Death Comes To Kiplinger, Journalist

WASHINGTON (AP) - W. M. Ciplinger, one of Ohio State Uniersity's first journalism gradutes, covered Washington for bout 50 years, striving, he said, be nothing more than a 'damned good reporter.''

In mid-career, he was decribed by The Saturday Evening Post as "the best paid and nost influential reporter in the orld; also the most independ-eart attack, the 76-year-old naive of Bellefontaine, Ohio, left ehind the monthly magazine, changing Times, with a circulaion of more than one million. Kiplinger founded Changing Times in 1947. He began telling news of Washington in a breezy, staccato style in 1923, when he oloneered in the Washington newsletter field. Later he launched other newsletters on taxes, agriculture and news of special interest to Florida and California residents. In recent years the Kiplinger rganization went into book ublishing and Kiplinger himelf wrote five books. Kiplinger gradually turned over the business to his son, Austin H. Alas, The Spirit Of Glassboro

The "Spirit of Glassboro" was nothing President Johnson nor Premier Kosygin, nor the two of them together, brought to a particular New Jersey community. And anything that ever inferred that the "spirit of Glassboro" had much to do with what these two leaders brought to their meeting with one another, or decided at their meeting, or discovered about each other and their positions at their meeting, has been false to the true history of the moment. What made history that weekend in Glassboro was the way ordinary good people of Glassboro reacted to the visiation, and to the prospect that it might conceivably do some little smidgeon of good in the world.

That-the sudden discovery that ordinary people in an ordinary American town didn't hate anybody, not even the Russian-and that, furthermore, they were willing and eager to exalt the world's need and desire for peace above all questions of face and prestige and power politics advantage-was the real spirit of Glassboro."

This flowered in spontaneous, impromptu fashion among the people of his New Jersey community, and there wasn't time, owing to the surprise nature of the meeting itself, for hate groups to send their organizers and propagandists to the scene.

And this was the one thing about the Glassboro conference which must have been truly educational to the two leaders involved-educational for the Russian who probably half expected to be goed, and probably even more educational for the American, who sometimes seems to like to pretend that he has a fiercely yapping American public at his tougher with the bad guys of the world. So much for the Glassboro weekend.

Now we come to the comedown. The experience of the weekend was intoxicating for the good people of Glassboro itself that they began to nurse the hope that their own reaction and behavior had possibly pointed the way toward making something good and fine and decent happen in the world. So the next thing they knew, they were sending a delegation of their own good people over to Russia, to meet some of the good people of Russia, and see if the 'spirit of Glassboro' couldn't be rekindled and spread around there. And such was the impetus of the original "spirit of Glassboro" that the delegation was off and winging its way to Russia in no time at all.

And now, in Russia, the "spirit o Glassboro" began, for the first time, to discover what all of us may hate to call the reality. They could have discovered it as quickly by trying to take their naive, shining hopes of peace to Washington. What they found in Russia was that their counterparts in Russia had not even heard of the "spirit of Glassboro," for the simple reason that Russian high government policy had never chosen to make much, publicity-wise, of the fact that the Russian premier had journeyed even half way toward Washington to meet the President. And they found that the same Premier Kosygin who had so obviously been touched by the welcome and cordiality and simple good wishes of the people of Glassboro had recovered from such incidental sentimentality, and retired back into the routines of his town of Glassboro. We salute the good people of Glassboro, for being what they were, so instinctively and naturally, on that weeknd in June. They restored a little faith n human nature, and their behavior must have had some effect in many places, just by suggesting the kind of world it might be if people in positions of power and responsibility could be anded some magic wand which would enable them to do what the best part of human nature would have them do. There is, obviously, some part of the 'spirit of Glassboro," some part of that good part of the human nature, in all of as everywhere. But its wistful instinct to have good and do good will have to earn how to develop muscle, and the high, hard, and suicidal realism of those who hold actual power will have to be softened before this poor world of ours can drift once more, as it occasionally loes drift, away from its own worst and most senseless potentialities. $221,000 "paid out . . . for political pur-

These New England Tropics
It is difficult, particularly after years of drought, to find basic quarrel with the fact that life in New England has suddenly become like life in the tropics with rain every day.

We accept the situation. We could, however, wish for certain stabilizations and refinements. It would be a great convenience if it could arrange to rain at a regular hour, so that human beings could have a rational chance of adjusting their own routines to the daily shower. If it should prove possible to arrange some kind of schedule, we see no reason why the time set aside for the daily downpour shouldn't be a particular time most convenient for everybody. We have in mind 11 a.m., an hour before noon as a time which might provide least interference and disruption for the normal lives of people, or, on weekends, 11

There is no real, compelling reason why the rain should have to time itself for that period of the day when people are free to mow their lawns, weed their gardens, or undertake a round of golf. in the really well regulated tropics, every variety of human exercise, relaxation and sport is still enjoyed, because well mannered rain arrives at an hour which permits the sun to dry things off in time for the remainder of the

If the rain will thus adjust itself slightly, to a little more regularity and thus a little more incidental courtesy to human beings we are sure the inhabitants of this region will in turn do their best to acclimate themselves to the thickness and the height of the jungle growths which the daily rain has begun to promote among hitherto well disciplined meadows, lanes, and swamps. It has got so that, for some plot owners, a casual saunter beyond the edge of one's lawn has become a daring safari, beset by imaginary pythons, waylaid by phantom elephants, and really surveyed only by imaginary giraffes. Nobody knew what growth power there was in this old New England soil, until there came this summer of the rains from the tropics.

We fail to understand several things, First, why were other aspects of Sen. Dodd's affairs not examined, those dealing not with testimonial dinners but with Dodd's alleged use of airplanes owned by private corporations, his alleged receipt of donations from state insurance companies and manufacturers, acts of misconduct that would fall under the state statute? State's Atty. LaBelle's office, we think, took an unduly restricted position when it focused only on stipulations made before the Senate. LaBelle did say yesterday that on May 27 he wrote to Secretary of the State Ella Grasso saying an investigation by his office found no evidence of violations of the act in the loan of a car to Dodd by a state firm. Second, why have testimonial dinners nothing to do with the Corrupt Practices Stipulations that these funds were used to make improvement on the senator's North Stonington home, to purchase liquor and flowers, pay parking tickets or to repay loans, do not alter the situation. These monies may not have been used directly to influence the outcome of "any election, caucus, or pri-But they did relieve the senafinancial burdens directly connected with his political campaigns. To quote Sen. Dodd himself from a speech made on the floor of the Senate June 21 monials was approximately $170,000.

"Against this amount, I paid out $120,000 to liquidate political debts incurred between 1956 and 1958, and I paid out $101,000 for unreimbursed costs of office-a figure which works out to an average of roughly $12,500 a year. " "Thus, against $170,000 received from the testimonials. I have paid out $221,-000 for political purposes. "This leaves me with a net deficit of 60,000, approximately."

The senator, it would seem, has convicted himself out of his own mouth. For, according to Section 9-337 of the General Statutes of the State of Connecticut (1949 Rev. S. 1166; 1953, S. 814d.), "The payments, expenditures, promises and liabilities which any candidate for senator of the United States may make or incur directly or indirectly, in aid of his nomination or election. or both, shall not exceed one-third of the salary of said office for one year." In his two campaigns for the U.S. Senate in 1956 and 1958, he would have been allowed to spend, personally, a total of mission, $120,000 "to liquidate political debts incurred . . ." during these years. The one-third allowed over a three-year period was, under the state law; a total of $30,000. The fact that Sen. Dodd was out of pocket $50,000 is beside the point. And, by his adding of $101,000 to the total for his "unreimbursed costs of office." he came up with the figure of

Our arithmetic may not be what it hould. But we think we can distinguish between $20,000 and either $120,000 or

The trooper said, "Here are two more examples which prove how unwise it is to try to save time when driving: Speeding to pass a vehicle which has slowed down and that may turn directly into your path with or without signaling may save ten seconds. In a test conducted by police in a huge city, two cars were to run the same course through traffic from one side of the city to the other. One car was allowed to commit all the violations, the other had to stay within speed limits, observe every law. At the finish line, in 57 minutes, the violator saved 3 minutes over the law abiding car." To save in every way and enjoy satisfying service come to us! Dillon Sales and Service,

In our on the go way of living, nearly every one, at least occasionally, is a guest in a hotel or motel. It is nothing less than a phenomenon that all these stopping off places have a unique thing in common. A Bible can be found in a drawer in every sleeping room. in every sleeping room.

No one knows exactly how often it is picked up, leafed through, glanced at or read. It is moved sometimes, covered up sometimes, ignored sometimes. Nor is there any way of telling how many people got acquainted with God through the hotel Bible. But unobtrusively, without fanfare, every time a new hotel or motel opens, the Bible becomes a part of standard room equipment: Did you ever wonder where, how or when this practice started?

In 1898, two traveling men, strangers to each other, met in a Wisconsin hotel. They found out they had a close, mutual friend—God. In their discussion, the idea of placing a Bible in hotel rooms was thought of. Within a year, they formed a society know as the Gideons, the society that supplies the Bibles. The details of their meeting, their plans, the expansion of the Gideons to world wide activity . . . the whole story can be read right behind the front cover of the hotel or motel Bible. The next time you are in a hotel or motel. read the Gideon story if you have not already done so.

North American Champions, Grade 2. That's how you another passenger, sticking greet the members of the Manchester Pipe Band today, because they won that title on Saturday in competition with 30 other bands during the North America Pipe Band Championship in Maxville, Ontario, Canada,

Bands were entered from all over the United States and Canada, as far west as Vancouver. A Toronto band won The award to the champion Kilties is a trophy and a The pipe major of the band Charles (Chuck) Murdoch. He is a former pupil of an alltime great in the piping world, the late George Duncan of Detroit, Mich.

Murdoch was among four Manchester pipers who competed with the Worcester Pipe Band when it entered the World Pipe Band Championship in Scotland in 1964. William Forbes of 231 Mc Kee St., who accompanied the oand to Canada and was its drum major for 30 years, called The Herald with the report near the New on the band's triumph. watch the contestants in band, 18, who is working as a waitress

Next Saturday, the pipe band will compete in the Central New York State Games at Syracuse. Forbes will also be in the individual competitions

The championship marks a big gain for the pipe band since its return to competition in 1965 after a lapse of almost nine years. Since 1965, it has improved itself to meet the high musical standards that have risen since the mid-50's. During that period, it has won some necticut, New York and Massa chusetts and been second or third in others.

Murdoch returned Thursday from a European vacation trip to accompany the band. Most bandsmen drove to Canada with their families. Some are on vacation, and others returned home either yesterday or today

GREENVILLE, Maine

They live by a gas line on Regency Drive

Everyone living on Regency Drive is a "lucky." They can all take advantage of and enjoy the cleanliness, comfort and convenience of modern, low-cost GAS living. Take Jim Holtgrieve on the left there for example...he lives at 11 Regency Drive with his wife Ruth and their son Rick. Ruth's a great cook, and why not . . . she has all the GAS cooking advantages of the Hotel America, the Hartford Hilton and the Corner

And Mr. and Mrs. Fullerton Boyd standing next to him never have to worry about enough heat or hot water for their beautiful home at 34 Regency Drive. It's a home that stays beautifully clean, thanks to the friendly blue flame operation of their GAS heating system.

The Freedman's standing behind them live a few doors away at 24. Needless to say those two little boys require a lot of bathing and fresh clean clothes. With fast, dependable GAS, Mrs. Freedman gets all the hot water she needs . . . whenever she needs it. And her GAS dryer gives her a steady supply of fluffy clothes and fresh Maybe you're a "lucky" and don't know it. Why not call us today and find out if there's a GAS line near you.
