
 1 teaspoon vanilla
 1 1/2-ounce sponge cake chopped

Melt chocolate bits and sugar in top of double boiler until smooth, add water and beat with a spoon. Remove from heat. Beat egg whites until stiff. Mix whipped cream with vanilla. Add egg whites to chocolate mixture and stir well. Fold in egg whites and whipped cream. Slice sponge cake in narrow strips. Line bottom of tub pan with strips and cover with chocolate mixture. Repeat process, ending with chocolate mixture. Garnish with chopped nuts on top if desired. Refrigerate 24 hours. Slice with whipped cream topping if desired.

State Man Dies In South Pole Airplane Crash

WELINGTON, New Zealand (AP)—A Communist man was one of the U.S. Navy men killed today when a C-119 crashed about 400 miles from the South Pole.

The Navy described the crash as the worst of the Navy's 21-year-old operation Deepfreeze in the Antarctic. There were no survivors.

The Communist man killed was identified as PO S.C. Wayne M. Shattuck, husband of Sharon Lee Shattuck, 190 Chestnut Street, Bridgeport.

A second C-119 spotted the wreckage at "Little Mt." on the Ross Ice Shelf, where the first plane was landing to pick up a party when it crashed.

The site is near the old Little America site 400 miles east of McMurdo Station, the main U.S. base in the Antarctic. The site party, a U.S. geographical survey team, was measuring ice movement.

The Navy said the other victims were: Lt. Harold M. Moore, Pilot, South Logan, Utah; Lt. William D. Fordell, co-pilot, Coast Bay, Ont.; Lt. Cmdr. Ronald Rosebush, navigator, New York City; PO J.C. Richard P. of investigation and members of the Connecticut congressional delegation. The merchant had closed his laboratory to spend full time on the search.

His son, Fred, has been missing from the Massachusetts Institute of Technology since Nov. 30, 1965.

The FBI has reportedly told the father that it cannot enter the case because no federal law has been violated so far.

Grossfeld has said that he received a telephone call from the father, who has a son named Arthur who worked for the company when he was 17. The son, Fred, has been missing from the Massachusetts Institute of Technology since Nov. 30, 1965.

The FBI has reportedly told the father that it cannot enter the case because no federal law has been violated so far.

Planning Key To Water Ills, PUC Head Says

STAMFORD (AP)—Advances in planning is the key to avoiding water shortages, according to the chairman of the State Public Utilities Commission.

Chairman Eugene L. Loughlin told officials of the Stamford Water Co. Wednesday that the lack of rainfall in recent years is not a sufficient explanation for the serious scarcity of water in Stamford and other communities.

"I don't think you can blame the drought," Loughlin said. "Shortages can be averted, but if those responsible for assuring a supply of water can anticipate needs 16 to 20 years in advance.

The hearing was the first of several the PUC will hold in water-short parts of the state.

Arthur Bell, president of the Stamford Water Co., said Stamford is buying two million gallons of water a day from the Greenwich system. Stamford's reservoirs are operating at only five per cent of capacity, he said.

Mayor Thomas Mayers described a plan under which—if New York City is willing—water from Long Island will be piped to Stamford via New York City water lines. Mayers said he will meet with Mayor John V. Lindsay of New York next Wednesday to discuss the proposal.

Ten million gallons a day would be purchased from a private firm that draws the water from wells on Long Island, Mayers said. Bell estimated the cost at $200 per million gallons.

Ridgefield Dad Asks FBI's Aid In Finding Son

WASHINGTON (AP)—U.S. Sen. Thomas J. Dodd, D-Conn., says he will "leave no stone unturned" in his efforts to aid in the search for his missing son.

Grossfeld has sought assistance from the Federal Bureau of Investigation and members of Connecticut's congressional delegation. The merchant has closed his laboratory to spend full time on the search.

His son, Fred, has been missing from the Massachusetts Institute of Technology since Nov. 30, 1965.

The FBI has reportedly told the father that it cannot enter the case because no federal law has been violated so far.

Town Enrolls 60 New Voters

Manchester's voting lists have been increased by 60—the result of a three-hour voter-making session in the town clerk's office, yesterday.

Of the total, 23 signed up as Republicans and 37 as Democrats. The remaining 17 were unaffiliated.

None of the new voters will be at the polls.

Unemployment compensation claims both in town and in the state have declined during the week ending Jan. 29, the State Labor Department reports.

Claims in Manchester declined approximately 4 per cent, going from 656 last week to 628 for the week ending last Saturday.

DETROIT (AP)—Lute Murrillo, 32, an aerialist who fell 45 feet before a stunned crowd of 8,000 Tuesday, was "improved, but still in temporarily serious condition" today at a suburban hospital.

Walking up 45-degree slanted wire without a balancing pole or safety net, Murrillo lost his footing and fell shortly before reaching his main performing wire.

Hospital officials said Murrillo suffered a fractured pelvis, facial injuries and a concussion.

Pacific Faces Legion Ouster

JERRETT CITY (AP) — Already ousted as commander of the local American Legion post because of his pacifist sentiments, Robert Hollis today is being expelled from the Legion itself.

Post spokesmen announced the hearing date Wednesday. Hollis said he will be there, and will be defended by three lawyers.

The split between Hollis and his fellow Legionnaires occurred abruptly on Nov. 11 — Veterans Day — when he went to Port Devens, Mass., and took part in a demonstration against United States participation in the war in Viet Nam.

He was wearing his Legion uniform and spoke freely with women about his opposition to U.S. policies.

Other members of the Jerrett City post claimed this was a case of Robert Hollis who had known nothing about them. Plans to get him out of post command began taking form immediately and he was ousted on Nov. 21.

The next question was, should he be allowed even to remain in the Legion?

A 10-man committee named by the acting commander recommended that he be stripped of his membership. Grounds cited for the action include conduct unbecoming a member of the Legion and making statements to news media while in Legion uniform which constituted a disgrace to the Legion.

Hollis had been planning to fly to South Viet Nam this week and for a personal look at the situation there. He said Wednesday that he would postpone the trip in order to be ready for the Feb. 15 hearing.

ROSE METHEROEN EVANSTON, Ill. (AP) — began taking form immediately and he was ousted on Nov. 21.

The next question was, should he be allowed even to remain in the Legion?

Westhill Work Proceeds Well

Work on the 10th addition to Westhill Gardens, housing for the elderly, is proceeding satisfactorily, according to a progress report issued yesterday by Leon Kesterin, executive director of the Manchester Housing Authority.

He reports that masonry work has been completed in 12 buildings of the 18-building complex, in seven of the roads have been abridged, boilers have been set up in seven, porch trim has been completed on six, rough electrical work has been completed in five, cast iron plumbing roughed-in in eight, copper plumbing roughed-in in five, and rough-hauling mains and loops completed in four.

In addition, approximately 30 per cent of gas installations have been made, and 95 per cent of cable electrical installations, most approximately 80 per cent of ceiling plumbing installations have been completed.

Kesterin said that the authority has set a goal of a July dedication of the $1,648,000 project — two months ahead of schedule.

9,000 NOT SIGNED
 HARTFORD (AP)—Social Security officials reported Wednesday that some 90,000 out of 27,300 over the total one year completed on six, rough electrical work has been completed in five, cast iron plumbing roughed-in in eight, copper plumbing roughed-in in five, and rough-hauling mains and loops completed in four.

Cheney Five Tops Vinal

Ken Leamond Hits 32 Mark In Fifth Win

Post-season tournament lineup won't include Coach Tech but the Rangers will be shooting for a new high in victories in the last decade in their remaining games. Yesterday afternoon in Middletown, hockey Ken Leamond paced the Rangers to a one-sided 7-39 decision over the visiting Vinal.

To qualify for a tournament, a team must win at least 50 per cent of its games with four games remaining. Cheney will again be on the outside looking in when the post-season action starts.

However, a split in the final game will send the Rangers to match the highest win total since the start of the 1956-57 season. Woody Bunker Jonese, head coach, said the team will be in the hunt for a second consecutive championship.

Ken Leamond, who has scored 32 goals in 15 games, was the star of the game. He had two goals and three assists. The Rangers' defense was solid, allowing only three goals.

Stueck, who has averaged 18.5 points a game, has been a key player for the Pistons. He has scored 100 points in 10 games. The Pistons are currently in second place in the Eastern Division.

Other key players for the Pistons include Oscar Robertson and George Gervin. The Pistons have a strong defense and a fast break offense.
