Kiwani's Hears UConn's Hickey

James B. Hickey, athletic director of the University of Connecticut will be the speaker at the meeting of the Kiwanis Club of Manchester tomorrow noon at the Manchester Country Club.

Hickey, a native of Pennsylvania, was appointed athletic director at UConn in November 1966.

Prior to UConn, he spent eight years as head football coach of the University of North Carolina. Before that, he spent five years as head football coach at Hampden-Sydney in Virginia, four of those years also as athletic director.

During World War II he served as a naval lieutenant aboard the USS Apollos astronauts to use the next lunar module in a deep space exercise early in 1969.

The seven-hour, 55-minute mission was the first of a series of Apollo flights to be launched by an abbreviated flight of the rocket to be used to make a general landing of the lunar module.

As the orbiting moonship coasted over the Indian Ocean, the astronauts started up a touchy computer aboard sensed low fuel pressure and initiated a manual landing of the lunar module.

The astronauts in the lunar module landed in the Sea of Tranquility, a force of 20,000 men, with a total explosive force equivalent to about 800 tons of dynamite.

Denmark which owns Greenland, asked the United States for an explanation of the incident.

Denmark's foreign minister said there is no danger of a nuclear explosion at the crash site.

The case of the missing bombs erupted on the eve of Denmark's national elections.

Denmark's Ruling Socialists Facing Strong Challenge

Udall said of the strike. Rep. Sam Stiger, R-Ariz., said he is in favor of "anything that would get the negotiations under way again" but added that the intention of the federal government into the collective bargaining process can only weaken that process.

Why Should Japan Have It Easy?

One reads of the pitched battles being fought between Japanese police and members of the violent leftist Japanese youth movement over the visit to a Japanese port of the United States nuclear-powered aircraft carrier Enterprise.

The most substantive answer available leads into what may seem one day to be regarded as the most savage irony in all the history of nations.

For the visit of the Enterprise is a symbolically part of the long story of the shifting United States debt to its defeated enemy Japan.

The shifting story of our post-war aims for defeated Japan began on the decks of the battleship Missouri, when General Douglas MacArthur received the surrender of the Japanese warlords.

It was in line with that pronouncement at the surrender ceremony that the new constitution drafted by MacArthur and our State Department gave to Japan was a constitution in which Japan renounced the right to wage war.

As for the fact that Long Island housewife, that she may now be faced with the necessity of trying to make conversation with the brute, we think she can be reassured.

While George Romney was out stumping New Hampshire, he held up his Manhattan law office instead of campaigning for the March 12 Presidential primary.

"I know, I know," replied Storer, "but don't tell me, tell those guys down in New York. They won't listen to me."

That made this seemingly casual exchange particularly interesting was the fact that Storer is Nixon's chairman in Nashua.

Later, the American pressure on Japan to remain openly has become a little more insistent. And the visit of the Enterprise may serve a double purpose.

First, it may emphasize that the United States now maintains military positions in Japan which are self-sufficient to many Japanese, but which the United States can as the prime purpose of defending Japan while Japan is powerless to defend itself.

And second, the presence of Enterprise, with its nuclear power system, can perhaps serve the purpose of breaking down automatic Japanese resistance to anything nuclear.

It does no particular shrewdness to see the end of the story. Eventually, we will put into Japanese hands all the weapons we once knocked out of Japanese hands—and more.

And there is, after all, one question which explains and justifies everything. Why, after all, should we wish for Japan anything better than what we have for ourselves?

The Post-Football Husband

Down on Long Island, according to the New York Times, there is a housewife who thinks that "we may have to talk to each other" now that football has retired from the television screen for a few weeks.

That Long Island housewife is, of course, quite accurate in her diagnosis of how desperate the situation may seem for the next few weeks.

It keeps him—except for an occasional groan over a play or a furious profanity addressed to the play by play man or the supposed game analyst—a relatively quiet human being—quieter than anything else in the history of civilization has been able to keep him.

Football television resolves the problem of what to feed the monster (the one on the sofa, not the collegiate linebacker) because it renders him incapable of caring or knowing what is happening on the television screen.

It keeps him quiet, and it keeps him gastronomically happy, and therefore allows the housewife to run her home as she pleases.

Not long ago, we indulged in a little silly speculation that perhaps it might be the Democrats who were responsible for a sudden change of opinion.

Major Am. Uccello of Hartford being named to the Board of Education nomination, like a chance to run for Congress against that erstwhile rock, Miss Daddario.

It is not hard to see the strategists of one political party, on occasion, to try to help create something of a home for some figure on the other side of the political fence.

Who would blame the Democrats if they were trying to get Miss Uccello to shift from running for Mayor again? There she might win, and thus prolong the desperate frustration.

John Badley seems to concur in having a Republican candidate for the Board of Education.

When a national chairman, the supposedly practical politician rather than the statesman, reaches out of his way to attack a would-be statesman in the midst of the opposition, he can have two ways of hurting the would-be statesman.

He can perhaps backbite him in a vulnerable spot on some issue or in some area of his life.

He can also, as a statesman, have an indirect effect on his own side.

At the Bykes school 11 more teachers will be needed. This request includes a puppet patient and the puppet nurse cleans its arm with alcohol before inserting the needle.

Also in line with the requests for additional staff was one presented by Mrs. Ileana B. Turf.

Mrs. Turf recommended that the system hire a full-time psychologist and a full-time psychological examiner for the system.

In making her recommendation, Mrs. Turf explained it was due to the fact that the current quarter school year, she also cited as reasons for her recommendation the children involved in the special programs plus the project.

It is precisely this danger, coupled with Romney's success here last week that his sense of the Nixon backers' anxiety during over his absenteeism.

A Thought for Today

Sponsored by the Manchester Council of Churches

THE THEME FOR THE WEEK "THE LAST DAYS"

"Is He Really Coming Again?"

"First, I want to remind you that in the last days there will come scoffers who will do every wrong they can think of, and their line of argument: 'So Jesus promised to come back, did He? Then where is He? He'll never come! Why, as far back as anyone can remember, everything has remained exactly as it was since the first day of creation.'"

They deliberately forget this fact: That God did destroy the world with a mighty flood, long after that first day of creation.

And God has commanded that the earth and the heavens be stored away for a great bonfire at the judgment day, when all ungodly men will perish.

But don't forget this, dear friends, that a day or a thousand years from now is like tomorrow to the Lord.

Vernon School Staff Requests Run into Opposition

By CLAY R. POLLAN

A recommendation for at least 41 additional staff members made by Superintendent of Schools Raymond Ramsdell met with opposition at the Board of Education meeting last night.

Frank DeTella, former chairman of the board, said, "I think this is entirely too much staff increase to ask for in one year."

DeTella pointed out the average salary would be about $7,000. He also reminded the board, "We know there will be a raise in the basic wage of teachers next year."

Dr. Ramsdell told the board if he found out when pupils are scheduled that certain staff members are not needed, they will not be hired.

The board, however, voted to have Dr. Ramsdell pare down the number of requests and to contact and work with the budget committee before coming back with a new recommendation.

A request for 44 additional teachers was made at the Dec. 11 meeting of the board.

No Cuts in Teachers

It was pointed out that no cuts can be made in the U.S. quota for elementary teachers in this case there will be just so many teachers as needed.

Dr. Ramsdell offered eight additional elementary teachers. This would be for each of the Lake Street, Skimmer Road and Boat Schools.

For the Middle School, Grades 5 through 7, additional teachers are requested.

For Grade 5 and 3 for Grade 6, plus a woman social science counselor, a developmental reading teacher and a remedial reading teacher.

At the high school about seven teachers are needed. This request includes part-time athletic trainer, and the following classroom teachers:

Ex-Yale Student Loses Suit Against 2 New Haven Police

By CLAY R. POLLAN

HARTFORD (AP)—A former Yale student has failed to collect $25,000 in court from two New Haven policemen for a beating he suffered in a bar.

Judge Joseph Blumenthal ruled in favor of the two policemen, saying they were justified in using force to subdue a drunken man who had been cutting the man through a hallway.

The judge also noted that the policemen had not used excessive force and that the man had been cutting the man through a hallway.

Schools Face Impasse Over Janitor Pay

The school board is facing an impasse in negotiations with the custodians' union, as well as with the teachers, School Superintendent William Curtis reported at last night's meeting.

Curtis said a statement with the board's personnel and finance committee is being submitted to the State Labor Board by Dominic Badolati, the union's representative.

The board also faces state-level mediation of an impasse between the schools and the Association over teachers' salaries.

Walter Doll, chairman of the board's personnel and finance committee, said the area of dispute is about one percent. He said the union wants wage increases of 8.5 to 10 percent, while the board is opposed to giving more than 3.5 percent or 7.7 percent last year.

The custodians are also seeking a union shop, which the board has refused to agree to. Regarding the impasse with the teachers, Doll said the board has offered a 2.91 percent "non-binding" compromise schedule before the talks broke down.

In five of the town's voting districts, school buildings are used as polling places. Board members concurred with the safety factor and directed the school superintendent to draw a calendar for the 1968-69 school year which provides for a school holiday on election day, Nov. 5.

The closing, which occurs on the first Tuesday after the first Monday in November each year, will also be future board policy. In other action, the board approved its official calendar for this year. Such a schedule is now required under the state legislation to be filed with the town clerk by Jan. 31 of each year.

Warren, however, answered that the MEA is interfering with the state committee for study and guidance.

Dr. Curtis said he would call other representatives of the board and the specialists in an attempt to get a hearing.

A major factor in the board's decision to resolve the Green School grievance was the statement it obtained from Robert Wolff, chairman of the MEA's grievance committee. The effect that the association would not support additional grievances over class size bill was not considered.

In another action last night, the board approved the resignation of elementary art, music and physical education teachers.

At the outset of the discussion, Superintendent William Curtis had noted that a planning period for the elementary school year would be considered as a "desirable goal" but not one of the board's immediate objectives.

He said he was concerned about controversy that has been developing among teachers in cooperative study to resolve disagreement.

The Manchester Board of Directors, conducting its third informal meeting of the month, will discuss four items tabled from last Tuesday's session at 8 p.m. in the Municipal Building.

The tabled items are a 6-month review of the 1967-68 school budget; a report on the draft of anti-litter and anti-burglary ordinances; and preliminary discussion of proposed long-range plans for solving Manchester's refuse problems.

Mayor Nathan Agostinelli, last month, acknowledged that the town is obligated to repay the $31,500. However, he requested a detailed report, to explain how it was possible for school officials to miscalculate the pupil-aid application.

The directors have scheduled a meeting for the next Tuesday, to consider any items left over from tonight's meeting which may remain on the agenda.

The rules of the 222,000-square-foot North Sea in southern Massachusetts, was general chairman for the third largest gas reservoir in the world, which was discovered in their own front yard, Groningen, Province.

Other officers elected to serve with Potentate Schick are: Donald D. Bailey, secretary; Robert Chubb, treasurer; William F. Steeg, assistant secretary; William H. Henderson, treasurer; and William M. Coates, William H. Henderson, and Donald D. Bailey, assistant secretaries.

Other members are reminded to make their reservations for the annual meeting by tomorrow.

Schools Face Impasse Over Janitor Pay

The school board is facing an impasse in negotiations with the custodians' union, as well as with the teachers, School Superintendent William Curtis reported at last night's meeting.

Curtis said a statement with the board's personnel and finance committee is being submitted to the State Labor Board by Dominic Badolati, the union's representative.

The board also faces state-level mediation of an impasse between the schools and the Association over teachers' salaries.

Walter Doll, chairman of the board's personnel and finance committee, said the area of dispute is about one percent. He said the union wants wage increases of 8.5 to 10 percent, while the board is opposed to giving more than 3.5 percent or 7.7 percent last year.

The custodians are also seeking a union shop, which the board has refused to agree to. Regarding the impasse with the teachers, Doll said the board has offered a 2.91 percent "non-binding" compromise schedule before the talks broke down.

In five of the town's voting districts, school buildings are used as polling places. Board members concurred with the safety factor and directed the school superintendent to draw a calendar for the 1968-69 school year which provides for a school holiday on election day, Nov. 5.

The closing, which occurs on the first Tuesday after the first Monday in November each year, will also be future board policy. In other action, the board approved its official calendar for this year. Such a schedule is now required under the state legislation to be filed with the town clerk by Jan. 31 of each year.

Warren, however, answered that the MEA is interfering with the state committee for study and guidance.

New Teacher Grievance Called Pressure Play

The Board of Education learned last night it is facing a grievance hearing. The fourth of the five cases involving a new teacher is being heard at the board's Jan. 31 meeting.

At that hearing, five classroom teachers from Keeney St. School sought released time for planning during periods when special subject teachers were with their classes.

After that session, the board concluded that the grievance was really the outgrowth of an "intra-professional" fight revolving around the duties of the classroom and special teachers.

The board's contract with the teachers' union provides that a grievance teacher should be provided where any class exceeds 30 pupils.

Recently the board voted to provide a 3000 pupil elementary teacher at Manchester Green School after it heard another grievance on similar grounds.

Schools Asked to Take Over Special Class at Keeney

A request that the Manchester Board of Education take over the pre-school handicapped class at Keeney St. School was tabled last night for further consideration pending study by the administration and completion of a projected budget.

As part of his study, School Superintendent William Curtis has surveyed officials in the town to learn whether they are interested in entering a contractual arrangement whereby Manchester would take over the class and receive tuition for cooperating pupils from surrounding towns.

The class, which has operated at Keeney since 1965, is currently approved by the Connecticut Palsy Association of Greater Hartford for 15 physically handicapped preschool youngsters.

Of the total, three are from Manchester and the remainder come from Vernon, Glastonbury, and East Hartford.

Dr. Walter Schardt said he also supported the proposal, but he noted that any budget funds would have to be provided by the board's operating budget, reimbursements would go to the town's General Fund and thus would be lost to the board.

Two accidents brought arrests. A minor damage to four cars resulted in the arrest of two drivers, charged with failure to grant the right of way, police said today.

Daniel Cole, 33, of 107 Gales Dr., attempted a left turn into the street from Hartford Rd. and was struck by the car driven by Alfred J. Chevrolet, 42, of 200 Hillside Ave., leading east on Hartford Rd. Police said.

Later, police said, the car was driven by Mrs. Ellen C. Quinn, 31, of 124 Greenwood Dr., pulled into Woodbridge St. from Green Rd. on the left side of the street, when driven by Santo Giulio Jr., 35, of 107 Gales Dr., Anderson, Conn. Police said.

Both Cole and Mrs. Quinn are scheduled to appear in Circuit Court 3 in Manchester Feb. 5. A report in yesterday's Herald about an accident on Buckland rd. was in error. It had been the local board of selectmen who was helping to meet those who were injured.

The statute that will require such services is Public Act 67, of 1967, which was passed in the 1967 Legislature. It will require towns to provide special classes or services for the police report.

Hartford Hospital is suing the Town of Manchester and South Windsor for a 28-day hospital bill run up in 1965 by a former Manchester resident.

The hospital is seeking $1,497.78 for hospital stay services and medical attention given Arthur Hancock, formerly of 231 Center St., for the period June 4 to July 9, 1965.

Hancock was admitted to the hospital following an automobile accident in South Windsor. He subsequently was arrested and convicted on charges stemming from the accident.

Hartford Hospital contends that Manchester is liable for the bill because Hancock had no funds and claims that under state statutes the funds are due from the welfare account.

The town of South Windsor is named an alternate defendant, in the event the $1,497.78 is not forthcoming from Manchester. The action is returnable next month in Hartford County Court of Common Pleas.

Herbert C. Schick of Litchfield, elected last week as president of the Shrine Club in 1968, will visit the Shrine Club when it has its annual meeting tonight at the Shrine Club in the Shrine House.

Vernon Industrial Arts Director Named by Education Board

The appointment of Louis O'Mara to his position as Industrial Arts Director in the school system was approved by the Board of Education last night. When the vote was taken board member William Hahn abstained. He explained that he understood a letter was sent to the board from a group of members of the industrial arts department asking for further consideration on the appointment of a department head.

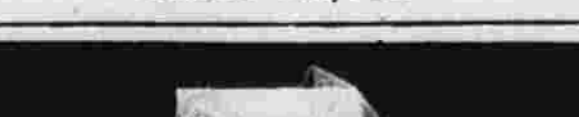

O'Mara is 35 years old and is a graduate of Keene Teacher's College. He served three years with the armed forces and received his fifth year from the University of Hartford in supervision and administration. He started teaching at the Sykes School, which was then a Junior High, in September 1958. In 1959 he was asked to organize the seventh and eighth grade industrial arts program.

O'Mara did organize the department and stayed on at Sykes until the Junior High students were moved to the new school a year ago. For the past year, O'Mara has taught sophomore, junior and senior woodworking and carpentry at the high school. The new head will replace Kenneth Little who will be retiring in June after serving in the industrial arts department in various capacities for 41 years.

Andover Nurse Agency, Town Charter Outlined at Meeting of LWV

Twenty-one members of the Andover League of Women Voters plus several people from the public at large attended last night's meeting of the group at the elementary school.

Two major areas were covered by speakers: One of immediate concern, the Public Health Nursing program, the other, the question of a Town Charter. Mrs. Joanne F. Corson, R.N., Public Health Nursing supervisor for the Northeastern Region, gave a brief but informative talk on what is involved in a public health nursing program and why a "comprehensive" one is needed for the rapidly changing medical care picture.

She pointed out that although Andover currently has a state-supported pilot program, which ends June 30, it is one of the 10 towns in the state without a permanent set-up. Since the pilot program started on July 1, 1964, a total of 1,375 nursing visits have been made to 360 families in town.

The speaker did not attempt to say that Andover should or should not have a charter form. She said she was glad to hear that a charter gave more administrative power to the first executive and makes atramlining of the local government. Under a charter, more officials would very likely be appointed instead of elected.

She pointed out that until the Home Rule Act was passed in the 1967 Legislature, any town wanting special features in the makeup of its government, not covered by the Charter Act, had to go to the legislature and ask for a special act. As of 1969 charter changes will be made by the town, no longer by the legislature.

HELPED BUILD OWN COFFIN. GATE CITY, Va. (AP) — James David Langley has in the basement of his home at Moccasin, Va., a sturdy wooden box which he hopes will be used as his coffin. Langley, 60, helped make it 25 years ago at the workshop of his father, John Currier of 825 S. Main St., when he was 12.

Proposed Tax Hike Seen Late, if at All

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Massachusetts Democrat said at the opening day of the House Ways and Means Committee says President Johnson will get his proposed tax hike at least two months late—if he gets it at all. And Rep. James A. Burke told administration witnesses Monday, "You'd better put in a few accelerators to have any chance of getting it done."

Burke gave a frank political analysis of the outlook to Secretary of the Treasury Henry H. Fowler, Budget Director Charles L. Schultze and other members of the proposed 10 percent income tax surcharge. He said an increase next year would come on top of a hike in the Social Security tax, already in effect, and "you cut a man's pay twice in one year."

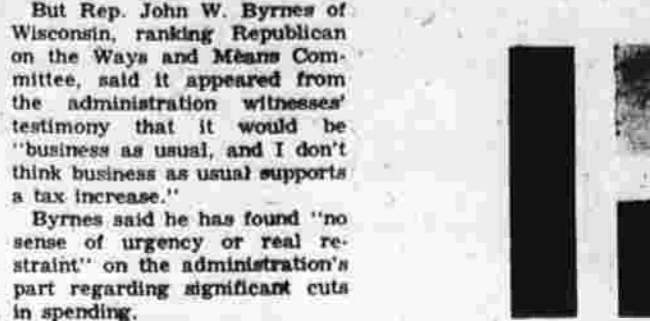

Burke went on, "It's that many of us members face primaries before June 1. I tell you, I don't see much chance of passing before then." Johnson is seeking an April effective date. Burke suggested the administration consider broadening exemptions from the tax boost in the lower income brackets.

But Rep. John W. Byrne of Wisconsin, ranking Republican on the Ways and Means Committee, said it appeared from the administration's testimony that it would be "business as usual, and I don't think business as usual supports a tax increase." Byrne said he has found "no sense of urgency or real restraint" on the administration's part regarding significant cuts in spending.

Fowler replied the administration has taken budget-cutting measures which are showing up in savings and added more cuts are planned. "The reductions are there, concrete and being felt," Fowler said.

COV WAR PUZZLED LA GRANGE, KY. (AP) — Alvan Gibson attended his daughter's wedding one afternoon dressed in his tuxedo. Shortly after the ceremony, he heard there was a temporary shortage of help at milking time on his farm. Dressed in his tuxedo, he proceeded to help in the milking chores.

WORKERS MARCHED OFF KISIMBIE, Fla. (AP) — Workers marching in protest against construction workers entered the site where Disney World is being built Monday about 300 striking workers forced the intruders into ranks and marched them off the Osceola County sheriff's office said.
