Nasser Asks Sacrifices in New Budget

Gamal Abdel Nasser's new budget being published today calls, for sacrifices to enable war-crippled Egypt to struggle on against Israel, but Nasser says the door is still open for s political settlement.

In a broadcast speech Sunday night, Nasser said he had "no objection to conferring with the Americans" on restoring peace to the Middle East and had instructed Egypt's United Nations delegation "to meet with the Americans if feasible."

Nasser's speech, his first in six weeks, was considered surprisingly restrained in tone although there were plentiful references to the United States. The Egyptian leader again blamed it for the Israeli victory in the June 5-10 war but revised his charges.

Nasser dropped his claim during the war that U. S. planes attacked the Arabs. Instead, he said President Johnson engaged in deceptive diplomatic maneu attack and this enabled the Is-

Right or wrong, this is reality. Basically, and this is too often disregarded, whatever problems face people in pleasures and wants, are individual problems. The so called underprivileged can never compel; they can only hope the more privileged will help them achieve what they have achieved. The Uncivilized Pursuit

We live in an age of the savage, coldblooded pursuit—sometimes a pursuit of vengeance, sometimes, perhaps, a pursuit of justice, but always, it seems to us, a pursuit which denies the premises civilization more than it affirms

Stalin pursued his enemy, Trotzky, and procured his death while Trotzky was supposedly safe in the asylum country of Mexico. The state of Israel pursued Eichman, captured him in his supposed asylum, transported him into its own jurisdiction and there tried and executed him for his unspeakable crimes. And now President Mobutu of the Congo has apparently pursued Moise Tshombe, caused his kidnaping while in the international air, and had him taken to an Algerian court, which has now ruled that Tshombe must be returned to the Congo, where President Mobutu promises to execute him promptly in accordance with the result of a trial Mobutu conducted after Tshombe had fled the

The prime defenders of Tshombe, in his present situation, are representatives of the right wing fringe of American politics who do not mind what murders Tshombe may have committed or how he has represented hold-over Belgian interests in the Congo and thus obstructed the development of stable Congolese unity, so long as Tshombe seems be an anti-Communist some of the Tshombe's defenders should not alter hat ought to be a civilized aversion to the procedures now in progress. Mobutu, with his mock trial and yet perhaps his sound instinct to bar Tshombe from Congolese politics and plotting, should not be privileged to use lawless means to bring his victim to any gallows in the Congo. If he himself is endeavoring to set a higher standard of future behavior and unity for the Congo, he should not begin by imitating the methods and the ethics of the man he has succeeded.

Everywhere, in newly free Africa as elsewhere in this poor world, the struggle is one for some emergence from the jungle. The success of this struggle, among nations, among factions, among rivals for power, depends not upon the extermination of evil men and evil factions and evil nations by the methods they themselves might employ, but upon the development of leaders and parties and nations who manage to hoist their own behavior to a plane at least slightly higher than that of those who still view human relationships as nothing more than an equation of wolf to wolf.

The Gap We Believe

It is getting so that about the only thing we Americans believe in is the thing called the credibility gap. We tend to believe-we are being taught, all the time-that there is not necessarily any firm connection between what officials tell us and what the facts really

By the cynical kind of reasoning natural to a nation which is learning not to believe anything, it was almost a foregone conclusion that the new week's casualty figures from Vietnam would show our allies, the South Vietnamese, suffering more deaths in battle than our American units. There had begun to be considerable public notice given, in this untry, to the fact that the South Vietnamese seemed to be fighting less and less and dying less and less as Amerians did more and more of the fighting and dying. So when this week's new casualty figures showed 175 American battle deaths but 202 reported dead from South Vietnamese action in the field, such a quick reversal in statistics was no surprise. It was to be expected that the South Vietnamese could at least oblige their allies and proceed to carry bigger share of the war in their sta-

Is there any statistic from Vietnam Americans can implicitly believe? In our cynical opinion, there is only onethe American count of American dead and wounded. That leaves the South Vistnamese report of South Vietnamese dead and wounded, and all reports of Vistoong and North Vietnamese casualties, to be rated always questionable, at best, and perhaps pure fiction some of

Marry The Boss's Secretary President Johnson's dislike of the press is going to be somewhat intensified from now on as a result of a piece of alert reporting on the part of th Wall Street Journal.

Its Washington bureau discoveredtoo late to prevent the deed, but much too soon for the President, one can be lieve—the neat way in which a young man who had the good fortune to marry one of the President's former persona secretaries, and then to become, with his bride, a guest at the Presidential ranch in Texas, had been eased into a $26,000 a year job as a member of the Subversive Activities Control Board Since there are really no known qualifications for membership on the board, the real quarrel with the Presidential appointment of Simon F. McHugh, Jr., a young accountant who had the misfortune to have one or two other ventures go wrong for him, concerns the smooth method by which approval of the appointment was sneaked through the Senate before anybody was given any full notice of it or opportunity to raise questions about it. By the time the Wall Street Journal had tracked the story down, McHugh had already been sworn into his new office.

Why can't the President of the United States have the privilege of finding a high-salaried, do-nothing job for the young husband of one of his favorite former secretaries? Is there anything worse about using the Subversive Activities Control Board for such a friendly personal purpose than there was in using an appointment to the same board to comfort former Connecticut Congressman-at-large Frank Kowalski for his ing to build a truly great society if we ed States Senate? How are we ever gocan't permit our great leader some of the privileges of great position?

The Cult Of The Loser

Occasionally these columns have remarked the strange inversion of values whereby the productive elements in society are increasingly criticized and the nonproductive citizens praised as paragons. From some of the reaction we get you might suppose we were incurable Scrooges adamantly opposed to any attempt at social uplift. That's not the case, as it happens. And part of what we have been trying perhaps ineffectually to say is well put in a speech by President Miller Upton of Wisconsin's Beloit College, quoted in a recent issue of U.S. News & World Re-"I have just about reached the end of my tolerance," the educator observed,

"for the way our society at the present time seems to have sympathetic concern only for the misfit, the pervert, the drug addict, the drifter, the ne'er-dowell, the maladjusted, the chronic crim-Mr. Upton makes clear that he is cer tainly not against trying to help such people; it's only that he thinks the others might be given a little credit once in a while: "Not the wealthy, necessarily; not the ones in authority, necessarily not the gifted, necessarily-just the achiever-regardless of his his opulence, his native endow-

What has brought about this tendency to deride the successful and applaud the Without claiming to know the complete answer, Mr. Upton suggests that many more or less successful people by no means all, of course - have developed guilt feelings, paradoxically even about the fact of having made their way in the world. They get in the habit of berating themselves. He notes, for example, the ridicule showered on the famous (or as it someseems nowadays, infamous) WASP's itself a derogatory label for white, Anglo-Saxon, Protestant suburbanites. The interesting point about the abuse is that much of it comes from the so-called WASPs themselves, and not in the form of healthy self-criticism but as Mobutu will degrade himself, not in a sort of "sick self-immolation." It might be added that there are possibly more concrete causes for what might be termed the cult of the underdog. In particular the nation has been infected for a generation or more with a philosophy of social irresponsibility; acording to this creed, the society, and not the individual, is to blame for any anti-social behavior. It is logical enough n that atmosphere, to go on to view those who do behave irresponsibly as perfectly good citizens, or as even more worthy than the achievers.

In any event, one of the unfortunate hings about the reversal of values is not merely that it is a bit unfair to the people who work hard to try to make a decent life. It is also a disservice to the others, to the very ones that the community wants to help. Every society will contain a minimal number that, often through no fault of their own, are beyond the reach of effective assistance. But many more could be helped, if society went about it in the right way. And that means not just doles but motivation. It is a poor motivation, however, preach social irresponsibility; it is no good for a loser to be told, in effect, that he need make no effort to bette himself. What he needs is the kind of motivation that would make him aspire to the life achieved by the hard-working majority. Were such the attitude, it's a safe bet that far fewer would be on the growing welfare rolls.

Here again Mr. Upton has a useful comment. "It is important to recognize that the quality of any society is directly related to the quality of the individuals who make it up." Obviously i won't improve greatly if many individuals are left under the impression they have rights but no personal and social

EVERY Will Live Much Longer WEDNESDAY New medicines, improved medical knowledge and dedicated research scientists are all united in an increasingly successful effort to add more Right now many people will live longer because they do not wait till they are real sick before consulting a physician. Mothers start as soon as pregnant. Bables are taken regularly for check-ups and wise adults have their bodies examined each year to try to discover and treat any ailment before it can become serious. Vinh Plant Attacked

U.S. Delivers Dual Strike

SAIGON (AP)—American warplanes and bombarding naval vessels delivered a coordinated knockout blow to the big power plant just outside the major North Vietnamese city of Vinh, the U.S. Command said today.

It was the first combined Air-Navy strike at a major North Vietnamese target.

While no major ground battles were reported, there were sharp fights up and down South Vietnam, with 49 Viet Cong killed in one series of running fights in the northernmost 1st Corps area where most recent ground fighting has centered.

The Vinh power plant was attacked Monday. The heavy cruiser St. Paul steamed close Vietnamese target.

years of division between Roman Catholic and Orthodox Within two hours of his arrival, the Pope conferred privately with President Cevdet Sunay and other top officials. Informants said Pope Paul appealed to them to mediate the dispute be-tween Israel and the Arabs. The 69-year-old Pope was the first pontiff in 12 centuries to visit the former citadel of Eastern Christianity. The last was Pope Constantine I in 711. Traveling on a four-engine commercial jetliner, Pope Paul arrived three days after a disastrous earthquake spread wide-spread destruction in Anatolia, southeast of Istanbul, killing at Steast 86 persons. Stepping from his plane, the Pope told the Turkish leaders greeting him: "Arriving in this pountry immediately after a cataciyam that has plunged the
