NATO Role Curbs Bonn Treaty Try

Associated Press Writer

BONN, Germany (AP) — West Germany is not ready to weaken its role in the North Atlantic Treaty Organization — NATO — in exchange for a treaty with the Soviet Union renouncing the use of force, a qualified source said today.

The government confirmed this week that talks have been going on for the past few months between Willy Brandt, West German foreign minister, and Leonid Brezhnev, Soviet ambassador to Bonn. No concrete results have been announced.

The source said the greatest barrier to negotiating a Soviet-German treaty is finding a formula which would allow Bonn to fulfill its NATO commitments. West German newspapers have reported that Brandt is concerned that a pact might force the West Germans to curb their participation in NATO, which they have been members of the alliance since 1955.

West German sources stressed that conclusion of any such treaty was far away. It is materialized at all, and that much remained unclear about how the Russians would like to go about it.

He said, for example, West German officials have been unable to determine whether the treaty would involve only the Soviet Union or also the other European Communist countries as well.

The Soviets insisted that Bonn sign with all members of the Warsaw Pact, the East European equivalent of NATO, the problem of East Germany would come up.

Pity The Leader

One could not help but pity the poor President, and sympathize with him, on Thursday, in the midst of searing accounts of events in Vietnam, he unveiled his own feeling and thinking in public.

In one of his public appearances of the day, that at the annual Presidential prayer breakfast at the Thornton Hotel, President Johnson said this:

"The nights are very long. The winds are very chill. Our spirits grow weary and restless as the springtime of man seems farther and farther away."

As President, he said he had no right to tell his fellow citizens whether or how they should worship.

But, he said, "I can, and I do, tell you that in these long nights your President prays."

We can assure him, we think, that there are not many people in this country who do not, in one way or another, share his attitude of prayer, and who do not wish that some portion of the anguish burden upon the man in the White House might be lifted. We can assure him, too, that very few Americans doubt the genuineness and the sincerity of the emotions the President conveys.

But even as his people can join the President in his attitude of prayer, they feel forced to include in their hopes for the President's nation, and the world he hopes that he could somehow extricate himself from, "somehow find peace, somehow find freedom, somehow find a better world."

On this occasion, the President had one eye on the hero standing in the White House, another on what was happening over in Vietnam.

"This is an afternoon," he said, "when it is good to stand beside a man in uniform. He is a brave man, who has come to claim the honor that his courage has earned. He is also a spokesman for the courage of thousands like him who are protecting you and serving us in Vietnam at this hour."

"This is also a very special afternoon for all of them. They are not thinking of medals or ceremonies in the Read Room of a desperate enemy who is very offensive. They are thinking of you and of us, and they will not fail us. They will not fail us even if it means dying before another morning comes their way."

"This is as sure as this brave man is standing here. It is he who says the enemy will fall—again—and again—for as long as he threatens the freedom and the peace we Americans will never yield."

Later in the same remarks the President undertook the strategy of turning the bad news from Vietnam into refutation of those domestic critics who have thought it was bad news for us ever to become so deeply involved there.

"Let those who would stop the bombing," the President said, "answer this question: 'What would the North Vietnamese be doing if we stopped the bombing and let them alone?'"

"The answer, I think, is clear. The enemy force in the South would be larger. It would be better equipped. The war would be harder. The losses would be greater. The difficulties would last longer, and of one thing you can be sure: it would cost many more American lives."

He happened to be speaking at a moment when the enemy seemed adequately vigorous, in spite of three years of bombing.

The President, in his baffled involvement, in his dead end commitment, has for a long time had no more realistic justification for his policy than that: that this was the only way to protect the lives of the Americans he has sent there. They are heroes, we do not want them to die; therefore it must be right for them to be where they are.

It is a litany which has become, for the nation, as routine and as insupportable as the taped message of some answering service. If only the President who prays could somehow be liberated from his own closed-circuit logic! If only he could see himself as so much of his own nation, so much of the world, see him as the man who is not only a man, but out of an alley so desperate and blind even prayer does not know what to do for him, and who is not only a man, but out of an alley so desperate and blind even prayer does not know what to do for him, and who is not only a man, but out of an alley so desperate and blind even prayer does not know what to do for him...

To Translate Computerese. The next thing we are to have, as part of our general computerization of civilization, is to be the gift of Russian science, and it is to be a computer which will be able to understand human speech.

Those who have been following the evolution of language itself during the relative infancy of the influence of the computer will understand that this is not a new kind of interpreter has been getting more and more necessary. Nothing could be more fitting than to have this interpreter be the computer itself.

The computer, much more than the atom, space, or any of the other novelties of our time, has been responsible for infiltrating into the language those multivalent mathematical-sounding abstractions which make any communication anything other than a certain pointless mutuality of symbols and signs.

Now we have assurance that, in time, there will be a computer able to translate computerese into plain language. Almost everything that happens in a point or part of a circle which will eventually come full.

Not Bad Looking, Either. One of the more recent scientific discoveries which can be applied to the war man is finally bringing us news against air pollution is the discovery that a tree works harder and more consistently than any mechanical device at the vital business of keeping a healthy balance of chemicals in the air we breathe.

If we could get a situation in which we had ten new trees planted for every new automobile we allow upon the highways—at least 50 new trees for every new diesel truck—we would be holding our own in the race against the pollution of our own making.

This new discovery of practical value for the tree goes along with previous knowledge about the tree's role in holding moisture in the soil, preventing erosion, and helping build up fertility.

Both of these services the tree can perform just by doing what comes naturally, from being let grow.

And it is usually something fairly good to look at, too.

Involvement in Guatemala. The other day, Cuban Premier Fidel Castro attended a reception at the Apostolic Nunciature in Havana. He addressed this in the speech with which he welcomed the recent Cultural Congress in the Cuban capital. In the United States, he said, there was concern over the movement that is developing among the Catholic clergy in Latin America which is a movement linked with Cuba, linked with the Cuban revolution, linked with Castro, and so on.

These are the kinds of things which he said these priests had submitted to the Congress.

In this paper, the priests said they were "convinced that Father Camillo Torres Restrepo, in dying for the revolutionary cause, set the highest example of a Christian intellectual devoted to the people. The name of Camillo Torres was enough to set off applause from the assembled delegates. Father Torres, former chaplain of the National University in Bogota, was shot and killed by Colombian security forces two years ago—fighting at the side of a pro-Castro guerrilla band in the Andes.

Father Torres went farther in the direction of armed revolutionary struggle than any other Latin-American Roman Catholic priest has till now. Although the Archbishop of Recife, in Brazil, has given the regime in Brasilia—and perhaps even the Pope—some qualms, he has not yet taken to the maquis. But what we must make of things when three missionary members of the Maryknoll Order from the United States die in their religious superiors and apparently join pro-Castro guerrillas in Guatemala?

What had these three people—two priests and a nun—seen in Guatemala that led them to this desperate step? Without doubt, there is much in Guatemala to cause desperation and heartache. There is an illiteracy rate of 83 per cent. There is no school for 70 per cent of those people under 20. 70 per cent does not go to school. A Bank American official describes the intensity of the fighting in Guatemala as the rate of three a day in a vicious and violent gun warfare between extreme right and extreme left. Last week, two senior United States military officers were gunned down in this running-battle.

Reports in responsible British and French publications imply that the extreme right in Guatemala is the greater threat to peace and security in the country than the extreme left. The Latin-American expert of Le Monde implies that United States counterinsurgency men are too timid up to the extreme right to be healthy. Is that why the American officers were gunned down in Guatemala City last week? And is that why the three United States missionaries of the Maryknoll Order have felt no alternative but to throw in their lot with the extreme left? —CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR

We no longer have woodchucks on our place, for possible use in propagating the duration of winters, or observing the traditional rises of Groundhog Day.

Instead of woodchucks, we have possums, those helpful service that we know of is to demonstrate the advantages of one technique of survival over another.

The reason we have possums is not that we have had the kind of relationship each achieved with our dog.

Each time, the dog put on the limp again. It could play the dog, and he would never completely surrender to the terrible jaws of its partner.

Reupholster in Winter

Are you one of the fortunate who will be taking a vacation during the winter season? If so, and if you have some furniture that you would like to have upholstered, but hate to part with it for the length of time it takes to have the work done, why not consider having P & M Upholstery Shop do it for you while you are enjoying your vacation?

Experience is an important asset in any business and particularly so in the upholstery business. When you have P & M Upholstery Shop do work for you, you are getting the benefit of a fine job of hand tuffing. Whether you collect antique furniture or have some that belonged in the family, you can safely trust all work in this field to the P & M Upholstery Shop.

At P & M Upholstery Shop you may choose shimmering antique velvet, corded velvet, or some of the beautiful old tapestries. Also there is a new cut velvet in floral prints. Any of these would be appropriate for antique furniture. We used to think twice before choosing velvet for it used to mat and crease easily. Now you can choose new nylon velvet with the shorter nap that will not mat and wear. To mark it and wear it. To test it, Mr. Pirag cushions into a hard ball and when he smoothed it out, not a mark remained.

For a finish to antique furniture, choose braid or antique fringe.

The car crashed through the wooden barrier at the end of a street which leads to the edge of the water.

Two employees at the nearby United Illuminating plant reported they heard the sound of a crash and then cries for help. A plant guard sent to investigate spotted Roman floating in the water while clinging to a piece of wood.

Police retrieved the car, which was completely submerged, and found that it was empty. It was not immediately known whether Roman or the other man had been driving the car.

He is reported at home as a gorges, will be damaged and practical businessman who put to hydroelectric use by the Yugoslav and Romanian governments. The central navigable take Beneditke to live. She own channel will be closed in 1969 to complete the project. This will cause about 13 villages to disappear as the river level goes up 90 feet.

Police Charge Seven In Series of Breaks

Seven of the teen-agers wanted in more than 60 breaks into homes and businesses in Connecticut were arrested yesterday and today on Superior Court warrants.

The warrants for the arrest of all seven were obtained by state police yesterday morning. Four were picked up yesterday around noon and three more were in police custody this morning. The rest are being sought this weekend.

The three youths arrested this morning and being present in court before Judge Toland in Superior Court for processing and presentation of $500 bonds each were:

Nelson Carrier, 16, of Colchester, one count of breaking and entering with criminal intent, one count of larceny and one count of breaking and entering a dwelling in the daytime.

Raymond Di Pietro, 17, of Marlborough, counts of breaking and entering with criminal intent and larceny.

The four youths arrested yesterday were:

Dennis E. Howe, 17, of 14 Allen Dr., Vernon, charged with entering a dwelling in the daytime; and nine counts of larceny.

James Dezzo, 17, of Phoenix St., Vernon, one count of breaking and entering a dwelling in the daytime; six counts of breaking and entering with criminal intent; six counts of larceny; and two counts of theft of a motor vehicle.

Dennis LaChapelle, 17, Phoenix St., Vernon, four counts of breaking and entering a dwelling in the daytime; six counts of breaking and entering with criminal intent; nine counts of larceny; and two counts of theft of a motor vehicle.

Robert Duchaine, 17, of Colchester, one count of attempted breaking and entering with criminal intent; one count of breaking and entering with criminal intent, and one count of larceny.

The four were released on $500 bond for appearance next week in Toland County Superior Court.

State police said the breaks took place during the last several months in 25 towns. These include Vernon, Ellington, Toland, Bolton, Andover, Hebron, and Colchester. Police added that the breaks took place as far east as the Danvers area and also include Hartford and Newington. The stolen goods are valued in the "thousands" police said.

Police said the breaks were made into homes and such businesses as garages, and sporting good stores.

Among the goods stolen were firearms, television sets, radios, speed car parts, tires, sporting equipment, and other mechanical tools.

Some of the goods, police said, have been recovered.

Police believe the breaks were committed by groups but police apparently do not regard them as the work of a gang.

Investigation into the breaks have been going on for several months, police said and have been under the direction of Lt. Wilfred Bellefleur, head of the Colchester Troop, Vernon Deputy Police Chief Edmund Dwyer and Det. Clarence Neff also took part in investigations.

Man Assaulted Changing Tire

A Vernon man was assaulted early yesterday morning as he attempted to change a tire on Lake St. in that town.

George W. Trumppore Jr., of Frederick Rd. was struck in the head by what he believes to have been his own tire iron, before he fled to the sanctuary of a nearby residence from two unknown assailants.

Trumppore was changing his flat tire at 12:30 a.m. when he was blinded suddenly by the glaring headlights of a car, which he thought had stopped to render assistance.

His next sensation was a glancing blow to the back of the head. Rebounding quickly from the attack, he remembered one of two men, who appeared only as images, grabbing for him and tearing his pants.

Trumppore safely reached the nearby home of Walden Day on Richard Rd. where the police were immediately summoned. He was then transported by cruiser to Rockville Hospital where he received stitches in a three-inch headwound and was released.

Board to Get Report On Project Concern

Dr. Thomas Mahan, director of Project Concern, and an administrator representing the Hartford school system are slated to make an interim report on the project to the Board of Education Monday when it convenes at 8 p.m. in the board room at Bennett Junior High School.

Isador Wolf, principal of Manchester Green School and Manchester's Project Concern coordinator, is also scheduled to discuss the local participation in the program.

Project Concern is the two-year busing experiment, now in its second year, under which five suburban towns including Manchester are educating some 250 non-white Hartford children in their elementary schools. Manchester is taking 62 children.

Although the two-year experiment will end in June, Hartford is proposing a continuance and possible expansion of the program to include additional towns.

The local board asked for a report on the project at its last meeting, after tabling a recommendation from the Project Concern advisory board to continue the program another year.

The board is also slated Monday to hear a grievance over class size, being brought by Mrs. Gladys Boyd, a Grade 1 teacher at Keeney St. School. She will be represented at the hearing by the Manchester Education Association's professional rights and responsibilities committee.

The grievance is reportedly concerned with the fact that Mrs. Boyd has more than 30 pupils in her classroom. The contract between the school board and the teachers stipulates that a helping teacher should be provided in classes larger than 30.

Grievances on similar grounds was successfully pressed by three Manchester Green School teachers earlier this year.

In other business, the board is expected to discuss arranging bus transportation for pupils from the Hilliard St. area who attend Robertson School, beginning about March 1.

By that date, work is expected to begin on relocation of N. School St. in connection with the North End Redevelopment Project.

Coventry Selectmen May Make Public Minutes of Closed Meeting

Selectmen are considering a request to file the minutes of a Jan. 22 executive session in the town clerk's office, so that they will become a matter of public record. The request was made at the selectmen's Thursday night meeting by planning and zoning commission chairman Robert Gantner.

Gantner said he has asked the PZC to consider public filing of the session also, since "it can only be of benefit to the town."

The Jan. 22 session was held at the request of the selectmen to discuss aspects of "mutual concern" and was termed "highly productive and fruitful" by both boards. Subject of the session was primarily what the selectmen called "the highly restrictive nature of apartment regulations in the town."

Following the executive session, Gantner had, with the consent of the selectmen, released the highlights of the meeting to members of the press.

Following publication of the meeting, Gantner received a letter from the selectmen in which they said "did not appreciate" the reports of the meeting as published in the newspapers, since they misrepresented the tone and tenor of the session.

Reasons for Meeting
Gantner told the selectmen Thursday night that he would like to clear up the misunderstanding, that he did not object to the content of the meeting, but merely that it was held in executive session.

Selectman Richard Nicola said a principal reason for holding the executive session was that selectmen felt published reports of the session might "cause unnecessary public concern," since it dealt with rising taxes in town in terms of housing. Nicola reiterated that "residential construction in town is not paying its way," since with each new house that goes up, about seven children are added to the town's cost of education at approximately $560 per child.

He noted that selectmen still feel that one way to solve this problem is to allow more multifamily housing in the form of one-bedroom apartments.

Gantner said the PZC is planning to discuss these questions in the near future and that in terms of published reports of the executive session, "reporters are often at the mercy of their paper's policies," that one report of the meeting was "badly out without the reporter's knowledge."

Nicola agreed that he was aware of this and said he had seen a story which looked as if it had been translated into several foreign languages, then back into bad English.

Minor Accidents Occur in Town

Four minor, non-injury accidents occurred in Manchester yesterday.

An automobile driven by Harry J. Connolly, 39, of 133 Florence St. was struck at 8:35 a.m. on Oak St. near Cottage when Nene Fagnani, 45, of 17 1/2 Spruce St. opened the door on the driver's side of his parked car.

Connolly was going east on Oak at the time.

Almira A. Karr of Windsor was negotiating a left turn on Hartford Rd. at 3:35 p.m. when her vehicle was struck in the rear by a car operated by Charles V. Kramer, 28, of East Hartford.

Kramer told police his attention was focused on a third vehicle backing out of a nearby private driveway.

Three cars were involved in an accident occurring on E. Middle Tpke. near Vernon St. at 6:56 p.m.

Janet Gingold of Bloomfield stopped her vehicle for that driven by Gary Kozin, 19, of Willimantic, which had stopped in front of her to make a turn.

The third driver, Alfred Napolitano, 34, of 859 Hartford Rd. was unable to stop in time, striking the rear of Miss Gingold's vehicle.

Mahoney Says GOP 'Used' Charter Unit

Democratic Director and former mayor Francis J. Mahoney has accused the Republican majority on the Board of Directors of a deliberate plan "to fool the people of Manchester," when it created a Charter Revision Commission.

He said that the commission was appointed in January 1967 merely to fulfill campaign promises the Republicans "knew could not be kept," and he urged defeat of proposed charter changes at referendum time.

Mahoney, in a statement issued today, charged that the Republicans have failed to keep their promise, "to give the people more say in local government."

He stated that meeting after meeting goes by without any public hearings scheduled for the Board of Directors' agenda.

"And yet," he continues, "the public will be shocked when they learn of the demands on them for more tax dollars, due to poor commitments made at informal meetings."

Mahoney insists that three items proposed for inclusion in a bonding proposal do not belong there, but "are strictly pay-as-you-go items." They are for heating improvements to the Municipal Building; a new heating system, a sprinkler system and air-conditioning for the Police Station and air-conditioning for Mary Cheney Library.

Mahoney's full statement follows:

"In January 1967 the Republican Party, through the newly-elected Republican Board of Directors, set out to fool the people of Manchester. They had made a promise to the people that they knew could not be kept, but they had the nerve to proceed, and so, appointed a Charter Revision Commission.

"As we all know, the Charter Revision Commission was given two specific charges.

"The first was to revise and broaden the referendum powers of the present charter, par-

Bolton South St. Residents Petition Against Apartment Plans

Residents of South Rd. are circulating a petition requesting that the zoning commission hold a hearing "regarding the approval" of a proposed apartment complex on South Rd. The petition lists their reasons for opposing it.

Town health officer Dr. Robert Butterfield has written a letter to the zoning commission, saying he is opposed to and will not approve "any large apartment complex in the town of Bolton" until certain conditions are met.

Donald Tedford, chairman of the zoning commission, and zoning agent, said yesterday that the proposed apartments would be in an R-2, or multiple dwelling, zone. These regulations have been in effect since at least 1960, he said, and no one has ever questioned them before.

He said that the zoning commission will hold its regular monthly meeting Feb. 18, and that he will spend some time on the apartment question at that meeting, but that "you can't change zoning to outlaw apartments."

A proposed apartment complex on the corner of Rt. 85 N. Elm St. and John Kinley, 283 Highland St.; Jessica Lester, 49 Cottage Dr.; Samuel Long, 121 Delmont St.; Mrs. Eva Magoon, 104 Greenwood Dr.; Mrs. Fumiko Malon, Pucker St., Coventry; Malcolm Murray, 25 Starkweather St.

Also, Mrs. Janice Newby, East Hartford; Ernest Parent Jr., RFD 1, Toland; Arthur Scott, 2783 Ellington Rd., Wapping; Donna Spooner, 30 Eva Dr.; Louis Tamburro, East Hartford.

BIRTHS THURSDAY: A daughter to Mr. and Mrs. Albert Rice, 263 Pleasant Valley Rd., South Windsor; a son to Mr. and Mrs. Ronald Robichaud, East Hartford.

But Tedford said that no hearing is possible in this case. He said he has written to Russell Moonan, who wrote to him earlier in the week requesting a hearing and then drew up the petition, inviting him to the Feb. 15 meeting.

Rough Plans Presented
Rough plans for the apartment complex were brought by the developer Lawrence Fiano to the zoning commission meeting Jan. 18 for approval of the basic layout, including the septic system. He was told to go ahead with his plans, that they looked all right from the zoning point of view.

The property on which the apartments would be built is owned by Fiano and contains a small house, which he has renovated. There are some 13 acres, on South Rd. near Stoney Rd. He has proposed five single-story buildings of six units each (one-bedroom apartments). He proposes to place the buildings on one section of the property, and a common sewage system in another section. He has hired the firm of Buck and Buck to design the sewage system and has been working with state and local health officers, he said.

The petition being circulated says that the petitioners are against the apartments on the following grounds: 1. Depreciation of property. 2. Congestion on a hazardous curve. 3. Traffic hazards in densely populated area. 4. Since the area is highly saturated with single family dwelling of comparable quality to any other section of town zoned R-1, and R-2 zone label for this area is considered discriminatory.

"Let the record show that you used the word 'statesmanship,' not I."

Nixon is attacking his "loser image" head on. His line of reasoning goes like this: that no one is more concerned with seeing a Republican elected president in November than he. He said that he did not enter the New Hampshire primary "lightly," that he entered only because he believes that he can win in New Hampshire, five other primaries, and the election next November. He said that he felt certain he could defeat President Johnson and emphasized that he would not have made the attempt otherwise.

Nixon said that he has told the Nixon for President committees in Wisconsin, Indiana, South Dakota, Nebraska and Oregon that he will be a candidate in the presidential primaries of those states.

Police Arrests

Janis Kalvans, 62, of 801 Main St. was charged with breach of the peace and intoxication last night after four teen-aged girls reported that a man had been following them. Kalvans was arrested at his home. He is scheduled to appear in Circuit Court at Manchester Feb. 19.

A boy with his teacher in "Testadira," a film opening the second season Sunday of "The CBS Children's Film Festival."

The two-part story deals with a man's efforts to keep his son out of school. It will be shown from 4:30 to 5:30 p.m.

Whatever Happened to That Shining Knight?

NEW YORK (AP) — They come and they go, the characters and personalities in the television commercials. And when their usefulness is over, they suddenly disappear unloved and unmourned.

Has anybody even missed the knight on his charger galloping around turning dirty clothes white with his magic spear? Or Wanda the witch who created marvelous handsoes with a touch of her wand? Or that silly dove that lived in a lady's cupboard? Gone, all gone.

Obviously none of them had fan clubs.

Sales pitches starring magic is going out of style. Just about the only example of real magic left involves that white tornado rolling up such a storm cleaning a dirty corner that the state troopers come to investigate.

Of course there is always the cartoon giant selling frozen vegetables, and now there is also an automobile commercial starring a toy-size car complete with driver which is so tiny a life-size girl picks it up and puts it down. She also establishes a roadblock by placing her compact on the pint-size highway.

There are a lot of current commercials with swiny musical backgrounds and there is a marked vogue for products used by the young crowd to use unusual camera effects. Most disconcerting, however, are the ones that bid for viewer attention by disturbing flashes of light followed by dark on the screen.

For a while this season—some still are around—there were commercials with shock value: The neighbor who grabs her friend's toothpaste and scornfully throws it away while producing a tube of new toothpaste of the same brand. Even Katy Winters, who has spent years patching up people's lives with her deodorant, has been busy urging people to throw away the old stuff and get some of her new good stuff.

Just ordinary folks—ordinary folks like none of us has ever seen—continue to discuss with passion and intensity the length and taste of assorted brands of cigarettes. One offbeat sales pitch stars a very rude, sullen fellow in dark glasses who appears much more interested in getting rid of a pushy girl than in smoking. There is also an amusing commercial—amusing, that is the first couple of times it is seen—suggesting the course of history had certain prominent characters like Washington and Franklin taken up smoking cigarettes.

Humor plays an important part in commercials these days although whether one warms to Fran's mouthwash advice to the foveform or to Mudge's clever method of manicuring nails with dishwashing liquid depends, presumably, on the individual's sense of humor. One series of cigarette commercials even takes precious air time to retell old jokes—"I feel like a ham sandwich." "you don't look like one." That, presumably, puts the viewer in a jolly receptive mood.

Generally, there seem to be more commercials these days, particularly short ones. Their tone and quality seems to improve each year. And, according to some of the research people, the viewers, resistance seems to toughen constantly under the repeated exposure.

This viewer's favorite commercial? The stomach settler starring the headless character suffering from the blahs.

Why Fred Astaire's in a TV Show

NEW YORK—"I had just finished filming 'Finian's Rainbow,' I felt like working and I had some ideas for a special," said Fred Astaire, explaining why he decided to star in his first song-and-dance television special in eight years.

The resulting program—"The Fred Astaire Show"—will be telecast on NBC Wednesday 9 to 10 p.m.

Astaire previously appeared in three award-winning specials, also on NBC-TV: "An Evening with Fred Astaire" in 1958, "Another Evening with Fred Astaire" in 1959, and "Astaire Time" in 1960.

Starring on TV was a natural step for Astaire, who had been taking natural steps just about as long as he could walk. Born in Omaha, Neb., Astaire and his sister Adele, 18 months older started dancing lessons at a local school. Soon the family moved to New York where Fred and Adele were enrolled at Ned Wayburn's Dancing Academy. As soon as they reached legal working age, the pair toured the Orpheum vaudeville circuit and made their Manhattan debut in "Fred and Adele Astaire in New Songs and Smart Dances."

Next came their first Broadway show, "Over the Top," followed by "The Passing Show," "Apple Blossoms," and "For Goodness Sake." Now hitting the big time, the Astaire's danced their way through such hits as "Lady Be Good," "Fanny Face" and "The Bandwagon."

"The Bandwagon," which was Astaire's biggest hit to date, also marked his last appearance with Adele, who left the team to marry and settle in Ireland. Fred plunged right into "The Gay Divorcee" and landed his first Hollywood offer, a featured role with Ginger Rogers in "Flying Down to Rio." While waiting for this picture to go into production, he danced his first film number in "Dancing Lady."

Returning to "Rio," Astaire joined Miss Rogers for the first of nine pictures destined to

Old 'Mr. Novak' Looks to Movies

HOLLYWOOD (NEA) — Many of Mr. Novak's former pupils—and fans—have wondered what ever happened to that brilliant young teacher. Well, James Franciscus is, as he puts it, "sticking to my guns."

This has meant a few lean years for Franciscus. He wants to be a movie actor, and it's been tough. He says he's turned down 45 offers to star in television series, because he doesn't want that. He's done three films, including three shot in Europe—one of those was "a science fiction western," which sounds like a genuine trail-blazer.

"That was good for me," Franciscus says. "People always thought of me—I hope—as a pretty good actor but fairly serious. This gave me a chance to do something different."

He also has a hand in a production company, which has turned out a television special, "Heidi," with Maximilian Schell, Michael Redgrave, Walter Slezak and a big cast, for NBC. Between that and tennis and sticking to his guns, he keeps out of serious mischief.

put them among the greatest money-making teams in screen history. When that team finally broke up, Astaire moved on to other screen partners, including Eleanor Powell, Paulette Goddard and Rita Hayworth. In 1945 he starred in "Blue Skies" with Bing Crosby and in 1947 in "Easter Parade" with Judy Garland.

Until 1969, Astaire was known primarily as a dancer, singer and light screen romancer. Then he earned recognition as a dramatic actor in "On the Beach" and as a comedian in "The Pleasure of His Company," "The Notorious Landlady" and — his latest — "Fintian's Rainbow."

Even as he was scoring with other entertainment accomplishments, Astaire moved into another entertainment medium. He starred in his first television special on NBC-TV in 1958. For his dancing partner he chose an unknown, Barrie Chase, who has appeared in each of the subsequent specials and who co-stars in the forthcoming "The Fred Astaire Show."

"She has a wonderful style and is one of the world's most beautiful movers," explained Astaire.
