Airliner Lands Amid Sparks on Carswell Runway

PORT WORTH, Tex. (AP) — An airliner with 38 persons aboard landed in a hail in a show of sparks on a foam-covered runway at Carswell Air Force Base early today after a 30-mile detour with a malfunctioning landing gear.

There was no fire immediately visible as crash and rescue equipment raced from the edges of the airstrip toward the plane. Just before touching down, the Braniff jet's landing lights went out.

The plane, Flight 138 originating in Chicago, had turned around after discovering landing gear trouble just before its scheduled Houston landing.

Passengers began alighting from the plane onto the foam-flooded pavement seconds after the landing before about 200 people standing outside base headquarters.

The craft had a crew of 6 and 38 passengers. It apparently developed hydraulic trouble, a Braniff spokesman in Houston said, after its Oklahoma City stop.

of President Johnson, with some of the subhuman monstrosities who followed Hitler's orders.
But we cannot escape, no matter what the fury of our own revenge, the fact that if it had not been for us North Vietnam would not have had even a shadow of a precedent for putting on the cruel faces it seems to have in mind. They have warped and twisted it, but we gave them the idea.

A Minority Report

We have for a long time been lectured, until finally our powers of righteous resistance have quietly subsided, on the project of the cat. Their halcyon days in Egypt, their following with witches, their collusion with the supernatural, their extraordinary presence—we have long heard these recitals and for a long time accepted them out of romantic inclinations and a healthy respect for the mysterious. But when all was said, we have regarded the scraggly, dull-coated feline descendants among us, and we have wondered—and doubted.

Hand Is Not Nuremberg

To be completely honest about it, the main reason the North Vietnamese has no right to try our aviators as war criminals is that North Vietnam has not won the war in Vietnam or received the surrender of the United States. Then it could make law, as victors make law.

And then it could emulate, by its own standards, the process which it claims as precedent for its own present threat to put our captured aviators on trial. Hand it over to us, inevitably, the Nuremberg trials and laws and judgments which we, as victors in World War II, instituted and carried out, with our allies, against a whole series of Germans, politicians and soldiers alike, who participated in Hitler's war crimes, and who were never conceded to be a defense that the particular German on trial had merely been following orders.

When we did this, at Nuremberg, we did it ourselves, ideologically, that we were writing and enforcing a new kind of law for the world—a law against culpability for crimes committed collectively by a nation, a law requiring individuals, in fact, to refuse to carry out orders if they felt those involved were of a criminal nature.

We had to be idealistic about this, because otherwise the Nuremberg trials would not have been law at all, but merely the traditional vengeance of the victors, carried out with more fore-de-rol but no more moral justice than the ancient execution of defeated foes.

Even while we did this, however, there were voices of warning raised in our own mind. And, if we conquered our suspicion that anybody who didn't want to put the Germans on trial was a Nazi sympathizer, we perhaps managed to hear what such men as the late Robert A. Taft were really saying. They were saying that he who pretends to make law for others inevitably makes some for himself. They were warning that the judgments reached at Nuremberg might some day be applied to us. They were warning how well we ourselves would be willing, in the future, to submit to the same kind of laws we had been creating at Nuremberg to be applied to the Nazis.

The question of whether Nuremberg meant for Americans of the future what it meant for the Germans of 1945 is a question which ruled individual Germans should have refused to obey orders with which they in their individual conscience disagreed has been raised, but not answered.

It has been raised by draft resisters, who themselves cite the Nuremberg laws and claim they view the war in Vietnam as a criminal war in which their individual conscience tells them not to participate. But it will have to wait for its answer, if it ever gets one, to the Supreme Court. No lower court, so far, has even seemed to hear the argument when it has been made.

The question of whether or not other nations has the right to assume that interpretation and enforcement of the laws of the United States and its allies created at Nuremberg hasn't been answered, either, and we don't see how it can be. North Vietnam is now claiming the right; the United States disputes the claim; if North Vietnam tries to exercise the right, the United States will respond not with some legal appeal, but with more bombs, or with atrocities by its quite proficient South Vietnamese allies. Only if North Vietnam wins the war, and has the United States surrender in its pocket will it have any clear legal right to try Americans for war crimes, and we Americans, of course, would be disputing that to the death.

What this means is, we are afraid, that Nuremberg itself rested not on law, not on justice, and not on idealism, after all, but on military victory and on surrender. What it reminds us of is of the inevitable law of consequences. What one does, what a nation does, can come back haunting. Then, if you are big enough, you can smash your own precedent and your own creation. We can be sure, punish the North Vietnamese unmercifully if they make the grotesque mistake of trying to equate our young American aviators, following the orders

Connecticut Yankee

By Rowland Evans Jr. and Robert D. Novak

It used to be, back in the halcyon days of the present Democratic reign in Connecticut, that the party's platform makers were able to achieve an easy magnanimity in their references to their political opposition. They would find some instances in which the Republicans in the General Assembly had given support to some Democratic reform or institutional proposal, and they would carefully compliment the Republicans on being capable of such bi-partisan cooperation for the good of the state in such limited instances.

This gave the impression that the Democrats themselves were generous above the mere elemental kind of political warfare; it followed the luxury of inferring that the Republicans still had a long way to go before they could ever be considered fully aware of the great needs of the people of Connecticut.

This Democratic recognition of Republican virtue was most generous in the days when the instances for granting it were fewer, and has grown demeritously more reluctant as evolutionary Republican policy has modulated itself so completely it has been outpacing the Democrats themselves.

Accordingly, where the Democrats platform makers used to have to look hard to find the opportunity to exhibit high level generosity to the Republicans, in some instance of bi-partisan cooperation, the same platform makers now have to research for some instance in which it will be safe to criticize the Republicans for not being willing to spend enough. And instead of the neatly balanced faint praise with which the Democrats used to salute occasional instances of

A Thought for Today

The Whole Armor of God - Ephesians 6:10-20 (cont.)
Necessary to prevent Satan's leading arrows from striking us is the shield of faith. The armor of Rome in Paul's day had two different types of shields. One was a small shield used in close fighting - good to ward off sword or lance but unable to cover the whole man from the shower of arrows that so often hit the air. Paul's reference is to the big shield behind which a man could actually be completely protected from the onslaught. Complete faith in God's promises and complete trust in His goodness give a man a refuge for his soul. Try to take shield today.

WHAT IS IT MAINTAINS THE MYTH?

JACKSON, Miss. — Two seemingly minor and unrelated political developments in Mississippi during the past two weeks are signs of slow but substantial progress being made toward the future Mississippi. Sign No. 1: Douglas Wynn, who has intimate ties both with the White House and with the segregationist regular Democrats, became counsel for the state Young Democrats—a bi-racial group hitherto shunned by regulars such as Wynn.

Sign No. 2: A NAACP registration drive in Wilkinson County in southwest Mississippi put some 1,600 Negroes on the voting rolls—about half the mind of a past buried in memories of glory and mystery and hint, with a typical absence of subtlety, that we had better not forget it.

The comeback of the bicycle. The heyday of the bicycle, from all accounts, was around the turn of the century, give or take a decade or two. Those were the days when there were still more horses than automobiles, and bicyclists, largely through the efforts of such groups as the Meriden Wheel Club, built and maintained their own bicycle paths, such as the one between Meriden and Wallingford.

For a vehicle which depends for its power upon the muscle of the rider, the bicycle holds its own very well in an era of speed and horsepower. In fact, the bicycle is more than holding its own; it is making a comeback. That is good, for there is no better exercise than cycling. (Ask Dr. Paul Dudley White; he rides a bicycle whenever he has a chance.)

Today's bicycles come in various sizes and designs; they are also subject to the whims of fad and fashion. There was a time when a bicycle was a severely functional effects for transport, and not much more.

Then there came the period of gadgetry in which various fancy fittings were added, making for a flashy appearance, but adding weight which wasn't necessary. This surfeit of accessories gave way to the English-style bike, with the gear shift and the hand brake, a more efficient machine for the serious rider, but one not suited for youngsters, both because of its high price and the delicacy of its mechanism.
Today the trend in bikes is for smaller wheels, banana saddles, and butterfly handlebars, which are excessively long and spreading. They may be pretty to look at, but they are not really functional. They are, however, a status symbol among the younger set, to the point where an old bike can be made socially acceptable merely by the installation of the new high-standing, wide-spreading butterfly handlebars.
Around the turn of the century one of the popular songs concerned Daisy, who would "look sweet upon the seat of a bicycle built for two." Traditions were common then, and they are making a comeback. We saw one the other day, a spanking brand new tandem, which sailed along merrily with two young ladies clad in tight pants pushing the pedals.
There's a lot to be said for the revival of bicycling as exercise and as a recreation, but today's cyclist has problems. The bicycle rider of an older era knew nothing of the principal hazard today comes from automobiles. Cyclists and motorists will simply have to work out a harmonious relationship for sharing the highways safely between them, bearing in mind that the cyclist's liability was there first. — REGISTERED REPORTER

Ansaldi's Contractors Win Little League Championship

Championship laurels in the 1966 Manchester Little League baseball program belong to Ansaldi's Contractors. To win in the night's 4-2 decision over the Manchester Auto Parts at Verplanck Field.

W. L. Pct.
Ansaldi's (L. L.) 1 1 1.000
Auto Parts (N. L.) 1 2 .333
Dillon's (A. L.) 1 1 1.000

The Contractors, coached by Frank Savino, posted a 3-0 win-loss record in the double elimination post-season tournament. Last night's success followed victories over Dillon Field, 6-1, and the Auto Parts, 4-1.

Trailing 1-0 going into the last half of the first inning, the Contractors came up with three runs, which proved more than enough to win, and added a single marker in the fourth. The score picked up a second score in the fifth.

Although out to nine to four, Ansaldi's made the most of their blow plus enemy misplays, to win all the maximum points for their International League championship.

Going to the dance for the mound win was Don Hubbard while earlier John McKean took the loss.

The winners' hits were singles by Chuck Klein, Ken Tomczak, Hubbard and Tomczak, a double by Jeff Kiojky. McKean paced the Auto Parts with a home run and single and a double while many McKean added two home runs and a double.

Orioles Boost Lead to 10 1/2 Games Ailments in Detroit

NEW YORK (AP)—The Detroit Tigers have a sick manager, a sick pitcher, a sick shortstop. Right now their pitching staff isn't exactly the picture of health either.

Baltimore continued to punish the Tiger staff Wednesday, pounding Detroit 10-1 and won their 107th triumph that extended the Orioles' American League lead to 10 1/2 games.

Detroit Manager Chuck Dressen is recuperating from his second concussion in two weeks and now Acting Manager Bob Swift and All-Star shortstop Dick McAuliffe have been hit by ailments.

McAuliffe pitched three perfect innings in the All-Star Game, was ripped for home runs by Brooks Robinson and the Orioles' ace, Jim Palmer, in a 3-1 victory in the All-Star Game. McAuliffe was tagged with two losses in 14 innings he gave up 16 hits and 14 runs, all of them earned.

The Orioles' ace, Jim Palmer, struck out eight of the 15 batters he faced. The loss left the second-place Kansas City Royals in a hole from a 7-6 loss to the Orioles.

Frank Strick, handling the Tigers in the absence of both Dressen and Swift, saw Detroit jump into a 3-0 lead and then rally for a 7-6 lead but it wasn't enough against the fired-up Orioles.

Powell and Robinson each drove in two runs and scored three. Jim Northrup had a home run and double for Detroit, driving in two runs and scoring three.

Elsewhere in the American League Wednesday, Minnesota, downed Washington 9-1, Chicago, downed Cleveland 5-0, and Oakland blanked Kansas City 4-0 and California and Boston split a 1-1 tie.

Pirates Get Foot in Door and Explode

NEW YORK (AP)—The Pittsburgh Pirates are like a salesman. Let them get a foot in the door, and you'll find they are buying their product.

The Pirates got good use out of a hot Wednesday night and other popular Eastern Connecticut grounds in very spotty. Blues are hitting well in the western portion of the Sound.

Striped bats are hitting well along the Fairfield County shore in the Tumble Islands area and at the Race, where the largest fish last week scaled 37 pounds.

Fishing for school stripers is fairly good in the Thames and Connecticut rivers. Many of the fish are sub-legal sized, and anglers are cautioned to observe the 16-inch snout to tail, minimum length.

Good catches of blackfish are being made in Fishers Island Sound and off the Central Connecticut shore. Brantford Reef provided numerous five to eight pound blackfish last weekend.

Fluke catches continue scattered. The other species of fish are being made in Fishers Island Sound and off the Central Connecticut shore.

Mets Eye Club Mark After Beating Giants

SAN FRANCISCO (AP)—Usually, when Juan Marchal takes the mound against the New York Mets, the San Francisco Giants expect a certain victory.

But not even the Dominican right-hander has been able to stop the Giants' July slide. While not tagging the 15-game winning streak, the Mets forced him from the contest and won, 3-2, in 10 innings.

The defeat dropped the Giants a game behind the front-running Pittsburgh Pirates, who beat Los Angeles, 8-5.

All Mets runs resulted from base-empty homers, the last a homer by Tom Seaver to Al Luplow and Roy McMillan and left for a pinch-hitter trailing 2-1 in the eighth inning.

The Giants got Juan off the hook in the ninth by tying the score off former teammate Jack Fisher, who went all the way for the victory.

The Mets, who need only one more victory for six in a row and a new club record for their 15-year history, called on manager Al Luplow and Roy McMillan and left for a pinch-hitter trailing 2-1 in the eighth inning.

Milestone Hit Again By Banks

CHICAGO (AP)—First baseman Ernie Banks, known as Mr. Cub, has passed another milestone.

His 80th hit of the season Wednesday was the 2,000th of his career.

It was an eight-inning double off Sam Rice in the first game of a doubleheader with the Chicago Cubs. It came in Bank's 1,600th major league game, all of them with Chicago.

The Cubs lost, however, 5-4, and also dropped the nightcap, 1-0, as the game was called after seven innings because of darkness. He was hitless in this one.

"I pitched a high fast ball," said Banks, who tipped his cap to a standing ovation from 12,238 Wrigley Field fans.

He became the fourth Cub in history with 2,000 hits. Cap Anson leads the parade with 3,081, followed by Sam Rice's 2,190 and James Ryan's 2,166.

While Charlie Grimm, long-time Cub and three-time manager of the club, has 2,000 career hits, he collected only 1,841 in a Chicago uniform.

"I owe a vote of thanks to Stan Musial," said Banks. "This spring when I got off badly, he came in and hit me. He related the various things he used to do when he was in a slump. I followed his advice and it was a big help."

Although membership in the major's 2,000-hit circle is large, Banks is only the second Cub in modern history to join it. Hank Sauer was the first.

Banks, 36, who won successive National League Most Valuable Player awards in 1956 and 1958, has 1,197 singles, 316 doubles, 71 triples and 409 homers in his collection. He 1,082 runs batted in includes a career total of 10 grand slam homers—five of them in 1957 for a single season record.

O'Connor named as coach. When transfer coach Frank Brinn won the American-National Maturity with Bret Hanover at Sportman's Park in Chicago on June 25, it marked the 94th time he had the reins in a sub-two-minute mile.

Biggest Crowd in Two Years Heralds Unhappy With R Sox Split

BOSTON (AP)—The Boston Red Sox had mixed emotions today as they shared ninth place with Washington in their bid to move up in the American League.

"They tried to give it to us in the ninth inning and we couldn't take it," Boston Manager Billy Herman said. "The Red Sox pitched a doubleheader with the California Angels Wednesday night at Fenway Park."

Nineteen base hits produced nearly as many runs as Boston's 1-0 victory in the first game. The Red Sox pitched a doubleheader with the California Angels Wednesday night at Fenway Park.

Only in two innings were the winners unable to score. The Red Sox pitched a doubleheader with the California Angels Wednesday night at Fenway Park.

Success Hasn't Spoiled Jack Nicklaus Learned To Set Own Pace

AKRON, Ohio (AP)—Success hasn't spoiled Jack Nicklaus, who will tee off today in the PGA's Golden Anniversary Tournament seeking his third title.

The 33-year-old Nicklaus, who won the 1962, 1965 and 1966 U.S. Open, said he has learned to set his own pace and not to be bothered by the crowd.

"I've learned to set my own pace and not to be bothered by the crowd," Nicklaus said. "I've learned to set my own pace and not to be bothered by the crowd."

The FVW Auxiliary has canceled its card party this week. The event is usually scheduled each Friday night at the post home.

Church Delegates Back Low-Cost Renewal Housing

Manchester church representatives are interested in forming a sponsor corporation that would investigate building moderate rental housing in the North End redevelopment area. This was the decision reached last night by 25 church representatives at a meeting sponsored by the Manchester Interfaith Social Action Council (MISAC).

Representatives from the seven churches now will discuss the proposal with their churches. If agreement is reached, steps will be taken to form a sponsor corporation. Representatives expect to meet with the redevelopment agency before their next scheduled meeting Sept. 28.

The representative proposal came after William R. Hirsbon, executive director of the Greater Hartford Housing Development Fund, outlined and explained steps which the church, as a sponsoring agency, would have to take.

If the project is locally approved, the agency would apply to the Federal Housing Authority (FHA) for a 40-year mortgage to finance the housing.

The FHA supervises the project, controls rent costs, and determines rent eligibility according to an income level set by them.

Hirsbon said the two biggest problems involved are land and sponsors. He noted that land will be available in Manchester through redevelopment at a "proper market price" and that the FHA "looks favorably" on church-sponsored groups.

Hirsbon said the sponsor's responsibility is "basically moral" and not legal. "No one is going to take the church to court if it is low on its payments," he said.

Proper project management was a second responsibility, he explained. He noted that management did not mean a "day by day" involvement, however.

Hirsbon said the first step in initiating the project was to form a non-profit corporation to act for all churches. Their job would be to find available land and make preliminary application.

He noted that a redevelopment agency can contract with a non-profit sponsor with no money down.

The second step, he said, would be to hire an architect to draw preliminary sketches. The sponsor would then submit a formal application to the FHA. The sponsor could get money to pay the architect and other preliminary expenses from the Greater Hartford Housing Development Fund.

Hirsbon noted it takes about nine months from initial application to the close of the FHA loan.

He explained that the Federal National Mortgage Association requires only 3 per cent mortgage interest, compared to 6 per cent bank interest.

Group to Walk Proposed Park

"Bring your walking shoes." That is the advice of Town Planner Joseph Tamsky, who will lead a host of town and state officials and just plain townpeople on a "Walk-Through" tomorrow at 10 a.m. The group will meet at the Highland Park Spring and will walk the route of a proposed park, from Case Mt. to S. Main St., and to run under and around the relocated Rt. 6.

Whether the group walks all the way to S. Main St. or only to Gardner St. is a matter of conjecture. However, far it walks, it will get an idea of the walkways, bridge paths and rest areas which Tamsky has proposed, and which the State Highway Department has agreed should be constructed in the area.

So, get out those walking shoes and join in the fun.
