Sanity Could Escalate, Too? Regardless of where and how the blame for the present world turbulence -and particularly the key turbulence in the Near East-may be placed, there is one great non-partisan possibility open in the midst of the turmoil. The process of having some fundamental questions up for settlement could result in a fresh new look which might bring about a real step forward for the world instead of merely some new readjustment of old concepts and old in-

There is a most fascinating possibility, for instance, which comes front and center as the world considers the question of one of the guarantees the nation of Israel deserves, with or without its recent military victories under its belt.

The nation of Israel, and all other nations, deserve to be free to have their shipping pass through the Suez Canal, One way of resolving this issue-and we confess that it seems the most likely to be followed-will be to persuade and compel a defeated Egypt, owner and operator of the Suez Canal, to make solemn promise that this right will be extended to all nations, including Isreel, without question in the future. But another and more imaginative way of resolving this issue - and the way which would lead on to other even more remarkable events and world policies-would be to have the Suez Canal internationalized, and put under the control and operation of the United Nations. Suitable compensation to Egypt for its interest and its territory would naturally be part of the transaction. Should it be agreed that the Suez Canal ought to be internationalized, and nut under the control and operation of the United Nations, as a truly international waterway, then it would be quite logical to do the same thing with the Panama Canal, and, after suitable compensation to the United States for its interest, and to Panama for its interest and its territory, place that too in the status of a truly international water-of the United Nations. Just as the internationalization of the Suez Canal would have the effect of removing it as both cause and object of strife between Egypt and Israel, so the internationalization of the Panama Canal would remove that Canal as a perpetual item of controversy between the United States and Panama.

way, under the control and operation

Now supposing the internationalization of the one great canal leads to the internationalization of the other, and the location of both within the jurisdiction, ownership, control, and operation of the United Nations, what suggests itself next? Merely the very considerable idea that the United Nations collect tolls on these nternational waterways, and use the proceeds to keep the United Nations treasury in shape to finance its necessary operations without ever making special calls on its individual members to contribute toward the cost of projects of which they themselves happen to disapprove. Here, in short, might be one of those think slow. On such a day, we are reminded, whether we like it or not, that the speed with which our earth turns is a constant, determined by some external and unswayable order, not by the nervous haste of our own scurrying for accomplishment, progress, or advantage. Tis is good for the soul, like being in church, and good for the body, like being in a Turkish bath or a sauna, and yet it comes free of tithe or fee, demanding nothing of us except that we surrender ourselves philosophically to the temperatures and humidities involved. Gradually, out of the purging of winter thoughts and winter poisons from our systems, in the wake of the peace of surrender, there arise the first few thought of new goals and values-ice cream soft but cold, picnic style, in the sun; cool water in a cove; tall drinks under tall trees; salads; sudden rain; the night breeze. But even toward such delights, there should be no conscious haste Slow down! Slow down! Slow down for the summer!

Once more last week the arrows on the maps thrust hither and you, the headlines shricked of battles won or about to be won, the pickets and the propaganda advertisements demanding war appeared, and emotions ran riot. It was all very familiar. Familiar almost to the point of being rote. It was the Nineteenth Century all over again in a Russian-Arab power squeeze on Israel; and 1939 all over again in a brutal blitzkrieg, but this time by Israel, not by the Nazis who had unwittingly done so much to create Israel. A sickening week. Once again the stench of cannon, the shrieks of the maimed civilians, the agonies of the committed youths in uniform, almost as innocent and no less vulnerable to hot metal ripping their soft flesh; the blustering generals, the swashbuckling tankriding sergeants, the communiques of officialdom so rich in lies and bragga-

It was a disaster. For the Arabs, for Russia, for Britain and the United States, and for Israel. Perhaps it was not the disaster it could have become, had the Arabs prevailed, or had Russia and the United States not backed off from a possible clash. But it was disaster enough.

Key principles that were the residual experience of World War I and II went down the drain. Item: The ideal that frontiers were not to be changed by force. Item: The word "aggressor" finally became wholly a propaganda shuttlecock. Item: The deliberations of the United Nations became a laughing matter as the delegates busily made their tired national points and the real ness was conducted in private.

For the Arabs, of course, the disa ter is most apparent. Nasser and the collection of comic-opera villains who posed as the Arab leadership led their peoples into a terrible rout. The upheavthat is likely in its wake can hold little cheer for those who would hope the beginnings of social progress in the Arab world would soon flower full. In defeat, madness seemed to seize most of the defeated lands as they cut their ties to Western technology and capital. That was the main realistic hope for such a flowering. Russia suffered serious reverses. For one , its pledges to its Arab friends proved hollow, something that will not quickly be forgotten, either by Arabs or elsewhere. For another, the vast stores of military equipment lavished upon the Arab states were largely destroyedand indeed, seemingly proved wanting in

Fund Dinner

HARTFORD (AP) - Connecticut Republicans made a $40,000 O LOVELY FARMS dent in their $450,000 deficit by attracting over 500 persons to a $100-a-plate dinner Monday

The featured speaker was Congressman George Bush of Texas, son of former Sen. Pres cott Bush of Connecticut. The younger Bush, who is 43, told a press conference that he felt President Johnson's administration has been "prudent" in its response to the Middle East

"I hope it continues to be prudent," he said. "We've got one too many wars now." Bush said he thought the frontrunners for the 1968 GOI Presidential nomination are Gov. George Romney of Michigan and former Vice President Richard M. Nixon. He did not say which he preferred.

> Area Weather WINDSOR LOCKS (AP) -

Skies will be mostly cloudy to day and temperatures will be about 10 or more degrees cooler than yesterday, says the U.S. Weather Bureau. The clouds will break up for a while this afternoon, allowing the strong afternoon sunshine to push temperatures up to about 80 derees. Scattered showers or hundershowers are likely again this afternoon and evening. Showers and thunderstorms led the cool Atlantic air into southern New England Monday evening. Some of the thunderstorms were associated with heavy rain, damaging winds and small hail. The frontal system lies south of Long Island this morning separating very warm, humid air in the southland from cool Atlantic air in New England. Tonight will be cooler
