Problems Created Draft Rule Hits 6,000 in State

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS The end of draft deferments for graduate students and for public employees in occupational categories previously classified as critical will create significant problems in Connecticut, an Associated Press spot check shows.

The Selective Service System ruled out Friday draft deferments on the basis of graduate studies in an exempt medical field, and suspended its list of essential activities and critical occupations.

About 6,000 of the state's 26,500 men with 113 student deferments will be affected by the order, according to Lt. Col. Emil Yerrill, chief procurement officer for the Selective Service in Connecticut.

Yale Graduate School Dean John Ferry Miller said ending draft deferments for graduate students is a step in the right direction, though it could have been done more gradually.

Graduate students, like others should be subject to the risk of induction, Miller said. "It is morally and politically right that they should serve like others," he said.

But Miller said he had hoped the full impact of the draft would not be on first and second year graduate students entirely.

Dr. Homer D. Babidge, president of the University of Connecticut, said he regarded the action as unfortunate. "It's going to make it exceedingly difficult for young men to make plans for graduate education and therefore to make plans to enter careers as college and secondary school teachers."

He said "It's time for the Congress to face up to the need for basic changes in the law." Miller said he favored a system of random selection under which all 19-year-olds would be notified whether or not they would be taken. They would then plan their futures accordingly.

University of Bridgeport President Henry J. Littlefield said Friday "it seems to me it makes more sense to let someone complete his education and then be better equipped to serve his country."

Thomas Donohue, assistant to the president of Fairfield University, said "We are somewhat concerned because Fairfield University is planning a graduate school in the near future. Principals of high schools agreed the decision would make it more difficult to find new teachers next September."

Charles P. Haben, superintendent of Norwich Free Academy, said "We have a large number of under-graduates. We hope there would be some distribution of the burden. We are not sure about the students and part on other young men."

Miller, president of the American Association of Graduate Schools, said that though he recommended putting graduate students on the same basis as other young men, "the thing we are really pushing for is a long-run solution to the draft problem."

The Coast Guard radioed a notice to the Navy and all mariners to be on the lookout for a gray whale that was wired for sound.

The American Cetacean Society had notified the Coast Guard that they had fitted out a "monitored whale" with an electronic package to help track its migration course.

The ACS — a whale watching society — said the whale was equipped to transmit a "modulated pulse" over 21.25 MHz and a "sonar ping" over 37 KHZ, and to emit a "blinking light."

When last heard from, the whale was in the neighborhood of 32-15 N. 117-43.5 W. and heading south.

Cut Your Own Taxes—14 Home Sale Transactions Must Be Accounted For

Any profit made on the sale of a home in 1967 may be subject to the adjusted sales price of your home. The adjusted sales price is more than $20,000, the part of the profit which is tax-free is the ratio between $20,000 and the adjusted sales price. This means that if you sold your home at an adjusted sales price of $30,000 and made a profit of $10,000, since $20,000 is two-thirds of the $30,000 profit, or $10,000 would be tax-free.

Sheinwold on Bridge

WHAT THEY HOLD BY ALFRED SHEINWOLD. Strange as it may seem, there are times when you must trust the opponents to indicate your best line of play. They will not go out of their way to help you, but you can rely on them to know their own cards and to do what is obviously best for their own side.

Opening lead—seven of spades. West led the queen of diamonds, continued with the ace and then led the jack of diamonds to East's king, discarding low spades from the dummy.

South discarded the king of clubs, and West played the encouraging ace. East thought briefly and then returned the eight of diamonds to South's ten.

South discarded the ten of hearts from dummy on the fourth round of diamonds and tried the heart finesse. East returned a dummy, dummy would get a free finesse. Either way, declarer would get his ninth trick.

While one battled the flames with an extinguisher, the other managed to shut off the spark. In this case, the spark was a bottle of alcohol and the extinguisher was a highly flammable substance on shelves above the burner.

Wonders of the Universe

Navigation Satellite
 By DR. I. M. LEVITZ
 Scientists concerned with the future of man are interested in the potential of our Navigation Satellite. They believe that this satellite, when fully exploited, will evolve as the most promising and exciting orbiter ever launched.

The currently operational Navy Transit navigation satellite provides a single function: position determination service for ships. The Navigation Satellite of the future will provide an array of services to all types of craft — in the air, on water or on land.

Eugene Ehrlich, National Aeronautics and Space Administration program chief for navigation and traffic control, speculates that the Navigation Satellite of the 1970-1980 era will find many new uses. He visualizes it providing craft-to-craft communications, passenger telephone service from commercial aircraft, and voice and data transmissions between ship and shore. Other uses include: a reliable solar navigation warning system, the satellite could also safeguard passengers in space transporters during solar storms.

Even a few of these applications could be used to improve the lives of people in this country for the relatively minor effort of orbiting the Navigation Satellite. The high speed of the satellite, its ability to relay information from one part of the world to another, and its ability to provide a means of communication between people in remote areas, are just a few of the many ways in which the satellite could be used to improve the lives of people in this country.

Events In Capital

U Thant, Johnson Set Meeting
 WASHINGTON (AP) — United States Secretary-General U Thant will meet with President Johnson on Monday to discuss his Vietnam peace-probe trip to India, Russia, Britain and France.

There was little optimism in Washington for a breakthrough toward peace talks and the results of U Thant's peacemaking efforts were generally described as negative in dispatches from abroad.

The Monday peace talks will continue again this Monday, and there is plenty of room for more progress. No membership or registration fee is necessary, so how about joining your friends by stopping by Monday afternoon?

White House press secretary George Christian said Friday U Thant indicated he wanted to meet with President Johnson and Secretary of State Dean Rusk in the past few days with other heads of state he has visited.

The White House appointment was set for 11 a.m. Feb. 21.

THE BIBLE SPEAKS

By Eugene Brewer
 In the midst of more than 30 denominations into which Christianity is splintered, multitudes have despaired of objective truth from error. It is reading of the book of Acts to realize that there is no possible reconciliation between a faith in the Bible and Christianity's final authority, and today's splintered state. It is the Bible that we must turn to for the answers we seek.

Youth to Face Speed Charge

An East Hartford youth was charged with speeding as to endanger the lives of the occupants of his vehicle, after he lost control of his car on Avondale Rd. yesterday, skidding across two lawns, hitting a utility pole, a tree and two bushes.

Police arrested Michael Ballou, 18, at 5:48 p.m., issuing him instructions to appear in Manchester Circuit Court 12 March 4.

According to Ballou, the chain of events began when his sedan skidded on some ice as he was making a left turn from Woodbridge St. to Avondale Rd.

The car first skidded over the curb, rolling across a lawn belonging to Charles Klotzer, 360 Woodbridge St. moving down a small bush.

From there, the car continued in a diagonal path, snapping off a utility pole at its base and sending a stream of blue sparks into the air, bouncing off a tree, flattening a large bush, and finally rolling across a second lawn, belonging to Richard Monell, 10 Avondale Rd., coming to rest after getting stuck at the edge of the road.

A nearby resident called police after noticing the flying sparks from the utility pole. Neither Ballou, nor the 16-year-old Manchester girl accompanying him, was injured in the crash.

Funeral services will be held Monday at 11 a.m. at the Benjamin J. Callahan Funeral Home, 1602 Main St., East Hartford.

The Rev. G. Albin Dahlquist of Burnside Methodist Church, East Hartford, will officiate. Burial will be in Hillside Cemetery.

Nixon Encouraged, Romney Distressed

Nixon (Continued from Page One) An audience composed largely of students at the University of New Hampshire broke in on him with applause when he said the sanitation workers in New York City had broken the law by striking and "cannot and must not be rewarded by giving those who break the law what they are asking for."

Nixon quickly picked up another development in the news, the dispatch of more jet planes to South Korea.

He issued a statement in Nashua which said in part: "The best way to avoid war is to use power, swiftly and persuasively, to prevent it. This is the way President Eisenhower avoided war in the Middle East with his dispatch of troops to Lebanon."

Eisenhower ordered the Marines into Lebanon in 1958 when its government requested help against an armed rebellion, apparently fomented outside the country.

"This same principle underlies the successful effort to forestall Chinese Communist assaults on the island outposts of Quemoy and Matsu," Nixon said. "This is how peace was kept during the eight years of the Eisenhower administration."

During that crisis, Eisenhower obtained from Congress the so-called "Formosa Resolution," authorizing him to use American forces, if necessary, to help defend Formosa and the Chinese Nationalist government.

Nixon says he is running hard, and will step up the pace. His chief GOP opponent is Michigan's Gov. George Romney. Nixon is running ahead. Romney's aides concede.

However, soundings of opinion taken by Nixon's staff show two unknown factors in the equation—the potential size of the support for Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller of New York, who supports Romney, and the number of the voters now classed as "undecided."

A poll indicated that if most of Rockefeller's backers vote for Romney, "it could be a close horse race," as a Nixon aide put it.

The survey reported "an unusually large number" of people said they were "undecided," especially among women questioned. It attributed this to the hard line Nixon has taken on prosecuting the war in Vietnam and said women's attitudes were considered "more dovish."

Nixon planned to return to New Hampshire next Tuesday. His schedule calls for several days' campaigning in Wisconsin, which holds its presidential primary April 2, during the coming week.

Tolland McCarthy Backer Sees Drive Building Democrat Party

The Connecticut McCarthy for President Committee organization is restricted solely to registered Democrats and is strengthening and building the Democratic party, according to Gerald Anderson, chairman of the McCarthy for President Committee in the 2nd Congressional District.

Anderson spoke last night to an audience of about 50 persons attending an open meeting of the Democratic Town Committee. The meeting was the first of a planned educational election series.

The McCarthy Committee is building the Democratic party by increasing efforts to gain new registrations and to enroll Democrats from the Independent lists, according to Anderson.

The actions of Senator Eugene McCarthy's supporters in Andover, where Anderson lives, have helped the local party, he said. He did not advocate primary contests for convention delegates or to ascertain the amount of McCarthy support in a given town.

The senator's chances rest in the expression of the delegates attending the state convention. A town can reflect its sentiments by the selection of delegates or to ascertain the amount of McCarthy support in a given town.

"Senator McCarthy is not a one issue candidate," Anderson declared. "We could not support him if he were."

"Most issues of today are colored by the Vietnam war, and many of these problems are deeply rooted in the present administration," he stated.

Anderson described the attitudes of political leaders throughout the area as "ambiguous." "The higher up you go in the leadership, the more sympathy you get, but the less support."

"We are mortgaging our futures to support the Vietnam War," he said. "The war exerts our strength, has broken down our alliances. It has hurt our security by weakening our commitments of security elsewhere."

"The war is not fought with money from the poor but rather from the average American. The poor pay a painful price in the reduction of Head Start and other poverty programs. The cultural costs of the war are the steepest, we are not building new and better cities or meeting the urban crisis," Anderson added.

"A healthy Hartford is an asset to this area," he explained. "The entire federal education budget is equivalent to the cost of two weeks of war in Vietnam. The entire welfare and federal social programs equal the approximate monthly increase in the Vietnam War budget."

The crime in the streets is mainly a reflection of a cry from people met with injustice, and will not be alleviated until social problems receive attention," he predicted.

McCarthy's approach to government consists of meeting these problems, many of which are inherent to the present Johnson administration, according to the McCarthy leader.

His Travel Restriction Government sponsored restrictions on private individual's travel in foreign countries, and business investments overseas cannot significantly cure the balance of payments deficit, he maintained.

The prime contributor to the balance of payments deficit is the federal government in its support of the Vietnam War, which is presently running at a $10 billion deficit, Anderson stated.

Tourism strengthens world relations, through an enlightened public, the foreign investments bring in a $1.7 billion profit to the United States, the balance of trade results in a $4.5 billion profit to the country, according to Anderson. Combined however, they cannot make up for the government's war deficit abroad, he maintained. "Resolutions cannot cure the problem."

Reaction to Anderson's talk among those attending last night was mixed. Several people maintained the conservative element in congress would have defeated any further social reforms evoked with oil.

Both "hawks" and "doves" were apparent among the local town committee membership.

'Bonanza' Quiet, Audience Steady

NEW YORK (AP)—"Bonanza," the NBC Western that gallops along smartly at the head of the television pack, is a series that doesn't cause much excited morning-after talk, but the folks keep tuning it in, year after year.

The most recent episode was a good example of the series' shrewd style. There was the important emphasis on a story that could be played as a period costume drama or a contemporary tale with nothing more than a few changes of sets and references. There was a bit of gun-slinging, some fist-waving—all familiar background of the legendary Wild West. And there was that nice Cartwright family, always on the side of law, order, country and motherhood.

The work of the series is spread among the three stars of the show. Sunday night's episode belonged to Lorne Greene, the white-haired daddy of the clan.

The difficulty was salt. All the ranchers were losing their stock because the cattle had no salt. And they had no salt because the salt dealer had died and his niece, a city girl with funny ideas about making money, planned to hold out for the highest bidder.

Then a nasty rancher wanted to pay an enormous price for all the salt. But at the last minute, good Ben Cartwright outbid him on behalf of all the ranchers. Then followed the inevitable shoot-out in which the nasty rancher was, of course, killed. And so was the man the city girl loved.

The lesson in all this was about greed and a demonstration that money doesn't necessarily bring happiness or love.

It is a soothing show to watch. It is predictable and right always prevails. The most that ever happens to the Cartwrights is that they are occasionally winged by a bullet.

Too Busy to Mark His 39th

NEW YORK (AP) — The world's oldest 39-year-old man—or perhaps its youngest 74-year-old—had a birthday Wednesday, but he was much too busy to pay much attention to it.

"I say I'm 39," said Jack Benny with mock severity. "And anything else you want to guess is entirely up to you."

Jack was stopping over briefly in New York, en route from a concert with the Boston Symphony to a night club date in Miami. He will be one of the guest stars next Sunday in an NBC special saluting his homestate of Illinois, and he recently finished shooting a special comedy program to be shown on March 20, also on NBC. He is now busy polishing up some material for use during a four-week engagement in April at New York's Waldorf Astoria.

Even after a half century in show business, he still prefers the tensions and excitements of the theater.

"A few years ago when we were doing the television series we had a show in which I was finally going to celebrate my 40th birthday," Jack recalled. "Before we got it on the air, we started getting all sorts of mail and there were even editorials in important newspapers, all asking me not to do it. They said that 39 had become a symbol of youth and determination for many people, and they wanted me to stay 39."

"Well, it was too late to drop the show, so we went ahead and showed it. But then we dropped it, forgot it and I went back to being 39."

Benny wears his calendar years lightly. He maintains his enthusiasm for his musical and for playing in concerts. He practices the violin for a couple of hours daily, even when he is away from his Los Angeles home. And he works constantly over his comedy material.

Jack discussed the current use of controversial topical material and the injection of risque material into comedy routines.

He is the acknowledged master of timing, and his own style is built around the stingy, vain and somehow lovable character he has been playing for more than 30 years.

"I've never gotten laughs by zinging anybody else," he said. "There is a rapport with an audience, and you've always got to be careful not to spoil it. With an audience it is important to be especially careful with the first couple of jokes. Hope has his way, and I have mine, which is usually getting into things by explaining why I happen to be on stage or why I'm doing a TV special."

"It's a strange thing about risque material," he continued. "Occasionally there may be something that might be considered risque in material I might use in a night club—never on TV, of course. But critics are always writing about how clean my material is. I've got a hospital thing that I do that certainly might be considered risque, except that when I'm talking, it is about how much all these things cost, and everything else seems to slip by unnoticed."

Benny, in his only special of the year, will share honors with Lucille Ball, Johnny Carson and "a cute singing group that you have to put in shows these days for the kids in the audience."

New Season Around Corner

NEW YORK (AP) — Network television has just passed the midseason mark as far as the viewers are concerned. But the way the industry itself looks at it, the new season and next September—when it starts—are just around the corner.

All three networks are now busy working over their current schedules, renewing some shows, moving others to new time periods and canceling still others. CBS is expected to announce its 1968-69 schedule within the next few days and NBC and ABC will not be far behind. They can't be because the business of locking in a schedule automatically releases network salesmen to sell the program wares to sponsors.

The fate of a number of series, particularly series that came in third in their time period in the biweekly Nielsen numbers race, is in the balance. There is a question whether a number of programs including "Run For Your Life," and "Lost in Space" will survive.

This brings up an interesting question. Will the producers of the canceled series just let them disappear quietly at the end of summer reruns? Or will some of them follow the example of last season's "The Fugitive" and wind them up with style?

What about brave Paul Bryan who has been cramming an adventurous life into a short period because he has been given only a short time to live? Will the "Run For Your Life" producers drop the other shoe and have Paul succumb to that mysterious ailment in the final show? Or will he be informed that the doctors read the wrong X-rays and it was all a mistake, or that a cure has been discovered.

If "Lost in Space" is dropped, will the viewers see that space family Robinson returned to earth or will they be left universe hopping in the galaxy, forgotten by the fans that vicariously lived through their adventures, loved that robot and hated the sneaky Dr. Smith.

It is, of course, probable that the practical minds will prevail, and series will depart as they almost always have—without advance warning, without farewells. After all, there is always a chance that a television emergency will turn up and old programs will be returned to service. This has rarely if ever occurred, but hope springs eternal in the breasts of TV producers.

'I Spy': (Yawn)

NEW YORK (AP) — There is something curious about the way last season's television hit suddenly turns into this season's great big yawn.

The distinctive style that made the show seem so fresh and novel suddenly seems as phony as a three dollar toupee after constant exposure for perhaps a year, maybe longer.

Some wear and tear is inevitable. It is impossible for the fans who tune in weekly about 30 times a year to ignore the devices used, or to fail to see plot bones as clearly as if shown in an X-ray.

Perhaps NBC's "I Spy" which started out three seasons back with a crisp, funny and new approach to the secret agent business, has been trapped by its own jauntiness.

In a recent episode, Robert Culp and Bill Cosby were their usual fun-loving selves even though hunting a killer, constantly ducking bullets and under arrest for murder. Somehow, the old charm is lacking. After getting accustomed to their frolicsome dialogue over the seasons, it has suddenly become less amusing and more artificial. Maybe the actors are getting a bit weary of their roles, too.

What started two seasons ago as a campy put-on called "Batman", today has become a self-consciously cute bore. The pretentious use of the cliché, once so droll, begins to be an irritant once a point of surfeit is reached. The result is that "Batman" has dropped in the ratings and its producer announced recently that it will be among the missing on ABC next season.

"Dragnet" is still another program more notable for its distinctive style than for the content of its stories. And, after a time, that style can make the viewer downright restless.

Discovery Not Spoiled

NEW YORK (NEA) — One of the season's big discoveries is Henry Darrow, the dashing young Mexican of NBC's "The High Chaparral." With all the excitement he's caused, you might forgive him if he'd gone Hollywood. He hasn't. Far from it.

He just sold his old car — a '55 Chevy — to a friend for $1 and bought himself a used '63 Rambler convertible. He and Lucy — his wife — are still living in the $15,000 house they bought eight years ago. It's a nice little house, and they can measure every improvement in terms of the jobs that enabled them to do it.

"We have an Iron Horse rug," he says "because we could buy a rug when I did an Iron Horse episode. We have a 36-weeks-at-the-Pasadena-Playhouse master bedroom addition. We have three episodes of The High-Chaparral wgt of furniture.

"If the series is renewed, I may have my teeth capped."

With his first paycheck from The High Chaparral, he bought a color television set so he could watch his show in color.

As to the rumors of his show going 90 minutes, Darrow has heard them but he isn't too keen about the idea.

"Most of The Virginian and Cimarron Strips I've seen," he says, "wind up being stretched to make them 90 minutes — you see a guy taking things out of a wagon for two minutes to pad it out."

'DEBBIE' ON MARCH 7

"... And Debbie Makes Six," an ABC program starring Debbie Reynolds, will be televised on March 7. The program was to be televised several months ago but was postponed at the last moment. The other five are Bob Hope, Bobby Darin, Donald O'Connor, Frank Gorshin and Jim Nabors.
