It never really surrendered its power to challenge the human corpuscles, and, for that matter, all other systems for maintaining that energy and heat by which civilization propels itself through one task and one day to another.

Whenever winter chooses to return to its own scene and reassert its old masteries, it seems to take special pleasure in striking at man through the one thing modern man treasures and values most-his automobile.

If it can prove that there are, after all, hills no amount of horsepower can climb, or mornings no battery can turn, it knows it has upset human beings in the most upsettable part of their assumptions about life. When one's car is gone, what is left? Nothing, obviously, except patience, and philosophy, and the courtesy of strangers and the help of tends, and chance rediscovery of other things which used to be part of life before the automobile became king.

Yesterday, for a few violent hours, winter was king. Today winter still asserts a certain splendid majesty over the landscape. It seems likely to be sitting supreme on its great white throne through the night that is to come. We all have to admire it, even while we set all our devices and energies to work at the task of melting down its sceptre.

Electing A Somoza

There was, of course, a little campaign unpleasantness, involving the arrest of agitators, the muzzling of the free press, the shooting down of a few street rioters, all rather efficiently done and supervised carefully enough to see that nothing happened to the opposition candidate in person.

After such a prelude, and with the opposition candidate carefully kept alive and carefully kept outside jail so he could make his simulation of a run for office, the presidential election in Nicaragua could, and did, proceed to its In the counting, the liberal challenger is being given approximately half the votes. That makes it look as if he really did run. But whether the margin was to be two to one, or greater or lesser, there was never any doubt that the result was to be one more victory for the family which has ruled this "Good Neighbor Republic" for the past General Anastasio Somoza Debayle was a Somoza, and that was enough. In contrast to some of the earlier members of the dynasty, this Somoza is a relatively polished fellow. He went to military school on Long Island, and then to West Point. He is intelligent, genial, witty, and yet still retains enough iron and toughness in his makeup to enable him to rule in the only style to which his country has ever been accustomed. Who knows? He may even, after the Somoza interests have been taken care of as usual, improve the living for ordinary Nicaramans, too. And who, for that matter, can say that the people are any worse under this dictatorship than they would be if they had to go through the throes of some successful revoluion against the Somozas?

Perhaps the sharpest question is: does the length and severity of such a dicatorship have an almost automatic influence on the savagery and brutality and desperation of the revolutionary ause which dictatorship always gengrates sooner or later? Will the whole country pay, later, for the relative

Again, That Good Ribicoff Bill

Senator Ribicoff has with him 46 other members of the Senate at Washington as co-sponsors, this year, of his bill to provide some income tax credit for parents who are financing the higher education of their children. The 1967 version of the Ribicoff pro-

$1,500 or over for the higher education of a son or daughter. The arguments for the bill are many. It honors a principle dear to the American tradition. And it helps parents pay for education at a time when education posal offers a special income tax credit of up to $325 for any expenditure of is becoming increasingly expensive. It offers its help, democratically, to everybody. But it should be no argument against the bill's soundness to note that its benefits will be most welcome in those income groups which stand in between the high income groups which can afford college expenses anyway, and those lower income groups whose income is so low they do nots pay enough income tax to be able to use the proposed educational deduc-

> There is, as a great group of American parents who occupy it can attest, a great middle zone which needs particular help when it comes to the expenses of higher education. College has grown to be something more expensive than they can afford out of their incomes. But their incomes are still respectable enough to close the door to scholarship aid based on need.

As Senator Ribicoff said in introducing his bill this time, the measure is even more timely than before, because the federal government has now greatly expanded its aid to higher education through scholarships and loans. The income tax credit proposal would help families which need help but can't get it under the scholarship and loan pro-> time, begins its life with 47 votes already assured is an augury of good fortune for it. And we hope that, this time, the argument will not be raised against it that, because it may be of special and crucial benefit to the one income group which otherwise gets no help in its educational expenses, it should be considered class legislation. Not to pass such a bill is, in view of everything else government does for everybody else, the real class discrimination. It is time Senator Ribicoff's special crusade was yielded its victory, which would be a victory not only for the American belief in education, but also a victory for fairness in government's help to its citizens.

LOS ANGELES - After watching "From Here to Eternity" on the late show with his son last June 12, Chester get a breath of air, even though it was 2:30 a.m. During this commonplace occurrence, Mr. Weger unintentionally set in motion a chain of circumstances that may lead to the abolition of California's antiloitering law.

The law was declared unconstitutional this month by a lower court. An appeal is under way and is expected to go to the California Supreme Court, but Los Angeles lawyers generally concede that the basis for upholding the present law is fragile. On his walk, Mr. Weger, a 46-year-old aeronautical engineer, was stopped by two Pasadena policemen who wanted to know what he was up to. Mr. Weger gave them his name and told them he ived nearby, but refused on principle to accede to the officers' request that produce some form of identification The officers arrested Mr. Weger and booked him under the antiloitering law. which states that a person is guilty of a misdemeanor "who loiters or wanders upon the streets . . . without apparent reason and who refuses to identify himself and to account for his presence when requested by any peace officer to do so, if the surrounding circumstances are such as to indicate to a reasonable man that the public safety demands

Judge Louis T. Fletcher of the Pasadena Municipal Court dismissed the charge when Mr. Weger appeared before him, but the city appealed. Judge Fletcher has since explained that "one otherwise innocent of a public offense cannot be charged as a criminal simply because he refused to identify himself to the satisfaction of a police officer."

This month Judge Shirley M. Hufstedler of the appellate department of the Superior Court, which handles appeals from municipal courts, found that the law violates the Fifth Amendment. A rson has the right to remain silent in circumstances, but the law makes silence or refusal to answer uestions an element of the crime. idge Hufstedler commented. If the person answered, he might incriminate imself, she added.

The issue is not settled, for the City Pasadena has appealed Judge Hufstedler's decision to the Appellate Court California, the intervening jurisdicbetween the Superior (lower) Court and the Supreme Court. As an indication of the legal thinking on antiloitering laws, however, Los Angeles County has decided not to appeal another decision a few weeks ago in which a county ordinance forbidding loitering, similar to the state law, was also held unconstitutional. Both city and county law-enforcement officials, however, have criticized the invalidation of the state loitering law as placing another stumbling block in the way of the police. Says Sheriff Peter Pitchess of Los Angeles County: "I can't help but feel society has lost nother battle in the war against crime. This appears to me to be an exaggeraion of the so-called rights of the individual at the expense of the rights of society. - ROY COPPERUD IN THE power of the Klan made no difference in the election. Yet, the mere belief by the Klansmen that they did in fact have a preelection "deal" with Eastland, or agents of Eastland, casts a foreboding shadow over law enforcement in Mississippi.

In secret Klan gatherings across the state, it was reported that Eastland now would properial Wizard Bowers himselfcharged in two murder cases with the violation of Civil Rights dictments in the 1964 murder of three Civil Rights workers at killing of Negro leader Vernon

It should be stressed there is no evidence whatsoever to go with the Klan claims that Eastland or his agents made any promises. Mississippians who know Eastland best are quite confident that, whatever he might have told the Klan, the shrewd and cautious senator would not interfere with the processes of justice.

But Klansmen live in a surrealist world all their own. For instance, the Mississippi Klan is absolutely convinced that a Communist invasion of this state's gulf coast by Fidel Castro is imminent and that Civil Rights workers are his advance Believing what they want to believe, they now are certain Eastland is applying pressure in Washington to free he accused killers.

Thus, the results would be particularly tragic if Kansmen charged in the murder cases escape punishment in the old unhappy pattern of the South. Claiming this as the first fruit of their alleged influence in Washington, the Klan would be reinvigorated in a protected status, it would transate that status into a license to kill in Mississippi.

This would end what has been time of trouble for the Klan in Mississippi. The FBI, in cooperation with the Mississippl Highway Patrol and a surpris-ing number of county sheriffs,

VALENTINE DAYS May brightest gems adorn thy Thus falls my wish for thee;

May love, the purest that can Be now received from me. This romantic style, characteristic of the valentines in the early 1900's, adorns a beflowered card in the collection of valentines owned by Mrs. Richard Olmsted, 33 Comstock Rd. They were received by members of her family over many years. Many of the valentines stand up, supported by several layers of cardboard lace, ornamented with delicate flowers and pictures of Cupids, lovely young ladies or outdoor scenes. Som are humorous, such as a Dutch boy holding bright tulips, with message punning on "two lips," or a lady wearing a veil hold down a wide "picture at" so that she can pursue her oved one in an open "auto." A few more movable parts, like a man with a Punch and Judy

HOW THIN

That depends upon the variety. But the thinness of any given variety must be consistent.

Otherwise it won't cook evenly.

Would it bother you if your spaghetti varied more than six one-thousandths of an inch in thickness?

Probably not.

But it would upset the folks who make our Ann Page Spaghetti. They're such perfectionists. They keep a micrometer eye on the 32 varieties of pasta products we make.

Perfection and care like this go into the making of all Ann Page Foods.

They're as good if not better than the famous nationally known brands...we guarantee it.

Your Dental Health

This is the third in a series of six articles on dental health published by The Herald, in coeration with the Manchester Dental Society, in observance of National Children's Dental Health Week, Feb. 5-11.

Q. Ever since the low-calorie soft drinks came out on the market, I have been drinking them and so has the rest of my type of drink is harmful to my children's teeth?

A. Because the low-calorie soft drinks have an artificial sweetener in them, they are not particularly harmful to the teeth. We know that sugar is one of the main causes of decay. Because sugar is eliminated in these drinks, the main reason for decay is also eliminated.

Additionally, the low-calorie cola type of drink contains phosphoric acid. It has been found that this type of acid increases the amount of saliva in the mouth, which, in turn, tends to protect the teeth from acid attacks by bacteria. In fact, from a dental point of view, we would recommend ow-calorie rather than the regular type of soft drinks. Q. Is there any cure for tooth decay? What causes teeth to decay? A. As mentioned in the preeding knawer, sugar, or carbohydrates, are the chief factors in the development of car-ies (decay). We know that the carbohydrates are converted into acids by bacteria which are normally present in the month. These acids will attack the teeth, eventually making them decay. While there is no known cure for decay, there are several preventatives. The drinking of fluoridated water builds resistance into the teeth, to make them less susceptible to attacks by acids. In cases where children have drunk fluoridated water since birth, the decay rate is reduced by about 60 per cent. In addition, the three basic rules of oral hygiene are excellent preventatives. Rule 1: Brush your teeth after eating, including snacks, Since we know that the bacteria-acid attacks on teeth are most intense within 30 minutes after eating, the best time to brush your teeth is immediately after meals.

Rule 2: Cut down on sweets. Because sugar and other fer-Swordfish Steaks mentable carbohydrates are con-Brazilian Lobster Tails verted to acid by bacteria, it is important to keep sugar con-Crab Legs sumption at the lowest possible Rule 3: Have regular dental checkups. Your dentist can watch for any beginnings of decavities promptly, before they become so deep that the teeth secome painful or even require If you observe these three rules carefully and if you have a flouridated water supply, you and your children can have tenithy teeth that will last a
