In last month's issue of Jazz Magazine, an article on Roberta Peck written by John Hammond says: "Last spring, a tape arrived of Roberta Peck of some tunes she had cut with a combo in New Haven, along with a nice letter saying that Pete Secger had recommended she send it to me. Since I never thought of Pete having particular ears for jazz, I took my time about listening to the tape; but when I heard it I couldn't wait to grasp, the phone and call her in Manchester. For Him, No More Debate As the editorial in this spot yesterday speculated he might be thinking and eeling, so President Johnson revealed himself to be in the impromptu press conference he held vesterday.

His behavior at this press conference as described and interpreted by those attending it, was eager and confident. He himself was buoyant and almost exuberant in manner. He had apparently called the press conference not to disabuse the world of its alarmist impression that he had ordered new escalations in the war in Vietnam, but in order to reassure the world that these new blows being struck should be welcomed because they represented the beginning of the end.

The dominant impression he gave was that of a man and a leader as much at peace with himself as could be humanly and sanely possible in such a spot in such a world. There now seems no doubt whatsoever, on the basis of his recent words, attitudes and performances, that he has settled upon his course of conduct in Vietnam, and intends to see it through to his kind of end, without allowing anybody to swerve him from

And as this page was speculating yesterday would be the case with him, he himself stated his belief that the course involved-to keep up the unrenitting pressure, to keep hitting a little harder in new ways-is actually the road to peace.

Here are the crucial words of the press conference statements yesterday: "I think that each day the big road we follow is a search for peace. Everything we do is in that direction "I believe that what I am doing-the course open to me now-is best calculated to bring that about, I don't mean that I can do that tomorrow. I don't think I can. But I don't see any other alternative. "I think doing nothing would take me much further away from it. Our principal objective there is to provide the maximum deterrent to people who believe aggression pays with a minimum cost to us and to them."

Earlier in his press conference the Presidenut had confessed that the things we have now begun to do in Vietnam-shell North Vietnam from land and sea, mine its rivers-are "over and above" and "more far-reaching" than what has gone before. We are thus, for the first time, beginning to get, from the President at least, a certain harmony between words and action. The President has, of late, or hospitals. talked more and more the way he acts. He is closing some of his personal "credibility gap," by eliminating some of the soft deceptions of the past. He is now hard in word and hard in deed. The President's new sureness and confidence creates a new consistency for him, but still, unfortunately, leaves some of his henchmen out in the old location of Credibility Gap. Even while the President's new orders were on their way to Vietnam, Defense Secretary McNamara was saying that our objective in Southeast Asia today was "very, very limited" and that this meant that "we should take steps to avoid widening the war" which was the "foundation of our bombing policy." And poor United Nations Ambassador Goldberg, over in Japan, and called upon to reassure our friends there, had to resort to language like this: "The ebb and flow of the military situation, I said to the Premier, in no way impair-

Change the meaning of the "word" unconditional back from what it has been supposed to mean with regard to Vietnam to what it did mean in World War II, and perhaps Ambassador Goldberg would be consistent too. One thing seems certain in any case: President Johnson has placed himself beyond the reach of the peacemongers. So far as he is concerned, there is no more

As Europe's Boom Ebbs

During the years of Europe's postwar recovery and expansion, some 5,000,000 workers from Italy, Spain, Portugal, Yugoslavia, Greece and Turkey migrated north to take jobs in France, West Germany, Switzerland, the Netherlands, Sweden, Austria and

com is over, and is either leveling off sion, and the migrant workers are being Since most of them did not bring their families with them, and lived in barrack style near their work, it would seem obvious that they intended sooner or later, to go home again. But now that the time may have come to leave not only their jobs but the prosperity these jobs symbolized for them, they have come to represent, in the aggregate, something of a threat

Their old home countries are not well prepared to give up the income they have been earning abroad but sending home. Their old home countries are not equipped to provide them either with jobs or with welfare. Their old countries are, in fact, still suffering from the condition of unemployment which led to the exodus north in the first The morals and lessons, if any, that can be drawn from this recital of experience are relatively simple. It's pretty much the same world, all the world over, old and new. For all its supposed sophistication.

Western and Northern Europe couldn't deal with its big post-war boom with any more self control than we have been able to handle ours. Instead of playing it to keep a somewhat smaller number of people working to produce a somewhat smaller number of products for what might be potentially a longer number of years, the European boom went all out for all the records it could set, just like all the rest of us younger economies do it every time we get a

It begins to appear, in fact, that the basic problem at the root of our supposedly technical economic problem is the same element which is at the root of all our other problems, like those of race and war. Human nature, it seems, will ruin itself every time. If only, somehow, we could become less human and more sensible!

The Virus Gap

The innocence of the layman is such that most of us have probably not been aware of the fact that medical science now suspects ordinary water supply to be the carrier of some of the viruses which break out in human diseases once they have found their home in our living

We are told this for the first time, most of us, when we read of the development of a new filter substance which may possibly prove an efficient means of removing various viruses from drinking water before it is delivered to solution, we are also told of the problem. It seems that "outbreaks of infectious hepatitis across the world had been traced to drinking water" and that "Conventional means," it develops, can remove or kill bacteria, but does not cope with viruses, which could be getting through with potential gifts of hepatitis, polio, smallpox, yellow fever, typhus, measles mumps and colds, The new resin type material that can be used for a filter has proved successful in trapping polio and tobacco mosaic viruses in rather extensive experiments that have been conducted. The tobacco mosaic virus poses no disease for humans, but apparently makes a good virus for experiments.

Although it may be a long time before the expense of employing such a filter on all public water supply is considered either possible or advisable, there may be rather swift application of the method in instances where the purity of water is of especial importance, as in space vehicles, submarines,

The main result of the new discovery. for most of us, will be that we are now aware for the first time, of the virus danger that can apparently be present in even the best public water supply

Senator Ribicoff's bill to give tax relief to parents and students who pay the costs of a college education ought to be regarded as an investment in the For from educated young men and women today come the solutions to the complex scientific and technical problems which confront the nation-problems of medical research, pollution control, of aerodynamics and atomic energy, among others. And, hopefully, too, will come eventually solutions to the great social problems which are even more pressing - the problems of war and peace, of poverty amidst plenty, of crime, over-population, and of traffic

Problems there are without end, and the best hope of solving them lies in an increasing number of educated, able young men and women. But education is expensive, especially education today. That is where Senator Ribicoff's bill comes in. It would provide an income tax credit of $325 or he first $1,500 of tuition, fees, books, and supplies for whoever pays the expenses of a student at an institution of higher learning.

The chief beneficiaries under the bill would be the average families of America, for it is the young people from these average families who comprise the greatest number of college edudents. These same families are strug gling to buy their homes and meet the other bills at the same time that they are trying to educate their children. In view of the potential usefulness of these educated young people, not only to themselves, but also to the nation and to society as a whole, there is for writing Senator Ribicoff's bill into

If you go by the Joseph Roglis house at 205 School St. and the walks are not shoveled, blame it all on the character here who met Mrs. Roglis in the yard this morning. He didn't offer to help with the musclework, but preferred to be the innocent, pesty bystander. And don't think this is a closeup photo, either. The Herald's chief photographer, Sinch Ofiara, was safely hidden behind the telephoto lens, about seven miles away!
