Court Backs Auto Search, Drug Conviction Upheld

Justice Hugo L. Black, delivering the 5-4 opinion, said police seized Joe Nathan Cooper's auto because of the crime for which they arrested him It would be unreasonable to hold, Black said, that police find no right to search the vehicle in those circumstances even though they did not have a search warrant.

"We cannot hold unreasonable under the 4th Amendment the examination or search of a car validly held by officers for use as evidence in a forfeiture proceeding," Black wrote.

Formed less than a year ago, Northeast Utilities is not a new company — but a new affiliation of three long-established cases: The Connecticut Light and Power Company, The Martford Electric Light Company, and Western Massachusetts Electric Company, New, under common control of Northeast Utilities, these three operating companies serve nearly 1,000,000 customers and comprise one of the wenty largest electric and gas systems in the nation. Preparing for the future, we are participating in construction of the "Big 11 Powerloop," which will further strengthen the inter-utility ties of the New England states. This $1.5 billion high-valtage trans-mission system, to be completed in the next seven years, will result in eleven new generating plants — three of them in the Northeast Utilities service area. Northeast Utilities itself is currently constructing a wholly-owned 600,000 kilowatt nuclear fueled plant near New London, Connecticut which is scheduled for completion in 1969. A second major project now being planned cells for the installation of a 1,000,000 kilowatt pumped-storage hydroelectric plant at Northfield Mountain on the Connecticut River by 1971. Weak Conscience In Brutal Times The age of total, ultimate power, as symbolized by man's mastery of atomic energy, has not, alas, produced any race of super men fitted to match the power mankind possesses. To the contrary, our possession o such ultimate power has merely mirrored and magnified the wide diversities of our mortalities. There have, in the age of the bomb, been relatively few human beings who were big enough and noble enough to have even a very strong instinct toward making mankind the master instead of the slaves of the bomb. One of these potentially great ones was the late Secretary of War Henry Stimson who, almost alone in the days of high decision about what should be our first employment of the terrible power that had been born among us, had some genuine instinct toward civilized alternatives. Most of us have, like former President Harry Truman, been moral and intellectual pygmies in the era of the bomb, eager and willing to do what the bomb tells us it can do, not imaginative enough to be concerned with what the bomb may do to those who use it quite aside from what it does to those it is Some have, like Dr. Edward Teller, and Admiral Lewis Strauss, gone clear over to the worship of the power represented by the bomb, and made themselves the high priests for its worship. And some like Dr. J. Robert Oppenfound themselves capable of dealing with the power they had helped create only at the cost of continued self-torture and ethical, moralistic torment. They had the genius to create the power. They had the conscience and the humanity to realize, almost immediately, the monstrous moralistic side of their scientific triumph. But they lacked any real capacity to deal with their own split beings, their own split intellects, their own split souls.

As one of these fissionized human beings Dr. Oppenheimer was the helpless victim of the attack of one who, like Dr. Teller, had been able to make the power of the bomb itself a morality, an ethic, a conscience, Dr. Oppenheimer was cast out of the temple he himself had helped build when he himself suddenly refused to worship there. It was not really an injustice to him, but justice; not really disgrace for him, but compliment to him. His disbarment, so to speak, meant that his nation had decided he was not a fit companion or pilot for the journey it was going to make. He himself did not take his disbarment with such philosophy. He was obviously touched and moved, sentimentally, when, later on, his nation pretended it had changed its mind about its ethic and its direction and decorated him back into the ranks of acceptable scientific society. But his nation, on the record of its actions and policies in the world, has not abandoned that worship of power in which he once refused to join; it still follows the paths and purposes against which he had his touching after-thecreation-of-the-bomb instinct to rebel. He is not likely to have died in any blissful ignorance of the realities of his time. Prometheus, the Titan who gave fire to man, was tortured by the gods for his presumption, but never had to bear the added torture of his own doubts. Dr. Oppenheimer had to bear the accusations not only of such as Dr. Teller, but also those of himself, and has become as symbolic as Prometheus, and suffered for and with all the weak onsciences of the world's most brutal

An Unwanted Advantage? discovery of an obscure law which apparently offers President Johnson an opportunity to force the retirement of one member of the Federal Reserve Board and then, by refusing to reappoint William McChesney Martin as chairman of the Board as his term res next month, capture the Board tgelf for men and policies of his own coming is, in the world of Washing neuver, an exciting discovery. find it rather convenient to have in existence a Board which takes more conservative, sounder economic positions than his own brand of politics now permits him? When he has such a board he has the privilege of attacking it, on one hand, and benefiting from its restraining policies on the other. What really happened between the President and Martin, for instance, the time they had a big public disagreement over interest rates? Did the President spank Martin as convincingly in private as the public supposed he did? Or did he give him a wink, and say, to him, in effect, I disapprove heartly of what you are doing against my will and policy but please don't let me be the one to stop you?

Or, to sharpen the question and the retirement of one member and then fire Martin, or will he punish whoever it was who was so untactful as to dis-

The idea that an attack of appendi citis, or a gall bladder attack, might be the most serious peril encountered on a trip to Mars is an idea which hadn't vet occurred to most of us earthlubbers. But now that Dr. Hubertus Strughold brings it up, we see the point, and we promise that, if we are ever about to take off for Mars, we will give serious consideration to having a few is to have a good laugh at ourselves, for ever having been so square as to think that the main peril about going to Mars might be the journey itself.

Vietnam: Signals Not Received thick with doves. But President Ho Chi Minh, possibly, and President Johnson certainly, have quickly shot them down. and the sky over Vietnam is as black as ever. Even if the Hanoi Government was asked for a firm commitmen which it refused to give, the United States Government, by resuming the bombing of North Vietnam, has rejected the best opportunity yet of diverting the course of events in Southeast Asia from continuously intensifying war into nearly two years to be listening for the slightest "signal" from Hanol of its willingness to talk. In the past month these signals have been coming over loud and clear. When Mr. Kosygin was on his way to London, British commen tators, in our insular way, seemed to think that the importance of the visit would lie in what Mr. Wilson could permade Mr. Kosygin to do -- recall the Geneva conference, perhaps or in some other way force the North Vietnamese Government into negotiations. This was nrealistic; it was the wrong direction What really mattered was how far Mr Kosygin (who understands the Vietnam war better) could educate Mr. Wilson, He seems to have succeeded quite well. At any rate the Foreign Office is now said to believe that the Hanoi Government really does want talks. For a short and happy time it even began to look as though Mr. Wilson had been able to pass this enlightenment back the new treaty. along the line westward. Unexpectedly, the American air raids on North Vietnam were not resumed after the fourday test truce. The Pope expressed his pleasure. Thant stated his belief that if the raids really had ceased, talks might take place "within a few weeks." And of which, said Hoover, is availwhen Mr. Wilson went to Claridges in able within the current FBI the early hours of Monday morning to see Mr. Kosygin again, we all assumed that he had been making one of his midnight calls to Washington, and were therefore encouraged when he spoke so cheerfully in the Commons, "I believe." he said, "that a solution could now be reached," and went on to mention "the present opportunity." Within an hour or so that opportuniy had passed. The Defense Department n Washington announced that "combat operations against military targets in North Vietnam" had been resumed They had been suspended, it said, only because of Mr. Kosygin's visit to London. It was a chilling sequel to the Pope's thanks, U Thant's hopes, and the work of Mr. Kosygin and Mr. Wilblow might have been expected. Suppose Mr. Wilson really had convinced President Johnson it has long been doubtful whether the President is any longer in a position to call off the war. And the more vigorously President Ho Chi Minh signals, the greater will be the temptation to those who are running it in Washington and Saigon to carry on with more of what, in their view, has caused him to signal. They will assume he is "not waving but drowning." That s one reason why he has been so reuctant to wave hitherto, and why he may even on Monday have refused the ommitment that the U.S. Administra-ion demands. He would think it surrender, and with some reason. Neverheless, it is tragic that he did not give

Be brave if you less and be meek if you win, Be better and nobler than I've ever been. Be honest and noble in all that you do And honor the name I have given to you. We will grow up together, I'll too be a boy And share in your trouble and share in your joy. We'll work out our problems together and then We will lay out our plans when we both will be men. And oh, what a wonderful joy this will be, No pleasure in life could be greater for me."

We hope this verse opens treasured avenues of family thought for you. Incidentally, we don't know who wrote this poem. If you happen to know, will you be kind enough, please to write and let us know?
