The Sociology Of The Dolls There was, in the financial news the other day, the kind of item which reflects that there is actually in existence the kind of sociological progress all the nation's reformers and civil rights agitators have to believe in, no matter how much the cynics or the reactionaries declare it to be impossible. "You have to change human nature first," says the conservative cynics, when they discuss whether or not there is any sense or hope in all the artificial measures being discussed and planned and launched, in all sections of this country, for a solution of America's problem of race relationships.

But what this item in the financial news the other day said was that human nature, if it is not actually changing, is at least educating and adapting and accustoming itself to new ways of thinking and feeling. Enough of this, and you get to the point where you have to conclude that perhaps human nature is changing, in itself. The item to which we refer conveyed relatively simple information. There has been a great recent gain in the popularity of Negro dolls. Who is buying more Negro dolls, so that their manufacturers weren't able to supply the demand for them in some sections of the country for this year's Chrismas trade? Why are more Negroes buying more Negro dolls this year than ever before? There has been no extensive, authorita-

However, U.S. officialdom at some level frowned on the venture, and both invasion and documentary are thus still pending. place earlier this year, when the United States was, for a time, suffering not only from a shortage of base facilities in Vietnam, but from a shortage of materials with which to construct base and supply facilities. Chinese Communist steel apparently helped resolve our emergency, and helped speed forward the creation of that massive military establishment which, to that mythical observer up in Mars, looks so much like preparation not for the smothering of a relatively small war in Vietnam, but for the waging, should it prove necessary, of full war against Communist At first glance, of course, these reported transactions look shrewd enough from the point of view of the United States. If Chinese industrial interests were treacherous enough to be willing to deal with our intermediaries and help us build military installations aimed at their own country, then we, conceivably, were very shrewd and clever to do business with them, even though we officially forbid ourselves to trade with Communist China. But one cannot leap to an immediate all-clear on the transaction. One would have to ascertain, first, what the dollars involved in the transactions were eventually going to buy for Communist China.

Of Pyramids And Tigers Two countries offer distressing news. In Egypt tourists will no longer be allowed to climb the pyramids, and in India the famous Bengal tigers are starting to disappear. It is true that most of us have never climbed pyramids in Egypt or hunted tigers in India, and very likely most of us never would have. There were stories in magazines and scenes in movies and possibly a post card from an acquaintance, and that seemed enough. But where once we knew we never would, now we know we never can. Most of us have never strolled along the banks of the Seine in Paris, or visited the ruins in Athens, or lolled on a Mediterranean spa. From the hard experience of our practical past, we can fairly judge that we never will. But who can tell?

We might yet have climbed the Great Pyramid at Gizeh. A guide, grinning incessantly and talking gibberish, would have led the way while the sun beat down. At the summit, we would have stood for long moments silently scanning the vast desert in wonder. We might yet have mounted an elephant in India and lumbered through the tall grass searching for a tiger. Natives would have beat drums to flush watched warily from our swaying pinnacle. The tiger would have flashed into view, and cheers would have followed the crack of our rifle.

But the opportunity is ended. The authorities in Egypt in their concern over deaths and injuries resulting from falls have forbidden any more climbing of the pyramids. And in India too many successful tiger hunts are slowly lead-

The Greatest Story Ever Told,

And it came to pass in those days, that there went out a decree from Cassar Augustus, that all the world should be taxed. (And this taxing sons first made when Cyrenius was governor of Syris.)

And all went to be taxed, every one nto his own city.

And Joseph also went up from Galiles, out of the city of Nazareth, into Judea, unto the city of David, which is called Bethlehem; (because he was of the house and lineage

And lo, the ungul of the Lord same up-on them and the plays of the bord those round about them and they were sere afraid.

And the angel cald unto them, Four not, for, behold, I bring you good tidings of grow Joy which shall be to all people.

For unto you is born this day in the city of David, a saviour, which is Christ the Lord.

And this shall be a sign unto you; Ye shall find the babe, wrapped in swaddling clothes and lying in a munger.

And suddenly there was, with the angel, a multitude of the heavenly host prairing God, and saying.

Glory be to God in the highest, and a carth, peace, good will unto hien.

And it came to puss, as the angels were gone away from them into homen, the shep-herds said to one another, Let us now go even unto Bathlehem, and see the thing which is come to pass, which the Lord hath made known unto us.

And they came with haste and found Mary, and Joseph, and the babe, lying in the hanger.

And when they had seen it, they made known abroad the saying which was told them concerning this child.
