cars and cargo was pulling through the North End the other day when waiting motorists were thrilled and astounded by the appearance, at the end of the line, of a caboose which had obviously just been freshly painted. This was, for most of the people who saw it, the first improvement they have been able to notice in the condition or preme Court." operation of the New Haven Road since the present bankruptcy trustees took On the same election day, in the city The shocking, exhilarating sight of fresh paint on a New Haven caboose lent additional drama to the passage of the train. One could not fail to notice how efficient an invention a railroad is. It runs on its own tracks, with minimum danger to or interference with the rest of the world's systems of movement. The steel wheel on steel track makes possible an absolute minimum of traction resistance, so that less power can move more tons over a railroad track than in any other form of transportation. This economy is demonstrated by the fact that it takes only one motor to pull a long train of freight cars, each of which, if out on the highways, would require a motor of its own. Prains also have parking facilities of their own. And, for the amount of service they give, they make the minimum contribution to the problem of pollution

The train, then, is a wonderful appabusy inventing them.

When we have them, in such destructive, down-grade operation as the New Haven Railroad has had under its last private managements and now under its bankruptcy trustees, we seem to be determined to prove they can be made not to work.

The day after this fresh-painted caboose passed through Manchester, providing railroad-loving eyes with the first cheerful note in all the long stewardship of the present trustees, these trustees were heading into federal court asking it to guide them on whether they should, in face of prospective delay in the Pennsylvania-New York Central merger, plan on indefinite continued operation of the New Haven or begin to consider the possibility of the line being forced into liquidation. The trustees, in their presentation to the federal court, provided conclusive evidence of increasing financial difficulties for the New Haven.

Since, for these years of bankruptcy, it has only been public subsidy, by the taxpayers of the states involved, which has kept the New Haven running, the only obvious recourse, in case of new and more urgent financial emergency, would seem to be the public purse

If that proves the ultimate goal of the present maneuver, we hope that the managers of the public subsidy process, the governors and legislatures and authorities which represent the public in its relationship to the New Haven, take the opportunity to insist more strenuously than before on a type of management which would at least try to build the railroad up instead of run it down. Would it be too much of a positive play to insist, in return for the next outlay of public millions, that the trustees order the painting of a second caboose?

Wisconsin's Wednesday

We were about to sit right down and write ourselves a ringing editorial about the progress of understanding shown by the voting out in Wisconsin the other day, when we happened to read some of the fine print in the re-

The big story of the Wisconsin election was one of how the voters of that state reversed themselves on the issue of having the state pay for the transporation of private and parochial school Such a constitutional amendment had been defeated, back in 1946, by a vote of 545,000 to 437,000. The vote last Wednesday was 461,-854 in favor and 355,782 against.

The percentage of the yes vote was total population of Wisconsin is approximately 34. Obviously, then, the amendment had the support of many non-Catholics. This was credited, b' ne of the workers for the amendment, to the new "ecumenical" spirit of the times.

There was still fierce and bitter op osition, which carried 22 of the state's 72 counties. But the net result obviously represented a softening of views and feelings among the people of Wisconsin. So far, then, some good, in Wisconsin Wednesday.

Now for the poison. These same Wisconsin voters, last Wednesday, unseated Chief Justice George R. Currie of the State Supreme Court. This vote, too, was decisive, 357,082 for the incumbent Chief Justice, and 444,649 for Milwaukee Circuit Judge Robert W. Hansen.

compulsory retirement age. But another angle concerned a modern civil rights issue. Judge Hansen had previously been a target of civil rights demonstrations in Wisconsin last summer because he has held high national office in a fraternity which keeps its own membership all white. During the campaign, he openly defended his personal right to select his own associates in fraternal life. There was one more angle. Both Chief Justice Currie and Circuit Court Judge Hansen are Protestants. But, during the campaign, a Catholic layman prominent in a Catholic fraternal order sent out letters saying: "As a nember of a great fraternal organization, you will be interested in knowing that one of America's greatest fraternalists is a candidate for our State Su-

So not everything came up smelling of roses, in Wisconsin Wednesday. ____

The Shower

The April shower is not, as Chaucer thought, so much an impulse for humans to be up and moving about, or to plants to start drinking up the moisture which leads to May flowers. The April shower is, if it is not too late for us to try to appreciate its one truly unique attribute, primarily a visual happening. The human being is restless-lazily restless-without any special stimulus from the sweet presence of a soft and

But what the light film of a gently falling rain can do to the landscape, to the tree, to the lawn, to the garden space—that is something added and im-Watch an April shower, closely and quietly and affectionately, and you will see that it is gently washing the browns and tans out of the fields, darkening the garden earth, putting magnifying drops in front of the robin's red, tip-tinting the illacs, and making all the early-budded trees look as if they had just been worked into the landscape by the brush of some French landscape painter. This-the faint liminal advances of the spring pastels-is almost the only movement connected with the April shower. It almost never uses the rough brush of a wind. If you cannot quite catch the movement of the pastels, the next best thing is to watch the shower make its way across a quiet pond. No wind, only the almost invisible drops themselves, stir the surface. The stippling begins again back at the beginning of the pond as soon as it travels to the end, as fast as the eye can fol-

Peace Proposal

Our "national interest" lies in achieving peaceful, cooperative, mutually helpful relations with the peoples of the world. This is our ultimate end. All else is means, to be judged by its effectiveness in promoting our end.

We can in fact "love our enemies" as required by the Sermon on the Mount even while waging a defensive war, provided we likewise wage peace with the same determination and intelligence. Will we be content to put our Christianity in deep freeze while we fight a necessary war? That way lies World War III and disaster. Christian love extends to the men, women and children of North Vietnam,

South Vietnam and the families of the Viet Cong. Let us earnestly seek solutions based on human well-being. Something more than another letter to the President seems to be indicated. In place of that let this congregation bring its view of the seriousness of the situation and the applicability of the law of love to its solution to our whole

I would propose that a conference of the belligerents in the Vietnam war be called to consider the interests of the people of both North and South Vietnam; that an offer be made that war be replaced by massive reconstruction and conomic development in both countries; and that, to further that purpose, our bombing of the North shall cease when its authorized representament is lagging. Desertions tives take their places at the conference table. - EXTRACTS FROM A SERMON PREACHED BY FORMER SEN. RALPH E. FLANDERS AT

True further, the ferocity of the new offenaive is savage testimony to the effectiveness of the pacification work. Quite obviously, the high military command of the guerrilla forces is deeply concerned about progress of pacification. The object of the spoiling action is also clear. It is to propagandize the countryside with all too vivid stories about the oneway ticket into a pacification team, to intimidate members of pacification teams in neighbor
