The many moods of Country Life by KROEHLER add a fresh touch of Europe to the American scene Country Life is dramatically Mediterranean or vivaciously Melian, Guinka in the grandest fashion, or slightly French, if that's your fancy. The sollection was inspired by provincial furniture which craftsmen from all over Europe make for their own homes. Wrought iron, with a hand-forged look, forms greetful scrolls. Antiqued pewter door and drawer pulls have solid oak handles. Antiqued glass and bronzed brass highlight warm Oak finishes on solid oak and Oak veneers. If you're looking for something a little bit different and very exciting, see Country Life by Kroehles.

Wilson's Crash Reducing Diet Perhaps there is a rough parable of pounds in what Prime Minister Wilson He has treated the British economy as if it were a fat man who had become used to high living and who had developed what seemed to be lusty appetite and histy capacity to continue such high living indefinitely. From his position as responsible physician to this fat man economy, however, Prime Minister danger signals involved. If this fat man economy kept on gorging itself, kept on trying to follow its natural appetite, it would, within a very short space of keep up with the demands being placed mon it, and it would suffer a devastating financial coronary, followed by a ong and delicate recovery. Prime Minister Wilson is not a physisian but a politician. Therefore, he has to be credited with something more than rofessional competence for having done what he has done. He has shown re-

What he has done is issue strict orfers on diet and activity for the fat man conomy. He has done his best to order t to cut down its consumption of fatducing ingredients. He has done his best to prescribe exercises which might work off some of the excess avoirduoois the British, only a few months ago, were patting so contentedly.

And if this looks like a crash diet, tays it is intended to prevent a much greater crash and collapse than that in-selved in any present drastic restriction

To bring our parable to its circuitous islander, it is the monetary pound which that system has recently been i dulging its people.

Such an austerity program is a rare and courageous thing, coming from a non-conservative government. We, in this country, live in hopes that we won't need anything mimilar to deal with what may be the excess fat of our own economy. The necessity for such hope is intensified by our doubts that we have n Washington a regime which would be capable of similar honesty and courage.

Always An Unsolved Portion? To this day, Hartford County memories can get themselves into an argument over whether Gerald Chapman really committed the particular murder for which he was executed. There are some who would still like to be convinced that Gerhard Hauptmann, if he committed the Lindbergh cidnapping, did so without accomplices. We know Alger Him was convicted of perjury, but we obviously never heard the whole story and perhaps never will. Meanwhile, we would give our fascinated attention to anybody who claimed to have any of the gaps filled in. Every now and then somebody tries to revive the idea that somebody in Lincoln's own Cabinet plotted his asmatic crime of our time, the assassination of President John F. Kennedy, and to the latest and most fully argued revolutionary theory about that crime—that it was participated in and committed by two Oswalds, the one the Oswald who died in Dallas, the other an Oswald who posed as the first real Oswald during the events of the crime, and then suceseded in disappearing.

Such a theory, which leans heavily on the presumption that there had to he two men doing the shooting in order to get off the required number of shots within the time employed, will probshly find a delighted audience in Europe ,which never has been able to buy the American theory that the americantion was the work of a single erackpot. And it will obviously find an audience in this country too, an audience comprised mainly, perhaps, of these mil-Bons of amateur detectives who like to give their own weight to the clues offered them. And this domestic appetite for such a theory will be stimulated by the number of clues and bits of evidence which the Warren Commission was not able to resolve to its own satisfaction There were party faithful swimming or fit into any coherent explanation of ever being able really to explain them There the situation stands. Even with the great majority of us, who will concinde that the Warren Commission must have found the great main and important truths about the crime, and who are not going to allow ourselves any cal worry that any important detail or participant is missing, will not be able to resist debbling, now and then, in the possible, after all.

It is that way with almost every famous crime, and sometimes within the testimony of human beings who have been witnesses to identical events and still never quite agree just how the principle. But putting it into law, especially a far-ranging Federal law, poses a big bundle of problems, not the least of which is whether the law would do more harm than good. The good that the proposed law would accomplish is easy to describe. Enactment would allow any person, Negro white to have a chance at buying s house anywhere. A bigoted homeowner couldn't refuse another man the right to buy the house, assuming the house was for sale and the buyer had the price. But beyond this simple assertion lies a prom ise, not often stied but nonetheless im-piled. Enactment of a fair-housing law would broaden residential integration and, somehow, make a big dent in the nation's trouble-breeding urban ghettos. Not so, if you listen to at least one of bill's backers, Sen. Hugh Scott of Senator Scott argues that a man aght to be able to seek housing whereever he chooses "subject only to his financial capacity and his personal Whether this is truly a right und, if so, whether it can be legislated Scott at least concedes that s "financial capacity" limits his hunting. So the ghettos won't the poor, of whatever color the suburbs. Yet the promise is implied, ment and bitterness when it is not Does such a questionable result justi-fy the burden that the proposal at least in its present form, would place on the homeowner? Attorney General Katzenbach sees the law requiring man to sell to the highest hidder, what the bidder's race. If the highes sidder happens to be a Negro, and the wner changes his mind and with irsws his house from the market, Mr. Katzenbach would see a violation of the law. Once a man offers his house for sale, the Attorney General argues, he is obliged to see the transaction through legal principle that may confound many an unbigoted householder.

There remains, of course, the question of whether the proposed law in its pressmall matter. Right now the measure shows how a noble-sounding principle can loss a lot of nobility when it is conformation as the law of the land.—Hi
