

Coventry Teachers Cut $2,599 From Pay Proposal

The Education Association of Coventry (EAC) has submitted a revised schedule for teachers' salaries, which would cut their original proposed increases by $2,599 in total.

The first request of the EAC in December asked for an overall increase of $6,132 in teachers' salaries above the current schedule.

The second proposal was disclosed close to the agreed upon adjournment time of the negotiating session, 10 p.m. The school board felt that no action could be taken without further study of the figures, so the negotiations were adjourned and the board went into executive session.

The revised schedule and subsequent decrease in the EAC's request comes primarily from a reduction of a fourth column category to their salary schedule.

Hartford Civic Said Excellent, Soloist Praised

The Hartford Civic Orchestra gave a truly excellent concert last evening at the Hartford Jewish Community Center. A full house was on hand, according to orchestra conductor, Robert Brawley.

Lengthy discussion of comparisons brought out the fact that they depend largely on the criteria that is used.

A board vote to defer further discussion of administrative salaries at least until teachers' salaries are tentatively decided was carried unanimously, and the EAC's new proposal was then brought forth.

One policy matter was cleared up last night, also. Both sides agreed that substitutes should be paid 1/185 of a minimum salary, after 20 days of consecutive substitution in the same classroom. The figure was raised to 1/100.

Scheinwold on Bridge

By ALFRED SCHEINWOLD One of the secrets of winning is to get to "impossible" positions—and make them. As in all such cases, the bidding of today's hand was far from elegant—but the result was quite satisfactory to Don Kraus, Los Angeles expert.

Kraus won the first trick with the ace of spades and resisted the temptation to start off with three rounds of trumps. This would simplify the play if the five missing trumps broke 3-2, but it would cost the contract if the trumps broke lead-ly.

Kraus saw no reason to rely solely on the ace of trumps. Instead, he drew two more rounds of trumps—with the ace and king. If both opponents followed suit both times, he could get to his hand with the ace of hearts and draw the last round of trumps.

As it happened, East could follow suit on the second round of trumps, and Kraus thus found out exactly what he wanted to know. Now he was in a rather routine position. It was obvious that West will move through Ohio today.

Vernon Separate Renewal Sale OK'd For New Courthouse Tract

The redevelopment commission will permit interested developers to bid on the courthouse site, only in the urban renewal area, according to a decision reached at a special meeting Wednesday night.

The decision will allow bids to be entered for the entire redevelopment tract, as preferred by the commission, or on any combination of parcels.

The commission explained that it is only fair to the state to sell the courthouse site separately if that is all a developer wishes to undertake.

The PAC Auxiliary will meet Feb. 1, instead of its regular meeting date which falls on Ash Wednesday.

Tolland County Superior Court

A Rockville man, accused of stabbing a 14-year-old boy, pleaded innocent to charges of assault and battery.

Two Rockville men appearing before Judge Barber on separate moral violation cases were given suspended sentences.

Both men were placed on probation for a period of two years. Paul D. LaFrie, 30, of Bolton, also bound over from 12th Circuit Court, pleaded guilty to theft of a motor vehicle.

A prisoner who had filed for a reduction in sentence with the review board and had it increased instead, had a 1961 sentence on charges of assault with intent to commit murder ordered back into effect by Judge Barber.

The original sentence imposed in Hartford County in April 1961 for eight to twelve years in state prison was reinstated in the case of Theodore M. Rogers. The review board increased the sentence to nine to twelve years. Rogers subsequently filed to have this set aside. Judge Barber ruled Wednesday that since Rogers was not represented at the review board hearing, the original sentence was to be put into effect.

ETV's Need: Security in Freedom

"The goal we seek," said the professional television industry, "is to have a system of financing ETV, 'an instrument for the free communication of ideas in a free society.'"

How to obtain such an instrument represents no simple problem, and the Commission's own solution for it—the imposition of special manufacturer's excise tax on all television sets manufactured—is in itself an immediate violation of freedom, since it requires everybody, no matter what his taste in television, to help pay for the educational variety.

But some degree of the same thing is also happening now, and the present informal, disorganized, and three-legged system of financing educational television is neither adequate nor permanent.

Assuming that educational television ought to be supported, and given financial muscle and stability, the most important consideration is that of freedom—how to finance it in those ways which pose the least threat to the freedom with which the medium originates, designs and presents its fare.

Educational television now gets its dollars in three ways, two of them inevitably dangerous. One way educational television gets money in the form of direct grant or subsidy from government—by vote of a state legislature, for instance. This poses several potential dangers. One might be irregularity of income. Another might be the effort of some political party to bring pressure to bear on the state public affairs committee members. Another might be the possibility that certain commercial or economic or ideological or religious interests might try to influence the Legislature one way or another. Another is that such a system requires the operators of educational television to become lobbyists themselves for their own good.

A second way educational television gets its financing is from various sponsors who pretend they are non-sponsors. A non-sponsor might be defined as a sponsor who is content merely to have his trade name mentioned without any outright commercial advertising in his particular product. Such non-sponsors may be a coffee manufacturer, or a bank, or an insurance company, or an astronomical foundation which happens to wear the name of an automobile.

The sponsorship of educational television by such non-sponsors is a very pleasant and civilized business, and one can be quite sure that no voice or untoward sign of would-be influence ever passes in such arrangements. Still, eventually, such a relationship would have its inevitable results—either in the growth of some sensitivity on the part of program controllers toward their particular friends in the outside world, or even, perversely, in some heading over backward in order to be just as ostentatious as such interests as of any others.

The third and safest route for dollars to reach educational television is from the many small gifts of individual viewers, who give because they appreciate what they see. But this kind of giving inevitably diminishes as the prominence of the tax dollar and the non-sponsor dollar increases.

Man's Beauty

Man's beauty, as described by the essayist, E. B. White, who wrote to the Carnegie Commission as follows: "I think television should be the visual counterpart of the literary essay, should arouse our dreams, satisfy our hunger for beauty, take us on journeys, enable us to participate in events, present great drama and music, explore the sea and the sky and the woods and the hills. It should be our Lyceum, our Chautauque, our Minstrelsy, and our Camelot. It should resolve and clarify the social dilemma and the political pickle. Once in a while it does, and you get a quick glimpse of its potential."

Commercial television has all these potentials, and it has already had some of these realizations. But a live, free, eternally experimental educational television could prove an unbelievable enrichment of American life, and it is to be hoped the Carnegie report stimulates the discussion and action which lead to a combination of optimum security and freedom for the medium.

The C.I.T. And Powell

The C.I.T. liberals by conviction or by profession—who have considered it almost their automatic obligation to espouse the cause of Congressmen Adam Clayton Powell, Jr. and Dr. Allyn Durham, and the present special reason for defending the second part of the Congressman from Harlem has been the racial label he wears. If he were not a Negro, there would be found nothing in his legislative record or in his performance in Congress which would have any natural command of any kind over the loyalties of the professional television industry.

When the Civil Liberties Union defends anybody, however, it almost invariably does so because of law and principle, rather than because of any label or any particular ideological sympathy. Although it is itself invariably labeled as an instrument of the radical left, the Civil Liberties Union defends unpopular figures of the far right as quickly as it does figures of the left. It achieves, far more consistently than the legislative and executive branches of government ever do, and sometimes more consistently than even the judicial branch of government manages to do, the difficult feat of staying above the political personalities involved or the particular popular winds of the moment.

The Civil Liberties Union current defense of Congressman Powell is limited to defense of his right to his seat in Congress, and to the right of his colleagues in the Senate to deny him the membership to which he has been elected.

The Civil Liberties Union position is simple. It finds the Constitution does not include, in its qualifications for membership in Congress, any opportunity for judgments of the kind in question, and his colleagues are not making up Powell. Congress may censure him, criticize him, or vote him out of office, but it cannot strip him of his seat, and in his case and in his record, no constitutional reason for trying to do so.

Shortly before Dirksen and Rep. Gerald Ford of Michigan, the House GOP leader, made his "State of the Union" speech, a top business executive in New England phoned Dirksen to keep an open mind on the Kennedy round of tariff negotiations between the U.S. and Europe.

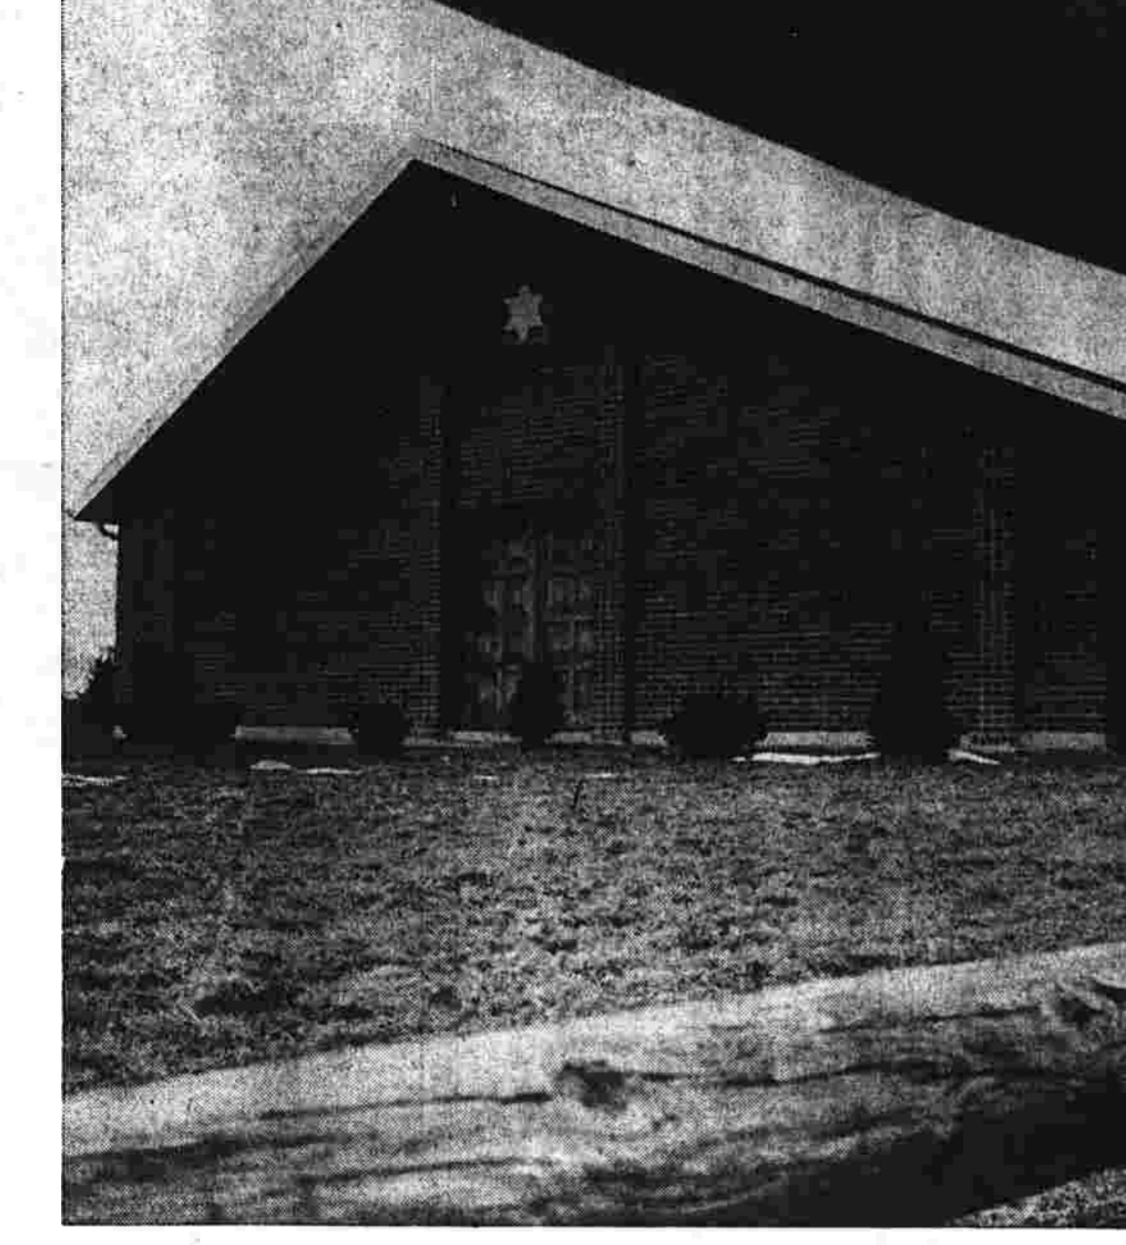

The answer turned out to be a loud "no." Dirksen's speech attacked tariff-cutting and charged that Western Europe was not doing "horse-trading" us out of the protection (we) must have.

The businessman, a moderate Republican who voted the straight party ticket, warned that businessmen now drifting back to the Republicans after their flirtation with President Johnson in 1964 might have second thoughts.

It is a closely-guarded secret, too, that ranking Republicans in the House worked hard to tone down the foreign policy sections of his speech. An initial Dirksen draft included far sharper criticism of Western Europe than the final version.

Also modified was the senator's frontal attack on President Johnson's hope for more East-West trade and his "bridge-building" proposals. But even the tongue-wagging language angered many pragmatic Republicans who don't want their party's policy frozen by the leadership at this stage in the new Congress.

"Growing Pains" We feel somewhat letdown by the leaders of our community. Bolton, like many other communities has growing pains, but they cannot be solved by fighting and bickering. Our leaders, we feel in their respective jobs, are sincerely doing what they feel is best, but we also feel that they should get together and come up with a program on which they all agree.

Since this seems to be impossible and with the past record of the school situation, we feel that the school situation, to join us in supporting the PBC and Board of Education's program, as they seem to have presented the most detailed and well thought out arguments for Bolton's future.

Thank you, Mr. and Mrs. Alden B. Chick, Bolton

Bolton's Second Chance To the Editor: On Wednesday, Feb. 1, between 6 a.m. and 7 p.m., the voters of Bolton will have an opportunity to provide the necessary school facilities in order to improve educational opportunities for their children.

For the second time, a referendum is being put on the ballot asking the voters to provide the necessary funds for the construction of a cafeteria-dormitory combination at the Junior-Senior High School. Determined by the school administration and the Board of Education as necessary additions to the school building, these plans are a good secondary school plan. The additions requested will be flexible and adaptable for many uses, including use for study and instruction, thus releasing existing classrooms for necessary courses programs.

I urge all parents who are concerned with the present limitations on curriculum at the Junior-Senior High to exercise their vote on Wednesday, Feb. 1. Vote for the necessary funds to build this addition to the school. The General Statutes of Connecticut set down guidelines for local borrowing, with a town's current deficit status. If Bolton would exceed its borrowing capacity by building this addition, neither the state nor the bond officials would approve it. This is not and has not been the case in Bolton. Bolton has a good credit rating and is financially capable, according to state and bonding officials' standards to carry the payments that would be necessary to finance the addition.

Rockville Hospital Acquires Portable Heart Pacemaker

A compact, portable, transistorized electronic heart pacemaker which can be used to maintain the heartbeat of a patient who has suffered a heart attack has been added to the equipment of Rockville General Hospital, according to administrator John Mirabito.

The machine was purchased with the aid of a $400 grant from the Hartford Area Heart Association.

It can be used to stimulate a slow, ineffective heartbeat during the critical hours after an acute heart attack, Mirabito explained. It also can be utilized to maintain the heartbeat while the patient is being transferred to a large medical center for installation of a permanent, electronic pacemaker.

Thunder Detours Pilots In Flight to West Coast

Two Manchester pilots, flying to California from Brainard Field in their single-engine plane, got detoured last night from their planned flight route when they had to double back to Columbia, S.C. They had come to within 20 miles of their Atlanta, Ga. stop but could not land because of thunder and lightning at Atlanta, one of the pilots said.

Carl McAllister Jr. of 143 Campbell Rd. and Richard Leadbeater of 30 Hackmatack St. finally downed their Cessna 170B in Columbia about 11 p.m. last night and spent the night there. McAllister said they will resume their flight early this afternoon, with a try at the Atlanta airfield again.

McAllister and Leadbeater are making a flight in the four-passenger plane to Los Angeles, Calif., with an eye to obtaining commercial pilot's licenses.

The flight to California was to take about 25 hours. Typically, both the time scheduled and route have now been disrupted by the weather.

McAllister said the South Carolina stop has put them "off the beaten track." After Atlanta the plane will swing west and McAllister said the weather is clear from Georgia to Texas.

The two young pilots were delayed several times in their departure. They were to leave Monday early in the morning hours, but did not because the plane wasn't ready. They finally took to the air yesterday noon, after waiting some time for a fog to clear at Brainard Field.

Their first stop after Hartford was to Philadelphia, Pa., then Atlanta. McAllister said they went off the route yesterday and made their first stop in Wilmington, Del., and another landing at Raleigh-Durham, N.C. It was after the North Carolina stop that they were turned back after running into the squall line of turbulent weather.

McAllister said several other persons had asked if they could also go along on the flight from Hartford since the plane could carry two more passengers. But they turned down the requests because McAllister said they were not qualified to fly.

12th Circuit Court Cases

The attorney representing Robert Oliver, 45, of Vernon, presented a demurrer to Judge John Daly in court yesterday. His client is charged with unlawful concealment or disposal of mortgaged property.

A demurrer is similar to a motion to quash. It contends that even if the facts charged in an indictment are true, they do not constitute a crime. The defendant does not admit or deny the charges.

The mortgaged property in question is motor vehicles. According to Oliver's counsel, Oliver was charged with the crime of violation when he did not follow specifications spelled out in a trust certificate. He said that Oliver had a right to sell the automobiles.

Judge Daly indicated several times that he was not familiar with the case, and that the numerous papers given him for study of the case would have to be read carefully.

The case was continued to Feb. 2, and Judge Daly said he would study papers submitted and enter a judgment before that date.

A charge of breach of peace against John R. Delano, 25, of 801 Main St. was nolle prosequi. Delano was not present in court.

Gerald R. Freeman, 21, of 71 S. Main St. changed a previously entered innocent plea to one of guilty and was fined $5 for intoxication.

He was arrested on Jan. 1 after he attempted to call Gov. John Dempsey to lodge a complaint about the light fine of $5 saying Freeman had cooperated by changing his plea from innocent to guilty, thus saving the state the cost of a trial. Judge Daly concurred.

A charge of failure to carry a license and misuse of registration plates against Richard Michaels, 37, of 1000 Main St. was nolle prosequi.

Unemployment compensation claims filed in Manchester and in the state dropped 10 per cent, according to a report issued by the State Labor Department.

The statewide drop was 10.7 per cent, with all but four of the state's 20 offices reporting decreases. The four were Hartford, 2.7 per cent; New London, up 14.6 per cent; Thompsonville, up 4.6 per cent; and Willimantic, up 3.3 per cent.

Claims filed throughout the state dropped by 2.8 to a 21-gregational Church. Den chief 606 total. During the correction were presented to Randy ponding period last year the total was 24,704.

Inside Report

Rowland Evans Jr. and Robert D. Novak

WASHINGTON — Grumbling about the hard foreign policy line of Sen. Everett M. Dirksen of Illinois, the Republican leader in the Senate, has broken out with surprising if suppressed vehemence among moderate Republicans both in and out of Congress.

What concerns these critics, including many new Republicans elected last November, is not Dirksen's views of Vietnam but his frosty line on East-West trade and the consular treaty with the Soviet Union, and his harshness toward U.S. allies in Western Europe.

On all these matters—right-to-work, the filibuster, the consular treaty, reciprocal trade and, at least some degree, East-West trade—the moderate Republicans oppose Dirksen.

In addition to such old-timers as Kentucky's John Cooper and Thurston Morton, California's Thomas Kuchel, Pennsylvania's Hugh Scott and others, the moderates gained important allies in the new crop of Republican senators. Dirksen's colleague, Charles Percy of Illinois, Republican Ed Brooke and Oregon's Mark Hatfield are all said by intimates to be unhappy at the Dirksen foreign policy line.

But they are not likely to say so publicly. They realize that Dirksen is the most powerful Republican in the country. More to the point, they know that their own rise through the cutthroat of Senate power depends very largely on his good will.

Furthermore, Dirksen is one of the most popular politicians in the Senate.

But this won't stand in the way of the critics. Knowing full well that putting the wraps on Dirksen would be as easy as tying up an octopus, their objection is more limited: A demand to be let in on the advance planning of party statements such as the "State of the Union," and a plan to stand up and fight for their interests in the closed-door policy committee meetings.

A Thought for Today

Before the Peace Palace at The Hague stands a large statue of Christ. If you should ask why the statue is outside instead of inside, you will be told it was because the entrance was too small to admit it.

Many doorways into the heart are like the entrance to the Peace Palace, too small to admit the passage of Christ. Peace in Christ can never be found with Him standing on the outside, but only as we permit Him entrance to grant His peace within.

Mongolians, Tibet Resist Mao Purge

Political and peasant support for the Maoist purge in Mongolia and Tibet is growing. The official New China News Agency admitted that opposition had cropped up in Manchuria and around Shanghai, both areas where Mao's group had claimed victories.

The agency said the pro-Mao Peking People's Daily in various issues prominently featured an urgent appeal by four revolutionary rebel—pro-Mao—organizations in Huhhotting, a Manchurian province.

It is addressed to all revolutionary peasants and calls on them to unite and "rush counter-revolutionary economic" political use of high wages and other economic incentives.

A People's Daily editor's note said the appeal was a "very important document applicable to all other parts of China."

Only a few hours earlier the agency had liberated the role of the people's liberation army in the Maoist purge in Manchuria, the capital of Heilungkiang.

Japanese reports from the mainland told of wall posters in Peking reporting that Premier Zhou Enlai had informed Mao "the recovered Manchuria is not the Maoist's territory."

Other wall posters said that Mao's chief purge administrator, Chen Poia, had complained that Red Guards in the capital were "falling behind the rest of the country."

Mao's own propaganda outlets indicated the stage the Maoist was taking. There was growing emphasis on the military, and the New Agency reported over thousands of workers claiming that army support at the Maoist purge in Shanxi Province and the Manchurian province of Peking (Harbin).

But in reporting pledges of support from pro-Mao forces in other parts of the country, NCA appeared to be indirectly attacking the Maoist purge. It said President Liu Shao-chi, who was entrusted almost everywhere.

LaBonne Leads Race For Top GOP Post

LaBonne said, "Frankly, at this point, I don't know what the screening committee will do tonight. I can only hope that the premature story which apparently came from a committee meeting yesterday, will not effect the actions and decisions of the committee."

"Naturally, I'm flattered that I am being considered for the post," he said, "but we must all keep in mind the fact that the decision of the screening committee is not final. It will most be approved by the State Central Committee."

His name was first mentioned publicly Dec. 1 by Robert Goodrich of Gloucester, who had been LaBonne's campaign manager in the state's Fourth Senatorial District race at Northampton.

LaBonne, head of G. T. LaBonne Associates, a Manchester insurance agency, resides at 84 Minnehaha Dr., Gloucester.

He served nine years as an elected official in Gloucester—two as president and chairman of the Plan and Zoning Commission, and five as a councilman, including five years as majority leader.

LaBonne is a past president of the Gloucester Kiwanis and the Gloucester Jaycees, the Ellington Ridge Country Club, and of the St. Paul's Men's Club. On Jan. 10 of last year, he was named "Man of the Year" by the Gloucester Jaycees Distinguished Service Award.

Last week, LaBonne received the "Boss of the Year" award from the Gloucester Jaycees at its Distinguished Service Award banquet. The award is given in recognition of outstanding leadership in community and business affairs, and the extent to which the recipient has offered the community leadership and Jaycees activities.

LaBonne is a member of Campbell Council K of C, the Hartford Club and the American, Connecticut, Hartford County and Manchester Bar Associations. He received a law degree in 1955 from the UConn School of Law.

A Waterbury native, he served with the 78th Infantry Division in World War II and with the 48th Division in the Korean War. He is listed in "Who's Who in the East" and "Who's Who in Commerce and Industry."

He is an incorporator of Manchester Memorial Hospital and was the area chairman in the fund-raising drive for East Catholic High School.

He is married to the former Nancy K. Murray of Waterbury. The couple has two daughters, Lynne and Leigh and a son, Gregory.

Hebron $813,000 for Gay City Park Sought in O'Neil Measure

William O'Neill, state representative from the 52nd district, has proposed a bill on the improvement and development of Gay City State Park. The project, as stipulated in the bill, would be a three-phase development.

The first phase would include construction of park headquarters, ranger quarters and a swimming complex; installation of a visitor service center and beach area; a water storage area to provide additional water during dry periods; a parking area and extension of sewer lines for approximately one-quarter of a mile.

Anticipated cost of this phase would be $227,000. Work would be scheduled over a two-year period beginning this year.

The second phase would be another two-year project beginning in 1969 to develop a camping area in the park. This would include sites for mobile camper units with electricity, water supplies and sanitary facilities. Sites for ten camping units would be developed, including extended roads built in the area. The cost is estimated at $183,000.

The third phase, from 1971 to 1973, would see the development of additional facilities, including a swimming pool, a tennis court, a paved parking area, construction of an access road of about one mile and a one-mile power extension. The cost of this phase is estimated at $388,000.

Gay City State Park is on Rt. 85 in the Glead section of Hebron. All that remains today of the original village is a graveyard, Gay City, and 12 or 15 houses and the village of Gay City. The cost of the first phase, from 1971 to 1973, would see the development of additional facilities, including a swimming pool, a tennis court, a paved parking area, construction of an access road of about one mile and a one-mile power extension. The cost of this phase is estimated at $388,000.

Assembling the News

By SOL R. COHEN

Robert Stavitsky of Manchester's 19th Assembly District has filed a bill which if adopted, could save the state approximately $4,000 a year in welfare payments. That is the amount paid by the Town Welfare Department, hospital and medical costs for welfare clients in the 1965-66 fiscal year. Stavitsky's bill, sponsored by the Connecticut Conference of Mayors, calls for a $2 million initial state appropriation to pay the full cost of such expenses. At present, the state and towns share the costs on a 50-50 basis.

Mayor Nathan Agostinelli, a member of the Connecticut Conference of Mayors, is backing the bill.

The House and Senate held technical sessions at 4 p.m. today to accept bills before the 5 p.m. deadline hour. Both will meet again for technical sessions at 4 p.m. Monday and then will adjourn to Feb. 7 at 1 p.m.

Last minute bill filings are expected to bring the total to over 6,000. Many are duplications and will be combined into one bill—many will die in committee—many will require only cursory discussion and hearings—and many will attract lengthy public hearings and floor arguments.

Walker C. Lawrence of 28 Edin Rd. has received a Democratic appointment. He will serve as a messenger in the State Senate.

Paquale A. Barotto, of Hamden, Democratic state senator from the 24th Senatorial District, is the brother of Charles Barotto, Manchester pharmacist.

Manchester State Sen. David Barry and West Hartford State Sen. Jay Jackson, both Democrats, did not meet each other in the Senate chamber. They sat next to each other in the Kingswood School, West Hartford.

Barry was chosen by the administration to file a Vietnam issue bill, to submit a pledge contained in the Democratic State Platform. The bill would provide bonuses for veterans of the cold war, including the Vietnam conflict.

The Barry bill, any Connecticut veteran, who resided in the state when he went into service, and who had at least 90 days active service after Oct. 28, 1965, would receive bonus benefits similar to those paid to veterans up to and including the Korean War.

He would receive $10 per month for each month of service, up to a maximum of $300. Veterans with less than 90 days of service would receive reduced amounts. The bill would provide bonuses for veterans of the cold war, including the Vietnam conflict.

Cooperative Association, with 450 members, and the Rhode Island and the Modern Milk Marketing Association, with 250 members, met in Providence to discuss the formation of a new organization.

The three plan to form a new organization to represent dairy farmers in the state. The action will affect 90 per cent of Connecticut's dairy farmers.

The appeals indicated that something was wrong despite the fact that the state had a surplus of milk.

Japanese reports from the mainland told of wall posters in Peking reporting that Premier Zhou Enlai had informed Mao "the recovered Manchuria is not the Maoist's territory."

Other wall posters said that Mao's chief purge administrator, Chen Poia, had complained that Red Guards in the capital were "falling behind the rest of the country."

Mao's own propaganda outlets indicated the stage the Maoist was taking. There was growing emphasis on the military, and the New Agency reported over thousands of workers claiming that army support at the Maoist purge in Shanxi Province and the Manchurian province of Peking (Harbin).

But in reporting pledges of support from pro-Mao forces in other parts of the country, NCA appeared to be indirectly attacking the Maoist purge. It said President Liu Shao-chi, who was entrusted almost everywhere.

CAPITAL WAS MEXICAN
MONTREY, Calif.—The first capital of California under Mexican rule was Monterey, from 1776 on. It remained California's most important city until the Gold Rush of 1849.

Waddell will answer the "why?"
Why does the board of education say it needs this addition?
Cheney will answer the "what?"—What does the addition consist of and how much will it cost?
Conant will answer the "how?"—How will the new facility fit in with the curriculum and scheduling of the school as a whole?
The three men will answer questions. They promise that they are not going to lecture. A questionaire is expected to be returned to the board on Tuesday, and a meeting to see what's puzzling someone else.

The preliminary plans will be available for perusal.
The town is being asked to accept or reject these plans and to authorize a $350,000 bond issue or $20,000 for final plans and bids, if it approves the preliminary plans.

Brush Fire
The fire department was called out yesterday afternoon to a small brush fire in front of Munson's Candy Kitchen on Rt. 6. The fire was caused by a wire's breaking off from high tension lines, according to Chief Paul Manegga. Power was off about two-and-a-half hours while the wire was being repaired, he said.

Camp Fund Drive
During the next few weeks Girl Scout families in town will be solicited for a camp fund drive, which is being held in all 13 towns in the Connecticut Valley Girl Scout Council.

The special drive is seeking funds for development of Camp Tolland in Massachusetts.

Eventually, both overnight camps in East Hartford will be used for other purposes, and Tolland will have facilities for all ages and all types of camping.

The Manchester-Bolton Scout family drive is headed by Mrs. Anthony Gryk of Manchester. The goal is $12,000 for this area.

Captains in Bolton are Mrs. Alden Chick for Troop 668; Mrs. Russell Mooman, Troop 659; Mrs. Harold Webb, Troop 659; Mrs. Don Carpenter, Troop 635; Mrs. Stanley Bates, Troop 680; Mrs. John Simon, Troop 620, and Mrs. Fred Barcomb, Troop 616.

The captains will be aided in their calling by other mothers.

Only families with girls in Scouting will be solicited in the town has done and is doing its part for camp development by buying Girl Scout cookies. Of the cost of each box of cookies, 22 cents goes toward camp development and camp scholarships, and eight cents is returned to the troop.

Mrs. Don Carpenter, Bolton troop organizer, notes that the or any other religious denomination for Camp Tolland was purchased entirely from proceeds of cookie sales. She points out that the need for growth in camp facilities can be seen in Bolton figures alone. In 1965, six girls attended some type of Girl Scout camp from Bolton. In 1966-67, 47 girls attend-

The Why and What and How Of School Wing Available

If there are still bewildered voters in town wondering what the high school cafeteria addition is all about, here are the facts about it. There is still time to find out before the referendum Wednesday.

Walter Waddell, chairman of the school board; Douglas Cheney, chairman of the public building commission and Ralph Conlan, high school principal, are making themselves available for questioning Monday night at 8 at the high school.

Waddell will answer the "why?"—Why does the board of education say it needs this addition?
Cheney will answer the "what?"—What does the addition consist of and how much will it cost?
Conant will answer the "how?"—How will the new facility fit in with the curriculum and scheduling of the school as a whole?
