Democratic Party is offering to the people a governor of the calibre of Wilbur Cross, Raymond E. Baldwin, Chester Bowles, or Abraham Ribicoff, executives who tried to move the state toward a solution of its problems. This is not an election in which the Democratic candidate for governor has provided a program to meet the needs of the state, in higher education, in making a real start on pollution control, in dealing with the problems of the cities, rather it is an election in which the people of Connecticut are offered the least common denominator. The watchword is be agreeable, offend no one, and propose nothing that will not find acceptance by all. This is not the stuff of greatness and it isn't what Connecticut deserves. the field of higher education have no found their principal impetus from the governor's office. It is not the governor who has championed community col leges. It is the governor who has referred to the University of Connecticut as "the finest in the nation." when in fact Connecticut ranks 47th among all states in terms of per capita expenditures for higher education, and when in fact the University of Connecticut has a long way to go before it could even approach being called a university of excellence.

Those steps that have been taken in the field of pollution control have not been the work of the governor, who Commission budget before it went to the last legislature. It is the governor who has accused Gengras of trying to move too fast on pollution control, and it is the governor who has countenanced, and probably encouraged, the namby-pamby collution control activities that exist in he state.

Let us look at the future. The cam paign is now almost ended, but can most voters say what Governor Dempsey would like to do in the next four years' Has any program emerged that people identify the governor with, excepting only his committee of 100 which rephrased the known ideas on pollution control? We do not think so. Gengras by contrast has urged an approach to the problems of the cities by recommending a return of a portion of state income to the communities. He has urged a network of tuition-free community colleges, a top to bottom review of state government by a little Hoover Commission, a vigorous program in the

Besides Election, Alice and Socrates

There's more than coverage of election results coming up on television. There's a quartet of special programs, for example. At left, Peter Ustinov plays Socrates in "Barefoot in Athens" Friday 9:30-11 p.m. on NBC's "Hall of Fame"; top, Judi Rolin as Alice and Robert Coote as the Red King in the musical version of "Alice Through the Looking Glass" Sunday 7:30-9 p.m. on NBC; center, Red Skelton and friends in "Clown Alley" Wednesday 10-11 p.m. on CBS, and Dr. Louis S. B. Leakey, anthropologist, in "Dr. Leakey and the Dawn in Man," tonight 7:30-8:30 p.m. on CBS.

"The Aviation Revolution," an hour-long study of the aviation industry, will be shown on NBC Monday 10-11 pm. . . . Otto Preminger, the movie director, appears as "Mr. Freeze" on ABC's "Batman" Wednesunder the new icing, the cake is into the hit class. there, made from the same foolproof recipe Sullivan has been answer to the riddle of audience using for the past 18 years.

It calls for the widest range of acts, from jugglers to grand opera, from Beatles to Belafonte. Most of the time the artists, even the biggest star names, are given only a few minutes in the spotlight. But because Sullivan tries to put in something for every segment of the audience, viewers are likely to stick with the show, knowing that even if the act of the moment is not pleasing, it won't last long, and they may like the next one.

This is a season in which six of the 10 weekly variety shows on the three networks are not, quite frankly, howling successes. In the most recent Nielsen ratings, only three could be counted in the hit category.

It is not coincidence that all three have been around for a long time. There is Red Skelton, a magnificent clown, in his 14th television season, Lawrence Welk has now been around weekly for 12 years.

Each show has its own distinct personality and is predictable. The Sullivan show is, of course, an hour of vaudeville-
