gressional elections on Nov. 8. In the state election, the voters are confronted with the claim of a powerful political machine that it should be consequences of abuse of its power. If it is caught brokering state insurance policies to its own favorites, if it is caught manipulating legislative or administrative favors for its clients, if it is caught wheeling and dealing with highway routes and contracts, the voters are supposed to close their eyes and ears and noses and troop dutifully to the polls as if they were voting for mother love and Christmas.

And if this same state machine becomes so careless and contemptuous of public intelligence and taste that it dares nominate, at its state convention, a candidate or two obviously lacking qualification for the responsibilities election might entail-then the public is supposed, once again, to close its mind and all its senses and cast a nice dutiful vote to let it get by, this time.

There are national issues in this campaign, and these rightfully concern Connecticut voters as they consider their choices for members of Congress. There is the issue of peace and war in Vietnam, specifically, and the issue of the Johnson administration's whole attitude toward the building of a structure of peace through the United Nations in general. And there is the issue of an inflation which threatens the very life of the prosperity we are now enjoying.

time the voters are being offered the spectacular drama of a presidential trip, and on the issue of inflation the voters are being told, with cynical frankness, that nothing serious can be done until the election is over and those who may happen to be rubbed the wrong way by proper curative measures won't be able protest against them. One can calculate how impressive the after-election action of an administration which functions this way before the election is

Berlin's Mayor Dines Out

A judgment was ventured here the ther day to the effect that, when the reunification of Germany occurs, as it must occur, if there is ever to be normalcy in Europe or in the world, there would be no living statesman, German or American, who would be able to Such a judgment rode rather roughly over the presence on the scene of one German leader who obviously has great sincerity and some courage in his desire to work for the reunification of Germany. He is, of course, Mayor Willy Brandt of West Berlin. And he has, of course, his special reasons for sincerity and courage. He occupies the isolated outpost city of West Berlin, which suffers most from the partition of Germany. And he belongs to the Social Democratic party, which would be likely to win the first national election which included Protestant East Ger-

Wait Till Next Year?

This year the annual mystery of just how the various rating systems operate to discover which television programs are the tops was preceded and perhaps upstaged by another mystery which must have fascinated many viewers. . The mystery which staked out a prior claim in the present season was the mystery of how a whole bunch of new programs ever got to be offered to the tender mercy of the ratings in the first

Who ever thought a regular extension of an entertainment talent already thin would prove popular? Who made the judgment that an inferior new intrigue for a good old one? Who entertained the silly hope that a little absence from the medium for a group of stereotypes had created some fresh new demand for them? Who made the programming mistake, but did the viewing public the great favor, of providing more opportunity for viewers to watch more movies, some of them very good movies, when even the most mediocre movie has an easy time of it proving itself superior to passably good television?

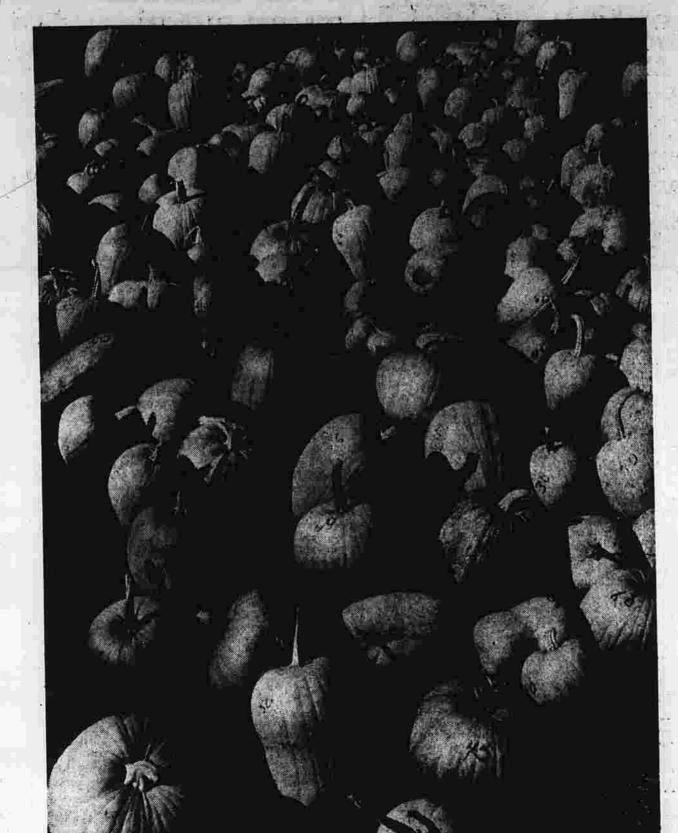

The answer to all these questions, the key to the mystery, is easily given. Faced with what they had left over from last year, it made sense for television producers to be willing to try anything. Almost anything must have some slight chance of proving itself better. What if, as it may have developed, the gamble turned out to contain more losers than winners? At least the industry tried. And it really had nothing to lose, except an audience which, already bored, really had no place to go. Next year, we predict, will be a vintage year. we read several years ago? We may, if worse comes to worst, try to read it

Medical Aid For Vietnamese

Congressman Giaimo and Sen. Dodd have now been drawn into the controversy over a small Yale campus group's shipment of about $300 worth of medical ald to Communist Viet Nam. The publicity they bring to the project is oubtedly just what the Yale' men hoped for since the humanitarian hairshirts which the Rev. Mr. Coffin and his associates so frequently don come fully equipped with stertophonic amplifiers, photoflood plug-ins, and flip-out handbills on a variety of subjects. Yet, we think it's appropriate that this issue be looked-at from a high level. The Yale group's right to object to the war is unquestioned. Its right to ease human suffering, if such aid can be provided responsibly and without military encouragement to the enemy is un-

Facilities at the University of Connecticut and the four state colleges have been expanded under Dempsey to accommodate over 37,000 full-time and part-time students - an increase of about 14,000 since '61. Besides the growth of the campus at Storrs, UConn has expanded its extension schools throughout the state, has a new Law School, is building a new Medical-Dental School.

Enrollment at vocational schools and the technical institutes has increased from about 18,000 full-time and part-time students in '61 to 38,000 in '66.

The state has taken over and now operates two-year community colleges with an enrollment of about 3,000.

Grants to towns for education for the coming year are $110 million, more than double the figure for '61.

In the Dempsey years, the state has witnessed the greatest expansion in its history on all educational fronts.

We're still engineering highway death traps!

The Dempsey Administration is still engineering highway deathtraps. Getting on and off Connecticut's superhighways is downright dangerous. Crossovers are terrifying. We're years behind on many projects...and making million-dollar mistakes as we try to catch up. Here is proof once again that the quality of state services, under the Dempsey Administration, is going down as the cost goes up. You can do something about it on Rates drop.

Again.

We recently announced a million-dollar rate reduction. This was the fourth reduction in intrastate telephone rates in four years, saving Connecticut telephone users a total of almost $5,000,000 annually. During the same period, cuts in interstate long-distance rates have resulted in an additional customer savings totaling more than $2,000,000.

You used to have to pay a one-time charge of $7.50 for every color phone you ordered. Now we'll install all the color phones you want in your home at one time for just $6.50. And residence customers with two private lines now get the second line at the two-party rate, a 20 to 30 percent saving. These are just two parts of the recent rate reduction.

For the President, the New Zealand stop represented an expression of friendship for a longtime U.S. ally and a return visit to a country where he spent some time as a Navy officer during World War II. Pago Pago, in American Sa-moa, afforded Johnson an opportunity to call attention to a iny island that he regards as a showplace for what can be done to boost the fortunes of a poor and rather primitive people. By all odds, the Samoan stopover was the most colorful yet during the President's journey, which will take him to at least five more countries during the

There were friendly signs, L.B.J.," and an impromptu serenade of "For He's a Jolly Good Fellow" from some people within range of his typically energetic handshaking. With wife Lady Bird at his side, Johnson first set foot in New Zealand at the Ohakea sir base 97 miles north of Wellington. After watching a colorful Maori ceremony there in a light rain — and telling some 8,000 welcomers that he could use rain on his Texas ranch - the
