Prisoners Conduct Silent Protest

Prisoner (at right) holds up hand-lettered sign reading "less brutality" as part of a silent protest at Maryland State Prison. It followed a destructive riot by more than 1,000 inmates yesterday. After the disturbance was put down, inmates met with prison officials and complained of such things as the food, low pay and alleged favoritism in work release and state parole program.

Wheelock received a diploma awarded at the conclusion of a four-week training program that covered all phases of retailing as it applies to the service station business.

Tidewater's program stressed the fact that service station businessmen must have a concern for the customer's automobile in order to run a successful station.

iers and the wounded in the heat

Laurence himself was in a helicopter crash a month aster his arrival and suffered a superficial face wound during another battle. At first hatless, he later wore a "crazy, floppy"

hat, a Special Forces cap given to him by his CBS News

"On one mission, I was told by the officer in charge to find hat," Laurence says. "Later found out that the same ofcounded. My light colored hair reflected the sun, making me a debut time for a clutch of new change of commercials. They tend to get outdoorsy when the weather warms up. There are more scenes designed to suggest cool refreshment - tinkling ice frosted glasses, beach scenes, top-down convertibles.

It is a little early to spot a trend, but there are indications that the fantasy-fad has about run-its course.

Still with us, now in fresh settings, are the frugging teen parties, the social-success stories before and after changing mouth washes, tooth paste, hair color, coffee brands.
