Bigger Than Both Of Us

Over in Malaysia, President Johnson rave his first official reaction to the ews that Communist China, last week, and used a missile for delivery of a nuelear warhead.

For one thing, he reasserted his mise of United States support for any non-nuclear nation-presumably he was thinking of Asian countries in this rticular context-who might be subected to the 'threat of nuclear black-

Secondly, he warned that China's purnuit of nuclear armaments for itself not only makes arms control vastly more sifficult, but 'it also invites danger to

"The leaders of China," he said, must realize that any nuclear capability they can develop can-and willbe deterred.'

This was, perhaps, intended to be as vague and veiled as it may sound. And it directs our attention to the possible meaning of the word "deter." The first dictionary we consulted said this: "To prevent or restrain by fear, difficulty, danger, or the like, from acting or proceeding."

For a somewhat fuller definition of the word "deter" we found this: "To turn aside, discourage, or prevent from acting by fear or consideration of dangarous, difficult, or unpleasant attend-Either definition, upon analysis, seems to provide some answer to the question the President's use of the word

"deter" inevitably inspired. Was he saying that he was going to 'prevent" the Chinese from amassing too much of an arsenal by moving in and blasting China and its nuclear installations before they reached the point we might consider dangerous for the

He could hardly have been saving ans, under any dictionary definition of he world.

Rather, he seems to have been saying that, no matter how much nuclear weaponry China might amass for itself, we would be standing over it with much more that China would never are use its own nuclear power even as iplomatic threat or blackmail. But whether, in his use of the word

"deter" he was thus sticking to the dictionary, or saying something which night be the first groundwork for what a now being called a "pre-emptive" ac-Hon against nuclear China, the judgnent has to be that neither choice is very much to have. Neither offers us or he world any satisfactory solution to the problem of nuclear China. To be confronted with just these two choices, and nothing else, is to confess that one, and one's nation, is helpless and powerless. For whatever the President was maying, it merely added up to "We will blast you either before or after you blast mybody else." If either we or the Chinese have any ense, such a situation ought to "deter" in the quoted dictionary sense) each

f us equally. In reality, however, there is no reaon to expect that the bomb will exert any less mastery over the Chinese than has over us. It seems bigger than

Will They Believe It Now?

The other day we quoted here a recorrespondent at the United Nadons, to the effect that at that body here was "little support for the Unitd States or for its thesis, in which ardly anyone here believes, that North lietnam has committed an act of ag-

The combination of logic and timing hich permits much of the world to ld such an assumption is that a domestic revolt in South Vietnam against methods and dominations of the lem government began originally quite endent of anything in North Vietand that it was not until some me afterward that the insurgency inde South Vietnam began asking, and tting, help from North Vietnam. This slight, and interminably debatable interpretation of fact and time is merged, in many verdicts around the world, with an almost wilful impulse to declare the United States actually the outside intervenor, even aggressor, in Vietnam, just because we are so much more of an outsider than anybody eise, because the warfare is between people of the same country, and because we are so very big and powerful. We recall this report from the United Nations the other day in order to apend to it a statistic we have garnered from the communique issued at Manila. The authors of that communique succeeded in including the word aggression in their text a total of 16 times. We all know that if anything is said often enough, it eventually becomes a

The Soft Drink Orbit

We know that how Colonel John H. Glenn, Jr., makes his living is not very much our business, and we would not, for that matter, have an easy time of it specifying what we would like to have him do, if the choice were handed us. What we do experience is a slight sense of disillusionment as we see the fine remembered face of America's first astronaut appearing on the financial pages in his new capacity of chairman of the new foreign subsidiary of one of our great soft drink producers. In this capacity, this country's first astronaut is to promote sales of this particular soft drink abroad, beginning with a five nation tour in the immedi-

There is, of course, no really defensi-

But the way we feel is essentially the way we also felt when America's first astronaut was, for a little time, embarked on another kind of career—that time political. When he was going to run for the United States Senate that, too, was a proposition in which the talent it took to be an astronaut and the aura won as an astronaut were being considered the basis for an entirely different kind of career.

When we thus confess our distaste for having our first historic astronaut take up some inferior vocation which openly capitalizes on his glory and fame as an astronaut, we expose ourselves to the inevitable question. What would we like to have him do? Make a museum piece of himself? Stay in the service which gave him his world-girdling opportunity but which, of course, can hardly offer him new thrills to top that? Retire on the presumably adequate income his role as our first astronaut has probably already assured him? When we ask ourselves such questions they merely lead on to the ultimate question, which seems to be the gain of risks and rewards between Colonel Glenn and his country that he would lose his freedom to order the rest of his own life according to his own pleasures and profits?

The hard, logical answer has to be that we have no right to expect anything of him. Which leaves us merely with the feeling, which will not go away, that we could have been more pleased if our first astronaut had chosen, say, to become a college professor or president rather than a soft drink salesman.

Dempsey For Governor

Governor John Dempsey can be justly proud of the progress Connecticut has made during his administration. He came to high office when Governor Ribicoff went to the Cabinet. He developed into more than a skilled administrator. He shrewdly analyzed the temper of his state and aided in developing

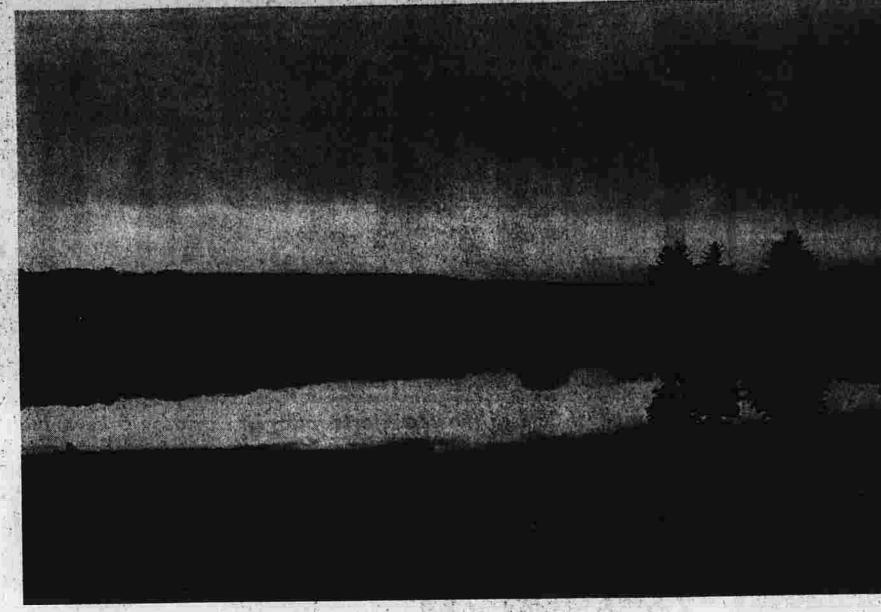

This empathy between the state and Governor Dempsey has paradoxically concealed his achievement. During his whole administration he has had a Republican House but under Governor Dempsey it has been a Connecticut House. A situation which would frustrate a narrow politician seems normal Connecticut under Governor Dempserved. They have been served in responsible fashion and without fanfare. Spending has kept pace with inflation and population growth, and services improved. Education, welfare, health and hospital programs comprise 76 per cent of the $414 million General Fund expenditures. These expenditures have increased nearly 60 per cent in the past five years. No state government is above criticism but Connecticut has reduced this criticism to a minimum Commissioners can be faulted on details but not on their goals, determination and integrity. The condition of a State is not deternined by the growth of its government but by the prosperity of its people. The Dempsey Administration has built in the state an atmosphere attractive to the best type of industry, research and commerce. This is indeed the "land of steady habits" and Governor Dempsey has been steady in his administration of

This, then, is the single greatest obstacle to Brown's thirdterm ambition, and wrapped into it are all those collateral issues that Reagan so skillfully exploits the cost of state welfare programs, the growing unhappiness with big government Washington and violence in the streets. Taken together with Browp's lack of charisms and his tired, old-shoe quality, the package holds disaster for Brown on election day, and the greatest promise for right-wing tepublicanism anywhere in the

NEW YORK (AP) -Scalding water almost washed out Jim Nance's football career when he was four years old. Now he's blazed a trail for Boston to the top of the American Football League's Eastern Division.

the 235-pound Nance knocked down just about everything in his way Sunday as the Patriots efeated the red-hot Oakland Raiders 24-21 for their third straight victory. The triumph, coupled with Buffalo's 33-23 decision over New York, put the Patriots one-half game ahead of the Bills and the Jets in the East. Oakland, which had won three straight, dropped two games back in the Nance, a second-year pro, rambled for 159 yards on 19 carries in the first half and wound up with 208 yards on 38 tries for
