With No Blank Checks:

Perhaps not so surprisingly after all, he first reaction to the unusual kind f journey President Johnson made to Punta Del Este has been relatively

What was unusual about this journey of the American chief executive was that, after the refusal of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee to write him a blank check to take down to wave at our good neighbors of the hemisphere, he apparently re-cast his whole appearance at the hemisphere conference. He appeared not bearing gifts, but merely declarations of intent to provide future help to those who demonstrated willingness and capacity to help themselves. Those who then needed help the most, he indicated, might get some favored treatment from the United States.

But he made no attempts to write any blank checks of his own at Punta Del Este. The result was that this was the first hemisphere conference of its kind in which the role of the United States was not that of the spectacular rich uncle who, if all his little nephews miled pleasantly, would leave a big general grab bag behind him.

of this was the strident outburst of one or two Latin American diplomats who specialized in comparing what the United States does for its own good neighbors with what it does for some other parts of the world, or even for some of its erstwhile enemies.

But there was a quieter and more unexpected reaction, too. It found some of the Latin American leaders present expressing the opinion that it had been a healthy thing to have the indiscriminate largesse of the rich uncle out of the picture for at least one meeting, and that perhaps the basic challenge of the . new United States position - to help those especially who began helping themselves-would be the foundation for a sounder and more beneficial rela-

At a minimum, the Punta Del Este conference has one advantage which does indeed make it unique among such conferences. It raised no high extravagant and unrealistic hopes to be blasted by subsequent disillusion and letdown. Maybe we should try leaving our instant checkbook home more often.

tionship both ways.

Lock Or Key?

Like we have said, the only sure way to keep war out of space is to keep war out of the conduct of nations.

And, for inferential proof, we take the testimony delivered by our military "in favor" of the proposed treaty on the peaceful uses of space, before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee the other day.

The Joint Chiefs of Staff gave their approval to the treaty, providing they semselves are accorded, by our nationpolicy, increased capabilities in the calm of space so they can keep checking on whether or not the peaceful uses space treaty is being violated.

This is, from one angle, the minimum practical thing the Joint Chiefs of Staff could ask. We wouldn't expect them, would we, to take Russia's treaty word or adequate assurance that Russia en't putting atomic bombs into orbit

But it is, from another equally but erhops more broadly cynical angle, an ning to the possibility that the very that takes the military out into pace will prove to be this treaty labeld a treaty to guarantee that space is rved to peaceful uses.

It will be, if the inferences in the sent position of the Joint Chiefs of aff are carried out into action, the mos of this treaty for the peaceni uses of space which will spur our Defense Department into the develop-ment and orbiting of various semi-milisry forms of spacecraft, for use in owing and inspecting suspicious lites launched by other nations. In words, since what we do other nations are also certain to do, various nations will be establishing sentries and pickets out in space, all to see that everybody else stays peaceful. One surmises that it would be only sensible to have, somewhere in support of the space sentries and pickets, a capacity to defend such sentries and pickets against any surprise enemy effort to wipe them out as prelude to some dastardly military space maneuver. Sooner or later, rebody might even have to occupy the moon just to be sure nobody else was there secretly, or misbehaving in the space zones between moon and

It rather looks as if the negotiation of the treaty for the peaceful uses of space might be just the thing the war bureaus of the various nations need to get themselves their first open license to go into the space field.

The House Gets Powell Back

For its foolishness in ignoring the ecommendation of its own committee and trying to vote Congressman Adam Clayton Powell out of office, the House of Representatives now has him back again, with the fresh credentials of an easy victory in a special election in

The total vote in Harlem was light. With the outcome conceded in advance, there was no great rush to the polls for blind vindication of Powell. But there was no opposition to him, either.

His legal credentials to his seat in the House are again what they were before-in compliance with the visible requirements of the Constitution.

The question will now be whether the House, having squandered its judgment in its previous handling of the Powell matter, will now prove capable of returning to the kind of punishment which its own committee recommended and which it has power to levy. It can reprimand him, deprive him of privilege, fine him, and be acting within its own proper powers. The question is whether, having acted foolishly once, it can now master effective unity for rational action. By acting foolishly, it has cost itself some of the prestige and dignity it intended to take away from Powell. Let the House, this time, seat him, and then discipline him.

The Word For Berliners

The leftist signs greeting our Vice President in Berlin read "Americans Out Of Vietnam." Vice President Humphrey speaking to pledge to defend Berlin. Perhaps it did not occur either to the Berlin leftists or to our Vice President that their sign was not their ultimate in insuit or his pledge the type of reassurance Berlin will treasure most

But, quite naturally and inevitably, the dream of Berliners has to be for the day when the Americans are gone from one half of their city and the Russians from the other, and Berlin can, once again, be Berlin, and the capital of a nation called Germany. This sort of possibility—a natural inevitability for Berliners-never seems to cross the minds of us noble, worldbearing, city-saving, dragon-confronting

But the world does move. Only a few years ago, President John F. Kennedy, standing in Berlin, undoubtedly hit the heart of the city when he cried out with his celebrated "Ich bin ein Berliner." That was, no doubt about it, the classic word for the moment in history. Today, however, there are tides in motion, in Europe, in Germany, in Berlin which no longer guarantee the deep appropriateness of what Vice President lumphrey had to say. The next historic words the Berliners are now going to be waiting for may well be the words which tell them that the United States is, at last, going to give up classifying itself as the defender

The Romney Speech Governor George Romney in his heralded appearance for the 150th anniversary of the Hartford Times, took the safe road on Vietnam. He established a position virtually undistinguishable rom that of President Johnson, said it would be "unthinkable" to withdraw, and in his major partisan thrust, blamed the Democrats for getting us into it

The nub of his speech came when he rejected massive military escalation and said: "I believe that we must use military force as necessary to reduce or cut off the flow of men and supplies from North Vietnam, to knock out enemy main force units, and to provide a military shield for the South. . . . We must give our gallant fighting men our

Thus his speech hove close to the prevailing opinion in the United States, and at the center of Republican opinion. The Michigan governor called for pursuing peace vigorously, and pursuing the war with honor. His Vietnam speech probably will not clinch the Republican nomination for him, but it didn't deal him out of the running either. The White House has expressed pleasure over the Romney statement, and downgraded the governor's critical remarks as "a few partisan morsels" for his "lions." There was no direct comment on Romney's assertion that "Vietnam has given rise to a rupture of trust between governors and governed for which it is difficult to find a paralel in American history." Like every speech on Vietnam Romney will not completely please all, but it won't irritate the majority. In those

Then we combine this temperature data with your known rate of fuel use to determine exactly how much fuel your burner uses each day to keep you as warm as you want to be. No matter what the weather, all you have to do is lean back and relax. You'll never have to rely on your memory or your tank gauge (which may be inaccurate) to tell you when it's time to fill the tank.
