UConns Fail at Line, Cross Wins

Overtime Required at Storrs

By EARL YOST
"They separated the men from the boys tonight," remarked press seat neighbor Sid Himmelstein after Holy Cross had whipped the University of Connecticut last night in overtime at Storrs, 14-9. The comment hit the nail on the head for the invading Crusaders had just a little more class and height, for the home crew. The annual clash between two of New England's powers before a crowd of 2,284 was for the most part, not good basketball. While each team had 11 turnovers—loss of ball through various infractions or errant passes—there were several crucial blunders down the stretch by UConn in the final minutes of regulation play. It was a minor miracle that Coach Fred Shabert's cold shooting crew even came close.
