The slogan, "If at first you don't succeed, try, try again" is the best day by day resolution anyone can make. As we meet the challenge of every new day, a circumstance may tend to knock us down in disappointment or despair. To keep the "Try, try again" resolution requires our getting up once oftener than we fall down. It is really quite simple. But it

Let the French pedal their weekend in one field after another of human around the countryside. Let the Italians concern and endeavor we find ourselves, at the end of this year, confronted with one dominating set of questions. They are sad, confessional questions. Whom can we believe? What do we believe?

Where are the rocks we used to think we could stand on? What has become of our once instinct tive confidence in some way out? These questions reflect a certain common combination of characteristic and elreumstance in one tremendous problem after another. We are waging a war of whose justness we are not sure by methods which are in dispute under leadership which we do not always feel it possible to believe.

It is a war on which both military men and religious men divide, some saying it is necessary, some it is foolish. some holding it is in a good cause, some declaring it beyond reconciliation with the teachings of religion.

At home we are engulfed in the mounting tides of a great civil struggle, in which we face the question of what we are to do with the great division of races our forefathers and our history have left inside our national home. We are all almost equally coning the holiday weekends, we expect to vinced of the dire dramatic seriousness the problem. But after that we ride between those whose first concern with taking all possible steps toward solution, and those whose chief reaction seems to be to fight off each spe-

In the war abroad, in the war home, we keep thrashing around with activist gestures and motions, which might normally satisfy the urge of brain and blood to be at least doing something about the fixes we are in. But the one sensation which kept growing through this year of 1966 was the sensation of having come, so soon after our vigorous young nationhood, face to face with problems which may have to be classi-and our land. We are as incapable of resolving the nations of the world into one government for their survival as we are incapable of uniting the two fire districts in Manchester, or agreeing that we want a Community College.

We are as helpless before the remorseless indices of the world population explosion and the total space and fruitfulness of this earth as we are before the problem of how to save Main Street in Manchester. Let it go-1966-as indeed the great-

In Japan the New Year's celebration is the longest and most popular holiday of the year. Ropes of twisted rice straw and branches of pine and bamboo decorate Japanese homes as a sign of long life and strong ties of friendship.

Just as revelry in the United States leads to carefree abandon and at times to accidental deaths, indulgence in New Year's customs, leads to fatal accidents abroad as-well. In Japan, for example, newspapers each year chronicle more than a score of deaths that occur when persons choke on rice cakes that have not been fully cooked. - THE NA-

How World Welcomes New Year New Year's revelry in the United champagne, the kiss at the stroke of midnight, the strains of Auld Lang Syne. Who would guess that in distant lands, people celebrate New Year's by eating boiled cod in mustard sauce or bathing statues? New Year's celebrations date back to the earliest times of written history, when the Sumerians paid tribute to the rebirth of life as seasons changed Three thousand years later. Romans recognized a symbol of the new year in the mythological god Janus, whose two faces, one facing into the past and the other facing the future, identified him as the god of doors and gates and of beginnings. His name was given to the first month of the year, January. The theme of renewal is dominant in New Year's celebrations in many countries. In Switzerland, children hide in cupboards and behind doors on New Year's Day and then burst forth with laughter and shouts of "Happy New Venr' to surprise their elders. In Belgium, children visit friends and relatives, distributing thin wafers from

The first days of the new year hold special significance regarding events to come for people in many countries. Central American peasants watch skies anxiously during the first 12 days of January in the belief that each day's weather will forecast the weather for the entire month to which it corresponds in numerical sequence. In Switzerland a red hue in the sky on Jan. 1 foretelle storms, fire, or even war. Spaniards eat well on New Year's Day in the belie that this will ensure an abundance of food in the days to come. In Denmark, teen-agers "smash the new year in" by banging doors and making as much noise as possible. Noise was once considered a powerful remedy for driving off evil spirits. Now it's jus part of a colorful celebration featuring midnight processions, masquerades; an the ringing of church bells. The Danes traditionally eat boiled cod in mustard

For Buddhists the beginning of the new year holds strong religious meaning. It celebrates the victory of light over darkness and of Buddhism over ignorance. In Thailand, statues of Buddha are bathed in water and young Buddhists throw water at each other as a Franchising has reached new highs this year as a booming business according to David B. Slater, executive director of the Boston College Center for the Study of Franchise Distribution. Slater is also president of Mr. Donut Corp, which is a franchise-type operation.

According to Slater, the fran-chise industry has accounted for over 70 billion dollars in retail sales in 1966.

A franchise operation is a business owned and operated by a local owner at the local level, but the business itself is also part of a larger company which gives the franchise.

New Year's Day has been celebrated on many dates. Between January 21 and February 19 in China and between September 6 and October 5 among those of the Jewish faith. The ancient Egyptians, Phoenicians and Persians began the New Year on September 21 at the autumnal equinox, the Greeks, until the 15th century BC, celebrated at the winter solstice, December 21, and in Anglo-Saxon England the 25th of December was New Year's Day. After the Norman conquest it was changed to March 25. England adopted the Gregorian Calendar in 1752 which changed New Year's Day to January 1. Happy New Year.

The Trend Is Back To Reality

By CYNTHIA LOWRY NEW YORK (AP) - Once network television gets past the New Year parades and football games, it will present viewers th almost a dozen new shows to sample and a lot of schedule changes. The so-called "second season" starts around Jan 9.

But for those network executives who decide what we shall see and when we shall see it, the 1966-67 television season in already history, and not very happy history at that. They are now concentrating on the programs and schedules for next September.

CBS hopes to have its entire 1967-88 schedule "locked in" by Washington's Birthday, and NBC and ABC cannot afford to be far behind. For competitive and sales reasons, all three are trying to keep their plans and programs a secret.

Already, we know a few shows that will be arriving nine months hence - NBC's new Danny Thomas series and CBS' Carol Burnett comedy pro-grams. There will be about 25 nore when fall rolls around fewer than usual because those two-hour movie reruns take up a lot of time.

The one thing that makes teleision programming an expenive gamble is that a few men ment try to guess now what viewers will be interested in watching months shead — and towers are notoriously fickle.
