It Had To Be Gremlins The gremlins must be at work with segard to our relationship with Cambodia; not all the conscious folly-seekers in the world could conspire to bring about the chain of events entered on the record in the past few days. The other day, over in Cambodia, that months of the year as they can manage. group of Americans representing the organization which calls itself "Americans Want to Know" visited one of the Cambodian villages near the border of Bouth Vietnam which had allegedly been attacked by American aircraft. They inspected the village, picked up bomb fragments which the ex-Green Beret man in the group identified as American, and left to pursue some of the other objectives of their tour, which ostensibly was aimed at seeing whether or not the Communist Vietcong or Communist troops from North Vietnam were using Cambodian territory as a sanctuary in their operations against the Americans in South Vietnam. Since this American touring group included pacifists, and unrelenting critics of our policy in Vietnam, their expected reportthat they had seen no Vietcong, but that they had seen American bomb fragments and some of the fragmentized human beings who had been vic-

What happened next was that, the day after this American group left the Cambodian village in question, members of the International Control Commission, which was charged at the Geneva Conference with the task of surveying possible violation of the borders and agreements established there, moved into the same vil-

been made without obtaining too much

And while the Canadian, Polish, and Indian members of the International Control Commission were in this village, American planes strafed the village with their rockets and guns. Communist Poland, naturally enough, produced the loudest, shrillest diplonatic shrick about this extraordinary action and this extraordinary piece of timing. But our friend and neighbor Canada also felt compelled to voice its "concern" to our State Department over the unhappy event reported to it by its member of the International Control Commission.

What an unofficial, and unfriendly group of Americans, and an official, friendly Canada both agree upon is, as tt happens, substantiation for the formal complaint the nation of Cambodia ttself has lodged in the United Nations. Not even that, however, is necessarily the end of the potential chain of influence of such grotesque coincidences. Just before all this happened, Averell Harriman, President Johnson's most widely roving and most highly trusted diplomatic trouble shooter, was handed the mission of visiting Cambodia next month, ostensibly to see what could be done about patching up diplomatic relations between the United States and that country.

The moment the mission was announced, however, speculation ran far beyond any direct question of relations between the United States and Cambodia. There is, of course, a catch. When you come back, as even the opium smoker must, the world will be exactly like you left it, which means full of toil and trouble. If this is depressing, it's also enlightening. It makes you realize the permanence of woe, which is in fact set both our foretign diplomacy and our somestic politics. Nobody-not even one of McNamara's computers—could ever deliberately plan and execute anything like this. There had to be gremlins.

An Ideal Marriage

It is no secret that, on the late eveming of July 9, five days after the Fourth of July which symbolizes the half-way mark in the baseball season, a good many of us watched a football game. On Friday night, Aug. 5, we watched another. On Sunday afternoon, Aug. 7, there was another offering There are others in the listings.

For one thing, the idleness has been so pleasant as to tempt you into seeing virtues in useless activity and an empty mind, both viewpoints being un-American. . . . The virtue of idleness is that it gives you time to perceive that while many of the world's woes are perhaps worth worrying about, worrying about them doesn't get you anywhere. This type-

It may be true enough that smoking gives you caneer, but considering the number of haz-

That we persist, year after year, in the effort to have ourelves a garden is a result of twin influences on our youth. One of these influences was a beautifully spent boyhood on a farm in Taunton District, Newtown. And that has always probably been the main conscious object of our imitation and effort to recapture. The second influence was a poem by Andrew Marvell, first encountered in a course on Seventeenth Century literature taught by the late Alexander Witherspoon, who has always been this department's nomination for great unsung presence in an English Department which included such famous luminaries as William Lyon Phelps, Chauncey B. Tinker, and Stanley Williams. The Marvell poem one encountered in the Witherspoon course was titled "The Garden,"

And it doubtless became, as well, the subconscious impression of what having a garden again would be like. We have never, of course, succeeded in growing a meion big enough to stumble over. But that, as other amateurs can attest, is an especially exotic challenge to skill and luck.

A Couple of Real Bookworms

Long, hot summers are for stretching out and reading lots and lots of books. And these two young ladies have done just that. Since the close of school in June, they have gone through a total of 180 between them-and completed book reports on them, too. Linda Maher, 7, left, who completed 100 books, and her sister Kathy, 9, who read 80, were named the top winners of West Side Library's "Follow the Manchester Reading Trails" program, which closed Tuesday. The names of participants were pinned to a map of Manchester and moved along trails showing places of historical interest as they finished required book totals. Winners received certificates. Linda and Kathy are daughters of Mr. and Mrs. William T. Maher

Strike Bill Passed by House Unit

WASHINGTON (AP)-The House Commerce Committee approved today a bill to order the 35,000 striking mechanics back to their jobs on five grounded

The bill, approved 17 to 13, is essentially the same as one previously passed by the Senate The first 30-day resumption of work would be by congressions mandate and procedures would be provided by which the President could order the men to remain on their jobs as much as 150 days more.

Amendments that would have required presidential initiative rom the start were defeated. The bill was adopted amid reports of a final effort to solve he dispute by negotiations under Labor Department auspices, Chairman Harley O. Stage gers, D-W. Va., refused to com-But ashe was announcing the
