"The Happiness Of Pursuit" One advance line from "The Americal Way Of Life," the latest book by Dr. Ashley Montagu, anthropologist and social critic, seems to us worth a keeps us going, which, if we had sense enough to keep it always in mind, could rather easily be designated as the one single and common goal of all that is best in any form of life on earth. The dog chasing the rabbit he is never going to catch, the human being reaching for the color he is never quite going to reproduce on canvas, are both enjoying a degree of happiness far beyond the rabbit and the color themselves. Perhaps, in a lifetime, each should somehow manage to make at least one capture, partly as a reward, partly as the final slightly and proof of here the happiness really lies.

Double Standard On Vietnam Human beings, being human, live by delightful set of double standards. Your son, for instance, is a "dumbbell." mine is a "slow learner." Your son is a juvenile delinquent," mine has "emoional problems." So it goes.

When it comes to "your" country and mine" the same double standard applies. We are sure, as Americans, that it is morally right for the United States intervene in South Vietnam to "save it from Communism." But we would of course consider it dastardly if the Russians sent troops to Ghana, when Nkrumah fell, to save that country from a ro-Western regime. We proclaim as eternal principle the Monroe Doctrine which prohibits European (and other) powers from estabishing colonies or military bases in the by China that the United States stop encircling it with bases in Okinawa, Japan, Thailand, Vietnam, the Philippines laiwan, etc., is of course a rue behind which China plans "world conquest." It is only ten years since we were condemning the Russians for doing in lungary, on a smaller scale, what we are now doing in Vietnam. Almost no American then sought to extenuate the Soviet crime. A majority of the American Communist Party itself denounced the attack. Even John Gates, editor of the Daily. Worker, demanded, in terse und unequivocal phrases, that Khrushchev withdraw immediately from Hun-

The Russian premier's plaint that in ervention was undertaken under the erms of the "Warsaw Pact" and at the request of a "friendly government" was lismissed as Bowery-grade moonshine, The argument by some Moscow-apologists that the tanks were needed to reeactionaries like Cardinal Mil szenty, the CIA-and the ancient fascists coming out of the woodwork, was waved aside with scorn.

There was a sliver of truth to Chrushchev's belabored rationale, as there usually is with all complicated social phenomena. Russia did have a pact with Hungary, under which it was acporded the right to station troops there. This legalistic facade was certainly as weighty as the Johnson-Rusk fiction that American troops are in Vietnam under the strictures of the SEATO

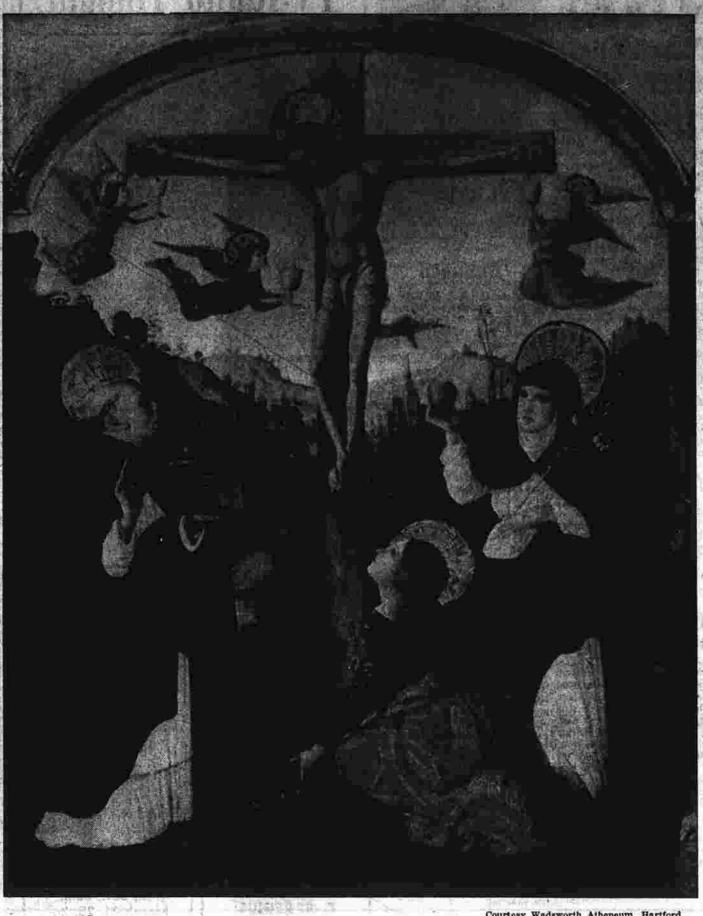

The request for Soviet troops to establish "law and order" in 1956 was made by a duly constituted government no less unrepresentative of the will of he Hungarian people than General Ky unrepresentative of the will of the Vietnamese people. And as for the CIA and the reactionaries, certainly they were fishing in troubled waters, the one difference with present-day Vietnam being that while they were catching few fish the Communist-controlled National liberation Front seems to be doing

The murder of 47,000 Hungarians by he Soviets under Khrushchev was denounced a decade ago as the crime of he century which the world must never forget; while the killing of twice that number or more each year by our own rigades in Vietnam is called in certain iberal quarters a "sad mistake" based on "poor advice" to the President. No one this side of the Atlantic dreamed in 1956 of proposing that Imre Nagy and Pal Maleter negotiate a "compro mise" settlement with Khrushchev tha would allow him to "save face," or that he Soviets retreat to "enclaves" while such a compromise could be pressed by world opinion. Today even the "good

We carried pictures of devastated sec-tions of Budapest in our fiction magasines—such as Time—back in 1956, and our government railled to the cry of the "freedom fighters" to evacuate them from Hungarian soil to the free ands westward. But most of us todayleaving aside the fiction magazinesare so numb under a barrage of misinformation and propaganda that we no longer cry at the leveling of Ben Suc

We kill only because McGeorge Bundy, Walt Rostow, Dean Rusk, Maxwell Taylor, and Robert McNamara gave President Johnson the wrong advice, and there is now no longer an "easy way out" If the world is to remain impressed with our determination to "honor our commitments."
