Rockefeller Offers Plan for Viet Peace

NEW YORK (AP)—Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller today proposed a four-stage peace plan for Vietnam that he said could end the hostilities there in six months if steps to implement it were taken immediately. Basically, he proposed a gradual withdrawal of military forces by both sides, a neutral international buffer force, and free elections in which the Viet Cong could participate if it "renounces force."

'Today': As Dull As Yesterday?

By LAWRENCE LAURENT The Washington Post WASHINGTON — President Johnson, Secretary of State Dean Rusk and Danny Kaye are among the eight million Americans "who often start the day with the 'Today' Show," proclaims a press release from the National Broadcasting Co. If this is true, some high level discontent must be apparent for the recent direction of this 16-year-old program.

"Today" remains, basically, what broadcasters like to call "a service show." Its basic ingredients are headline news reports, details of the official U.S. Weather Bureau forecast, interviews with persons who have books, movies or plays to sell and an appalling number of commercials.

But somewhere along the way in the past year the magic went out of this program. It has become tediously dull, monotonous and anchored by three of the most colorless, bland individuals in television.

The programs have come an incredible, downhill, distance from the provocative, informative sessions that gave this show its reputation. Dave Garroway, in the beginning, had to put up with F. Fred Muggs, a chimpanzee. This didn't stop Garroway — surely one of the best informed men ever to enter TV — from engaging in lively controversy. Later, newsman John Chancellor used his training to bring unexpected, rewarding remarks from public office holders.

Hugh Downs, on the other hand, is concerned with tidbits of information that sound as though they were culled out of those one sentence items newspapers used to call "fillers." His depth is concerned with such vital topics as sailing or navigation.

The Reasons for Downs' listlessness in recent months became execusable earlier this month when he left for a month of medical leave.

Three years ago, he suffered a herniated disc in the neck, which caused him to wear an uncomfortable orthopedic collar. Surgery was required at the Neurological Institute of Columbia Presbyterian Hospital in New York.

In the storied past of "Today," one could often find Martin Agronsky, broadcasting's best digging reporter, doing interviews. But Martin moved to CBS News, where he has unfortunately been wasted and chained to the Sunday mid-day period with "Face the Nation."

The move of Agronsky to CBS left "Today" without the excitement and incisiveness that went with Martin's determined probing of the reticent public official. No replacement has been satisfactory, although most reporters appear determined to match downs' momogenized blandness.

Then there's the addition of Joe Garagiola, who came into broadcasting as a most amusing fellow and who promptly ran out of material. By now, most viewers have heard, a dozen times, the jokes that he compiled for "baseball is a funny game." He's usually excused, however. Professional comedians excuse Joe for his failings by saying he's "a former ballplayer."

Baseball players, conversely, make excuses for Garagiola "because he's really a comedian." One group — comics or ballplayers — ought to step up, manfully, and take the blame.

As the bland have continued to lead the bland on "Today," producer Al Morgan decided that what early morning viewers need most desperately is frustration. He supplied this by the irregular scheduling of two hours devoted to one subject or one individual.

This was done despite NBC's own research indicating that viewers are constantly tuning out as they finish breakfast and head for work. When two hours is spent on one subject, no viewer ever gets to see the entire program.

Julie London sets the mood for a song on "Showtime," televised Tuesday 8:30 to 9:30 p.m. on CBS.

The viewer gets tidbits and is unable to begin his day in the most rotten possible mood.

Adding to the viewers' problems is the "Today" show's computer-controlled timing. Conversations get cut off in mid-syllable because at that split-second, the program must be returned to the affiliated station for another rehash of news headlines. Quite often, when the

Trying To Sell 'Soul'

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — NBC is spending a few hundred thousand dollars on the proposition that advertisers and audiences would support a weekly television variety show enacted entirely by Negroes.

Last week the pilot film of "Soul," a one-hour musical with Lou Rawls, Nipsey Russel, Reid Fox, Chambers Brothers, George Kirby and others was taped at the NBC Burbank studios. No one would say what the cost was, but comparable specials cost $300,000 or more.

The show is aimed for presentation as a special, possibly this lead to a weekly series during the January self-session switch in programming. That was the history of last season's biggest hit, "Laugh-In." It is no coincidence that "Soul" is being presented by the "Laugh-In" mentors, Producer George Schlatter and his partner, Ed Friendly, and the writer-creator of the show, Digby Wolfe.

All three were hovering protectively around the "Soul" taping. They watched as the leading performers enacted a barbershop scene in which comments were made on the racial scene.

Samples:

"I hear they're going to move a colored family into 'Peyton Place.'"

"No kidding! What color?" "Soon's we move in, maybe all those crazy folks will move out!"

"I'm waiting for them to put one of us on the King Family." Schlatter and Wolfe discussed the origins of "Soul."

"It happened on the night of the Emmies," said Schlatter ("Laugh-In" walked off with four awards that night). "It was one of the great coincidences of all time. I told Digby that I had just gotten approval that day to go ahead with an all-Negro musical hour aimed for a weekly series."

"And I told George that just that day we had received approval from the Writers Guild to admit three Negro writers for the purpose of working on just such a show," said Wolfe. "These were people from the Watts Writers Workshop, where I had been working for some time, and the discussions about the show had been going on for a year."

Enlisted for the project were (See Page Four)

William Demarest: Old Days

By WILLIAM DEMAREST EDITOR'S NOTE—William Demarest has been in the movie business for a long time—but as long as his own estimate—and has become a familiar face on the late, late shows as well as in his continuing character of Uncle Charles in CBS' "My Three Sons," which he assumed when the late William Frawley became ill. And the lady known as "Diamond Lil" started it all, and until now, never knew it.

HOLLYWOOD (AP)—Looking back on my 753 years in show business, I guess I would have to credit Mae West for getting me into films—although she'd never heard of me at the time. It was a long, long time ago—well before there was such a thing as television.

There I was in Chicago about 25 years ago starring in my own one-hour stage revue at the Palace Theater. Spyros Skouras, the movie magnate who at that time was the head of a chain of theaters in St. Louis, came backstage one night and offered me $5,000 to take my act into one of his theaters after I had closed in Chicago. Need I say I accepted?

When I showed up at the theater in St. Louis on the appointed day, I noticed a long line outside the box office waiting to buy tickets, and I thought, "Oh great, I'm doing fine business!" So, feeling good, I went backstage, and the stage manager said absentmindedly, "Oh, yeah, Demarest—you got 11 minutes." Before I could find out what was going on, he walked off, no one backstage told me anything else—just, "Yeah, Demarest—11 minutes."

By then I was pretty sore at this kind of casual reception, so I stormed into the manager's office to tell him who I was and demand to know what was going on. He said, "Oh, yeah, Demarest—you have 11 minutes." I couldn't believe what was happening. I walked outside to check the billing on the marquee to make sure I was in the right place. I noticed that the line for tickets was now half-way down the next block. I looked up at the marquee and all it said was "Mae West in 'She Done Him Wrong.'"

So I went back to the manager to find out what in the name of grease paint was happening. He explained as patiently as he could that the Mae West film was doing such great business that they needed me only long enough to clear the house for the next screening.

So I paid off the rest of my actors, and I was up on stage by myself trying to entertain half a house that is preparing to leave after seeing the Mae West picture and half a house that is just coming in to see the film. My first line was "I'm just up here to pass the time while they're winding up Mae West."

After a couple of performances, my act was cut to three minutes, so they would be able to squeeze in an extra showing of the movie. It was depressing.

I figured then and there that if that's what films were going to be doing vaudeville, I'd have to be nuts to stay on the stage.

I quit the stage once and for all after that engagement and headed for Hollywood—and Paramount—the very same studio that had made the Mae West picture. If you can't beat 'em, join 'em.

I didn't know Mae West and she didn't know me, but she opened an entirely new world for me and I've been in it ever since.

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Where do the Monkees go next—or do you care?

There are a few million teenagers and subteenagers who maintain an intense concern about the clutch of singing idols who starred on the NBC network for two seasons.

The foursome made a distinct impression on the younger set and even on the more mature voters of the Academy of Television Arts and Sciences who named "The Monkees" the best comedy show of the 1968-67 season.

To many critics, the zany half-hour seemed nothing more or less than a carbon copy of the Beatles movies. But imitation is no drawback to television success, and "The Monkees" prevailed in their first season. The second year was less successful, and the show will not be back in 1968-69.

What happened? "The second season was just the first season rehashed," explained chief Monkee, Mike Nesmith. "We felt that we had become more proficient, but we were only give the same stuff to do.

"Most people thought that we were canceled. The fact is that we told NBC that we didn't want to do the same old thing. And so the series came to an end. I can't really say that I'm sorry."

Financially, the demise of the series is a good thing, said Nesmith, a tall, intense 25-year-old. He pointed out that he and his mates were earning a fast $1,250 per segment of the series, a mere pittance of what they can collect elsewhere. Such are the rewards of instant fame that the lads made between four and five million dollars last year.

Nesmith himself collected about $2½ million since he originated much of the musical material used by the Monkees on their shows and albums. The returns will come to him in future years because of deferred payments, hence his fortune looks secure.

But he is concerned about the future, and has sunk $75,000 of his own money into a non-Monkees record album called "The Wichita Train Whistle Sings." The Dot album is getting a good play and it appears that the Nesmith investment is going to pay off.

His single venture doesn't mean that he is cutting out from the Monkees. But he is realistic about the future of the team.

"In terms of now," the Monkees are just about over," he commented. "By that I mean what we had just about done everything they would allow us to do on the series. There was nowhere else we could go.

"But I think the feature movie we just finished—we still don't have a title for it—will open up whole new avenues for us. I think that is where our future lies: in features and in television specials—we are signing with NBC for two next season."
