'Project Concern' Arrangements Ready For Busing Program

Preparations for local participation in the program of busing 62 Hartford children to Manchester elementary schools have just about been completed, according to Isador Wolf, head of the teacher team that is co-ordinating Manchester's part of the project.

Now named "Project Concern," the two-year busing experiment will also be conducted in four other Hartford area towns—West Hartford, Farmington, Simsbury and South Windsor—for a total of about 290 disadvantaged Hartford children, mostly Negroes and Puerto Ricans from the North End.

The Connecticut State Board of Education is sponsoring the project, whose $200,000 yearly cost will be borne by Hartford and by state and federal grants. Wolf, who is also principal of Manchester Green School, said that all the children coming to Manchester have been identified and assigned to a bus and a classroom, and that bus schedules have been established.

There will be eight pickup points in Hartford, with stops about three minutes apart. Children who board the buses first will be required to ride them a maximum of 40 minutes; those who board last will have an 18-minute ride to school.

It is expected that once drivers become accustomed to the routes the traveling time will lessen, Wolf said. But he pointed out that the established time is not excessive, in view of the fact it is less than that spent on buses by some Manchester pupils.

To solve the problem of participating in after-school activities, a late bus furnished by Hartford will make the rounds of schools beginning at 4:45 p.m. It is scheduled to arrive in Hartford at 5:11.

Parents will be notified in advance if their children plan to stay after school for activities, Wolf said. Also, to take special requests for after-school transportation, there will be some-

Firemen Answer 11 Rescue Calls

Aside from its usual duties of putting out fires, the Town Fire Department was kept busy last month performing rescue and emergency operations, answering twice as many calls for this in August than the firemen answered in the previous month.

According to the monthly report released by William C. Mason, fire-chief of the Town Fire Department, the firemen performed 10 rescue and emergency operations in the month, as compared to only five in July.

The firemen were called out 14 times to answer alarms for other than fire in August, compared to 10 such calls for the month before.

The total calls for actual fires answered in the month was 24, compared to 27 in the month of July. Twenty-two of the fires were extinguished by the firemen, using such equipment as pump cans and one-inch hose to either spray a stream of water or cover the blaze with water fog. Two of the fires were out before the equipment arrived.

Of the August calls answered for fires, six were in buildings, and the remainder were in vehicles, outdoor equipment or were brush fires. The brush fires accounted for the majority of these calls for August, numbering 11. This was the same number of brush-blaze calls answered in the month of July. In August of last year, only six such fires were reported.

PROMOTED AT MOTT'S

Sylvia Gottlieb of 130 Richmond Dr. has been elected vice president for consumer relations with Mott's Super Markets, Inc., a newly created post.

Mrs. Gottlieb joined the Mott's organization in 1957 as a hostess, one of a team of several women who operated in Mott's Super Markets on a daily basis assisting customers in their food selections, recipes, and dispensing every conceivable type of counsel and advice on food purchases and preparation. In 1963 she was named director of hostess services.

The in-store hostess concept was pioneered by Mott's and is credited in part to the rapid growth the supermarket chain has enjoyed over the years. Since the inception of the idea, Mott's hostess activities have run the gamut from baby-sitting to emergency meal preparation for temporarily incapacitated housewives.

NEW TYPEWRITER

A new typewriter, which according to Royal Officials, has more automatic features than any other typewriter on the market, was introduced this week by Royal Typewriter Co., a division of Litton Industries.

Called the Royal 600, the machine has over three years of human engineering studies behind it. Questions were asked of secretaries and their bosses as to what they felt was needed most to improve a typewriter, and, on the suggestions, plus the help of computers, the new machine was designed, Royal officials say.

The machine has an automatic ribbon changer, whereby the changer simply drops a ribbon cartridge into place, presses a button and begins to type, and the ribbon is changed.

The Royal 600 also has a half-forward spacer for faster corrections, an automatic "magic monitor" which senses the thickness of papers when multiple copies are made and adjusts accordingly for the thickness, and an on-off light which reminds the user to turn off the machine at the end of the day.

APARTMENTS SOLD

The Colonial Oak Apartments, consisting of 22 units located at 88 Oak St., were sold this week by Elizabeth F. Thomas to Burr Carlson.

According to J.D. Real Estate Co., which negotiated the sale, this is the second time within the year that it has handled the sale of these apartments.

The complex is assessed by the town for over $145,000 and was originally built by Eastern Coast Enterprises and sold to the Thomas Management Co. of Wethersfield.

The transaction was negotiated by John A. DeQuattro, vice president of the firm; Atty. Allan D. Thomas represented the buyers.

The colonial-styled duplex apartments have private cellars, individual dryers, two-zone heating, built-in appliances and many other features.

PROPS FOR HYDROFOIL

Hamilton Standard has recently delivered the largest marine propellers ever made of titanium to Lockheed Shipbuilding and Construction Co., Seattle, Washington, for installation on the U.S. Navy's Plainview high speed hydrofoil ship.

The propellers were manufactured by Hamilton Standard and will push the 300-ton experimental craft when it cruises on its three hydrofoils—underwater wings that lift the hull clear of the water.

The use of titanium and the propeller's supercavitation design minimize damage caused by vapor cavities or bubbles forming on the blades during high-speed operations. Titanium also is more resistant to seawater corrosion than stainless steel and bronze alloys, metals

NEW TECHNIQUE

A new technique in masonry construction of walls was shown last week by Plasticrete Corp. to several hundred persons connected with the building trades.

Used in the demonstration were an office warehouse for a construction company in South Windsor and a convalescent hospital in Litchfield.

The new technique uses a threadlike adhesive mortar to put blocks together. The adhesive mortar is applied with a standard caulking gun, rather than the conventional mason's trowel, and the conventional sand, lime and cement are not used.

onstrations were special designed pre-shrunk units. They were placed in the wall in a vertical position and bonded together with the adhesive mortar, after which partitions were to be given a coat of plaster or be covered with dry wall board. Examples of both interior partition walls, as well as exterior load bearing walls were shown.

The company is also supplying the Plainview's autopilot which controls the operation of the hydrofoils. The 220-foot ship will have a crew of 20 officers and men.

Violence Missing From Vocabulary

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — The good words are action, adventure, survival, struggle, even battle and war. But, when talking to a television producer or to an actor with a piece of the show, don't mention "violence." It is television's dirty word.

For the record, there is positively, absolutely no violence at all in any television series. Or, anyway, very little.

When the U.N.C.L.E. men explode an underground Thruish installation that isn't violence. It's tongue-in-cheek action.

When Batman and Robin take on a squad of hoods and fists fly as words like "bam!" and "pow!" are superimposed on the screen, that isn't violence. That's camp, kids.

When Marshal Dillon grimly wins the draw, it's raw frontier justice, never violence.

When a "Combat" episode is short of plot, it fills empty minutes by having the U.S. infantrymen and the Germans snipe at each other. Nazi after Nazi clutches his heart and falls face down over a log. That isn't violence. That's war.

If "violence" is a naughty word, "challenge" is a nice one. Anyone connected with a series will tell you he's there, but not for the fame or the money. It's the challenge.

A careful look at the new network schedules suggests that for many, the main challenge has been to work out a format that demands plenty of — well, let's call it mandatory action. Close to half the evening shows are dedicated to fists, guns, explosive charges or, for a change, snarling battles between wild animals.

Actor Andrew Prine, currently playing a man of peace who often — like once a week — is pushed beyond human endurance in ABC's "The Road West," insists that network censors watch carefully the violence content these days.

"I remember doing a 'Gun-smoke' a few years ago that nobody could get away with now," he said. "Before I got killed in the show, I had killed nine people. In fact, I've done three of these shows and never got out of one of them alive."

The TV day of the wandering fast gun who shoots it out in a different cow town each week is gone.

Most of today's western heroes are men or property and substance, like "Bonanza's" Cartwrights and "Big Valley's" Barkleys who are just protecting themselves.

Out of some 40 regularly scheduled programs (out of 90) that depend upon "action" climax, 25 are carefully blocked into time spots before 9 p.m.

Those early hours are regarded by programmers as "family viewing" time, which means

(See Page Four)

Grid Watching To Be Explained

At least 60 healthy young men will be ardent viewers of "The Fine Art of Football Watching" when the hour-long ABC News color special is presented on ABC-TV Wednesday, Sept. 7 from 10 to 11 p.m., EDT.

Members of the 1966 Michigan State University football squad, they comprise what might be called a "captive audience." The reason: The Spartan football coach, Hugh "Duffy" Daugherty, plays a prominent role in the production.

Asked whether "The Fine Art of Football Watching" would be required viewing for his athletes, who will be in the final phases of training at the time, coach Daugherty said with a wink:

"You'd better believe it. Any of my guys who expect to earn their football letters this season had better watch their coach on television."

"And," he added seriously, "by watching the program, I hope they'll learn some things which might help us win an extra game or two this fall."

LUCI JOINS MILTIE—Lucille Ball helps Milton Berle launch his new ABC-TV series on an advance premiere Friday at 9 p.m. It will be seen in the area over WNHC-TV, Channel 8.

ABOUT TIME—Joe E. Ross and Imogene Coca are co-starred in a new CBS-TV series which premieres Sunday, Sept. 11, on WTIC-TV, Channel 3.

New Season's Shows In Familiar Pattern

HOLLYWOOD (AP)—One of the biggest agents in show business, says: "They're playing it safe this season."

And in those few words he summed up Hollywood's consensus on the caliber of the regularly scheduled television series turned out in the studios here.

They are an assortment of comedy, adventure, westerns and variety shows cut, with few exceptions, from patterns which have proved popular.

The studio product, made with professional skill and approximately the same amount of inspiration invested by commercial bakers in Thursday's batch of leaves, will provide the basic television fare in the season that starts Tuesday.

And if that were all, it would be easy to predict that the shows, as a whole, would be no more impressive or stimulating than those of last season, which will certainly not go into the books as one of television's golden years.

Fortunately, the three major networks are in competition to leaven their schedules — and perhaps coincidentally polish their images — with an especially large number of special programs.

ABC, for instance, is engaged in the production of an impressive series that will amount to weekly specials under the title of "Stage '67." These range from original dramas and musical comedies to documentaries. Ingrid Bergman will appear in a one-character drama, "The Human Voice," and Truman Capote will narrate an adaptation of his "Christmas Memory" among other off-beat entries.

There will be productions of such plays as Arthur Miller's "The Crucible," Tennessee Williams' "Streetcar Named Desire" and "The Glass Menagerie" and Noel Coward's "Blithe Spirits," to mention a few on all networks.

There will be special reruns of recent hit motion pictures, including "The Music Man" and "Bridge on the River Kwai." There will be a 90-minute production of the Lerner-Loewe musical, "Brigadoon," — and many more.

This is the first time in years that there have been no real rumors — as opposed to the usual press agents' puffs — about sure-fire hits, off-beat ideas and new stars on the horizon.

There is great interest in the reception that will be given shows starring two big motion picture names — "The Jean Arthur Show" and Ann Sheridan's "Pistols and Petticoats."

You can get an argument going any time on whether Milton Berle will succeed in his variety come-back. A comedy show about a rock 'n' roll group called "The Monkees" is supposed to have captured some of the way-out camera techniques of "A Long Day's Night." There is curiosity about whether "The Green Hornet" will strike the same rich vein hit by last season's "Batman."

But there are bound to be hits as well as misses in the new schedule since every program is part of a three-entry race, one by each network, for win, place and show position on the Nielsen charts.

Lone Ranger Set to Ride In Cartoons

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Hi-Yo, Silver, the Lone Ranger rides again — and again.

There seems to be no end to the Western travels of the masked rider, who began his battle against frontier baddies a third of a century ago on radio. He eased into the television saddle 18 years ago and can still be seen on TV throughout the world, although the series stopped filming seven years ago.

Now the Lone Ranger — a misnomer since he is usually accompanied by his redskin yes-man — is beginning a new phase. Next Saturday morning he will start appearing in cartoon form on the CBS network.

Jack Wrather, the Texas oilman who owns the Lone Ranger, previewed a couple of the cartoons in the basement of his Beverly Hills building, and they proved splashy in color and vigorous in action. The animation was especially good.

"We use twice as many drawings as other television cartoons," he explained. "We feel the audience deserves to have more realistic action instead of the semianimated films which are really cheaters."

"But I think it will be worth it," he said. "After all, the Lone Ranger is an important, presold property that has made millions over the years. I honestly believe that the cartoons will open up brand new areas for the show, and we're prepared to go in every direction."

The cartoon series was the result of annual surveys of the Wrather properties.

"We do the same thing with Lassie," he explained. "Each year we evaluate the needs of the audience and the direction of the market, and we try to plan accordingly. This seemed like a good time to bring the Lone Ranger back in a new and modern form, giving the younger audience something that would not insult their intelligence."

"If their parents like it, too, so much the better. I don't mind if they consider it camp, but we didn't plan it that way. We leave that to 'Batman.'"

Bonita Granville Wrather, associate producer of "Lassie," Sundays (7:00-7:30 p.m., EDT) on the CBS Television Network, absorbed theater lore beginning with the cradle. Her father was the late Bernard (Bunny) Granville, a Ziegfeld star, and her first role was not the traditional walk-on but a "carry-on" in her father's arms.

Denver Still Works Despite Bad Breaks

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Bob Denver didn't look much like a man who had broken his marriage and his collarbone.

Despite rumors that they were divorcing, Denver's wife, Maggie, was in his dressing room at the Columbia Ranch, where he is appearing in a feature, "Who's Minding the Mint?" Their domestic situation seems to have eased. "We'll be all right unless she throws me out again," said he.

The collarbone may have something to do with that. Maggie had spent the weekend nursing her husband after a motorcycle accident in which he suffered the fracture. His plight appealed to her sympathy.

Denver was able to report for the movie the following Monday. He wears a brace but hasn't missed a scene, except for a Watusi dance he had to forego.

"I was lucky," he admitted. "I could have landed on my head."

Lucky indeed is Bob Denver, who has scarcely been unemployed since deciding to become an actor after getting out of Loyola University of Los Angeles. Following a run in "Dobie Gillis," he moved onto "Gilligan's Island." The series is entering its third year despite sneers of the critics and time changes by CBS.

"We're being changed to another night again this season," sighed Denver. "That means we'll have to build our audience all over again. The network doesn't do enough to let the viewers know we have moved, so it takes time for them to find out. Besides we're up against two new shows, and people will want to watch them at first."

"I figure it will be two months before we can get back our rating."

He expressed confidence that "Gilligan's Island" could bounce back. The first 13 shows have already been filmed, and Denver indicated the writers have not drained the possibilities of seven souls on a desert island.

"We've had some of our best shows to date," said the young comic. "In one of them we do a musical Hamlet with Phil Silvers as guest star. How does he get on the island? His plane crashes nearby. And he doesn't tell about us after he's rescued because he steals our idea for the musical Hamlet and sells it to Hollywood. Typical producer."

Violence Missing

that there are lots of youngsters watching.

Kids, of course, are the ones who love the action shows best. But an old controversy rages over whether tender minds are influenced and inured to violence by seeing so much of it on the small screen or whether it is an aid in purging their own frustrations.

Either way, the word violence has gone underground.

CHANGE IN MENU

In the interests of honesty, it should be noted that a subterfuge was employed during the shooting of a scene in "The Music Man," which starts the new season for "The CBS Thursday Night Movies" and "The CBS Friday Night Movies" in a two-part presentation Thursday, Sept. 15 and Friday, Sept. 16 (9-11 p.m., EDT). For the "park sociable" sequence, producer-director Morton Da Costa asked, for 64 gallons of pink ice cream, tinted to match exactly the costumes and accessories worn by the singers and dancers. The prop man, knowing that the ice cream would melt rapidly, mixed up 64 gallons of non-melting pink mashed potatoes. He was delighted with the results, and so was Da Costa. No one thought to ask the singers and dancers how they liked it.

Mike Mazurki, former wrestler and boxer who will be featured as a cave man in "It's About Time," starting Sunday, Sept. 11 (7:30-8 p.m., EDT) on the CBS Television Network, has a pair of cauliflower ears that prompted fellow cast member Joe E. Ross to ask if he acquired them wrestling or boxing. "Neither," said Mazurki. "I got them from telephones, calling my agent for work."

The locale—the old West—is the same, but Douglas V. Fowley's role as Grandpa in "Pistols 'n' Petticoats" on the CBS Television Network is a far cry from his portrayal of Doc Holliday in the "Wyatt Earp" series.
