The Hecklers

Vice President Humphrey is finding the campaign trail rough and bolderous.

The official Chinese Communist press agency delights in the fact that he is being heckled and booed in New York and Los Angeles.

Governor Reagan of California thinks that the young tough who led the heckling of Humphrey in Los Angeles, and prevented him from completing his speech, there, are "monsters" who have a "disquieting similarity" to the Hitler Youth and Stormtroopers who silenced the last voice of democracy in between-the-wars Germany.

But Vice President Humphrey himself, when confronted with boing and heckling which interferes with his right to speak and campaign, keeps a fortitudinous smile on his face, proclaims his intention of keeping on, no matter what the odds or dangers, and, repeating an appealing, previously little speech, he has worked up on the subject of not being allowed to speak in such remarks, he defends the ideal of an America in which people can hold different views without denying the freedom of the platform to anybody. He assumes, the Vice President, that those who heckle him ought to be interested in a fair debate between their own views and what he, the Vice President, would present as his own.

There is, we think, and now for Vice President Humphrey and anybody else who assumes that the rebels, revolutionists, dissenters, and anarchists of our time are interested in establishing any kind of dialogue with those members of the older order, like the Vice President, are willing to proclaim how broad-minded they are.

To many of these revolutionists, "broad-mindedness" is nothing more than a farce used by the old system to try to cling to its franchise. They do not honor the representatives of the old, but having minds that are open and tolerant; they do not aim to defeat in broad-minded ways themselves, but do not really want to discuss or debate anything. To them, the civilized niceties, tolerances and restraints of Vice President Humphrey's America are merely hypocrites of pose designed to go along with and provide cover for the hypocrisy of act and policy they read into the career of a durable second rate politician like Humphrey. In fact, that is not always ingratiating character becomes a little pitiful, and evokes a little sympathy, as he clings to the supposition that there is still some faint possibility of establishing a communication with his hecklers. They are not, these hecklers, of his time, or of his assumptions, or of his America. They say they demand something finer, true to itself, less given to pleasant self-deception, more strong and ruthless in facing the need to do things that have never been done before.

One is almost forced to agree with them, in their rough judgment that the politician as usual does not even deserve their time. Indeed, why should we listen to candidates when we can know before hand, as if by heart, the evasions and inadequacies they are going to repeat?

But after one goes that far with the hecklers, one comes up against the uncomfortable question of what one might expect from them. Mr. Humphrey, and others in power as part of the establishment, at least go through a pretense of conceding all the rest of us the right to speak and debate and hold views of our own. But we have a feeling that if the hecklers ever got power they would be telling it to us like it is, man, and that would be it. How do these hecklers guarantee us that what they would themselves impose upon us, they succeeded in their quest for power, would not make even the world of Humphrey and Nixon seem beautiful for its freedom and variety of choice?

The Source Of His Troubles

If Justice Abe Fortas is in special trouble with regard to his nomination to be Chief Justice — and our reading would be that he now is in some trouble — that trouble can be traced quite directly to the very gentleman who, quite obviously, wishes his friend Abe Fortas only the best.

Justice Fortas has been weakened by three developments during the hearings conducted by the Senate Judiciary Committee.

One of these was the disclosure that he had been serving in a consultative and advisory capacity to President Johnson in the White House, on the issues of Vietnam and racial disturbances, after his appointment to the Supreme Court.

The second was the disclosure that, in a particularly unpleasant extension of such a role, he had, apparently in response to urging from the President, called up and remonstrated with a mutual friend who had been guilty of the heresy of making a public speech in which he seemed something less than enthusiastic about the costs of the war in Vietnam.

The third development injurious to Justice Fortas was the appearance on the scene of an ornate document prepared by the Department of Justice, which happens to be the official government agency which practices before the Supreme Court, of a memorandum to the Senate Committee, setting forth the unusual qualifications of Justice Fortas to be Chief Justice.

The preparation and presentation of such a document, unusual in itself and of questionable propriety, will be blamed, rightly or wrongly, not on Attorney General Clark, but on that man in the White House.

The President will also be credited with responsibility for all that is reported happening on another front — the use of the President's powers to appoint other federal judges to try to sway votes in the Senate.

Conceivably, then, the one individual who has done most to make the confirmation of Justice Fortas now a doubtful thing is the same individual who, out of his career-long friendship and association and respect and esteem, gave him the appointment in the first place.

Other members of the Supreme Court have played improper policy games with the President in the White House. And other men in the White House have used elemental pressure tactics in the effort to have their way with Congress.

Inside Report

By Rowland Evans Jr. Robert D. Novak

WASHINGTON — When Sen. Charles H. Percy of Illinois telephoned Richard M. Nixon last Thursday afternoon (July 26) with advance warning that he was endorsing Gov. Nelson Rockefeller, Nixon was uncharacteristically brusque to the point of discourtesy. He greeted the unwelcome news with a grunt rather than any comment, then abruptly broke off the telephone connection. That was followed with public implications from Herb Klein, Nixon's press secretary and political intimate, that Percy had been rejected by Nixon for Vice President and now had been accepted by Rockefeller. Taking their cue from Klein, Nixon's supporters in Illinois immediately visited a shower of vituperation on Percy's Washington office. William Rentaucher, Nixon's Illinois campaign manager, telephoned to charge that Percy had betrayed Nixon. Such reaction reflects the super-sensitivity of the Nixon high command to signs of erosion in his big lead for the nomination. Although Percy will be joined by no more than eight other Illinois delegates (out of 58) in backing Rockefeller, his surprise endorsement abets the stop-Nixon campaign's war of nerves. Moreover, the antagonistic response from Nixon definitely gives the lie to press speculation that Percy's endorsement was a gambit to make himself more desirable as a Nixon running-mate. In fact, two top Nixon aides — John Mitchell and Robert Ellsworth — had visited Percy's office within the last two weeks asking his endorsement. Ellsworth asked Percy to join a group of leading Republicans traveling about the country supporting Nixon. When Percy responded that would require an endorsement of Nixon, Ellsworth said that was the very idea he had in mind, Percy declined. During these overtures, the Vice Presidency was never discussed contrary to hints placed by Nixon men in Illinois. When they last met in Chicago a month ago, Nixon gingerly raised the subject by asking Percy what they ought to say to the press when asked about the Vice Presidency. Percy quickly closed the subject by saying that they should report

A Thought for Today

Sponsored by the Manchester Council of Churches Yesterday, you said we had to risk. Right. But, do you know what that meant? Well, we're a Church. The First Church of Jesus-Christ-on-the-Cliff-by-the-Sea, and you're suggesting that we get out there and compete for the lives of all those people. That's right. And you're afraid to compete, afraid of winning or losing. If you succeed you have to give up your power. If you fail, the church is a little old doll who doesn't play with power. Is it really? But, if we're people, we're already here for God's glory. Rev. Felix M. Davis, 2nd Congregational Church.

THE WALLACE BOOM BOOM

Connecticut Yankee

By A.H.O.

A distinguished new citizen's organization, being summoned together to help all to the general Connecticut public some of the forthcoming program of modification for the Connecticut General Assembly, has got itself into a bit of a predicament by attacking the newspapers who write about the Connecticut Legislature.

The crime attributed to these newspapers is that of engaging in destructive rather than constructive criticism, instead of being ever ready to attack any proposal for increasing the salaries or improving the lot of the Legislators.

When an entire profession is put under such blanket charges, it behooves one proceeding member to come forward and confess his own particular share of the guilt.

Our crime is not that we have concentrated very severely upon the very cheap games played by some members of the Connecticut Legislature. There have been some rather rare sparks on the Connecticut Legislature during the years we have been covering it. They have worn their caplets on their foreheads as they were willing to sell themselves to any bidder. Some of the cheap and least modest of them as a part of the political scene, always to be with us.

Where we have got ourselves into trouble is not through criticism of the petty whims of the General Assembly, but through our difference of opinion with its volunteer editors.

The simplest way to eat them is to pick the slender spines up in the fingers and nibble the soda from the tough stalk. This wry cone is inedible.

Most people like catcall bloom spines if they do not have their carefully taught food prejudices to get in the way of their enjoyment of them. Especially when new flavor sensations require an open mind but can bring many pleasant surprises.

Many other parts of the catcall furnish excellent food. The roots, the bulblike sprouts found on the leading ends of the roots, the tender inside leaves of young plants, and even the bright yellow pollen are quite palatable and nutritious.

To primitive man the seeds of the sweet acorn, the wild nut, the chestnut, the edible wild plants described above are not at all unpleasant eaters. Even the bitter acorns will lose their bitterness after two hours, changing the name to chestnut.

There are many excellent books on the subject in a wide range. Two inexpensive but completely reliable guides are "The Mushroom Handbook" by Louis C. Krieger, and "The Mushroom Book" by Vera K. Charles titled "Some Common Mushrooms" which can be obtained from the Superintendent of Documents, Washington, D. C., for thirty-five cents.

The edible wild plants described above are only a few of nature's bountiful offerings for those who have the courage to try them. For those to whom the wild taste is new, the wild plants are a most interesting and nutritious part of the diet. Summer vacation time means "getting away from it all" for several weeks. This can be anything from a trip across the country to just sitting on the back porch. Every year, more and more families are discovering the joys of camping and are loading the car with camp gear and taking off for the peace and quiet of the woods. A wood-

Everywhere are new wonders on which to feast your eyes. The only reliable rule to follow is never to eat any mushroom that has not been positively identified as an edible species. However, there are hundreds of known edible species. A few of these are so delicate in flavor that they make delicious eating. A knowledge of wild food gathering can be added to your camping trip by promoting a real feeling of kinship to our pioneering ancestors who survived often depending on the bounty of the woods, fields and streams.

For the number of different kinds of food it produces, there is no plant, wild or domesticated, which tops the common cattail. The green bloom spikes, gathered before the yellow pollen shows on the outside, and boiled only a few minutes in added water, makes one of the finest vegetables that can be collected in the wild. Cut the young spikes just about the time they are ready to break through the papery sheath which encloses them. This sheath must be removed like husking corn, and, like sweet, sweet corn, the spikes are best when cooked soon after gathering. The boiled spikes should be liberally dressed with melted butter for they tend to be somewhat dry and granular in texture.

The simplest way to eat them is to pick the slender spines up in the fingers and nibble the soda from the tough stalk. This wry cone is inedible.

Czech Talks End, Brezhnev Said Ill

PRAGUE (AP)—Leonid I. Brezhnev, secretary general of the Soviet Communist party, became ill and the history-making show-down talks between Soviet and Czechoslovak leaders on the fate of the country's liberal course ended late today, reliable sources reported. The conference was reported to have ended shortly after 4 p.m. The informant said Brezhnev, head of the Soviet delegation at the three-day meeting, did not attend today's session at the border town of Cerna. The Czechoslovak party chief, Alexander Dubcek, visited Brezhnev aboard the Soviet special train at Cerna during a lunch break. There was no immediate word whether the illness had forced a premature end to the talks. They had been generally expected to wind up late this afternoon.

The nature of Brezhnev's illness could not be learned immediately. He is thought to be recovering in a hospital in Prague. A report reaching Vienna, capital of neighboring Austria, said Brezhnev had suffered from a "promising course." Both the Soviet and Czechoslovak delegations took a walk through Cerna during the lunch break and received flowers from the local population. Soviet premier Alexei N. Kosygin picked up a small boy and chatted animatedly with him, the sources reported. Cerna, where the meeting opened Monday, was closed to Western newsmen.

Pope Appeals to Catholics To Accept Birth Control Ban

CASTEL GANDOLFO, Italy (AP)—Pope Paul VI, facing the possibility of widespread rejection of his ban on mechanical and chemical methods of birth control, appealed to Roman Catholic couples today to understand and accept his prohibition. In his first comment since his encyclical Humanae Vitae—Of Human Life—was issued Monday, the 70-year-old pontiff of the Roman Catholic Church said in a statement he knew his decision not to modify the church's traditional policy would bring anguish to millions. The statement, issued before the Pope's weekly general audience at his summer residence 15 miles south of Rome, said: "The knowledge of our grave responsibility caused us no small suffering. We well know the anguish of those touched in the problem touched us also. We studied and read all the proposals that we received. And we sought in prayer the aid of the Holy Spirit in interpreting the divine law which flows from the inner needs of human love, from the essential structure of marriage, from the personal dignity of the spouses and from the personal dignity of the human life."

Following Record Contract Steel Prices Increased By Two Industry Giants

PITTSBURGH (AP)—The nation's 450,000 steelworkers' wages and benefits hikes of 90 cents to a dollar an hour. The overall package was figured to be a 6.5 per cent increase in each year of the three-year contract. The industry had insisted all along that it could not stand a 6 per cent contract without price relief. Otherwise, industry spokesmen said, two thirds of the industry's profits would be wiped out and some companies would be put out of business. "The price increases," Bethlehem Steel said, "are expected to add only enough to revenues to offset cost increases just incurred or expected in the next several months." "Selective price increases have not been effective in offsetting smaller cost increases than those now facing Bethlehem. A general price increase is the only method available to alleviate the financial problem which would otherwise occur in the future."

Mexico City Youth Riots Continue

MEXICO CITY (AP)—Mexico City was a battle ground again Tuesday as mobs of young people ransacked the city, fighting police, wrecking city buses and throwing rocks and bottles. At least one person was dead, more than 400 were injured and at least 1,100 persons had been arrested since anti-government rioting began last Friday. Officials claimed the riots were Communist inspired and said they were the worst Mexico's capital has experienced in 20 years. Tuesday night club-wielding students braved a heavy rain and hijacked four city buses after forcing terrified passengers to flee. Then they ran the vehicles into the sides of buildings. Army troops fired volleys of shots into the air and dispersed the students. The troops were withdrawn but the mobs returned, marching from the old university section, and set the buses near the city's central square. Riot squads swinging long batons dispersed the crowd, but at least 3,000 of the youths gathered half a mile away near a teacher's college. Their leaders used bugle calls and walkie-talkies to control them. They swarmed over buses and a troop car, smashing windows and running the vehicles onto the sidewalks. At one point all four intersections around the park in front of the school were blocked by the wrecked buses. Two hundreds of riot police sped to the scene. The students fled and the police were again withdrawn. The violence mainly involved prep school students from 14 to 20 years. (See Page Sixteen)

Nixon Strategists Favoring Try for First Ballot Win

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP)—Richard M. Nixon's top strategists now favor a risky, all-out attempt to win the Republican presidential nomination on the first ballot when the GOP convention votes one week from today. The former vice president will make the final decision himself early next week on whether to attempt to grab off the nomination at the first chance or play it cool for a second ballot opportunity. He will lean heavily in this decision on the advice of his campaign manager, John N. Mitchell, and Richard Kleindienst, Robert Ellsworth, R. J. Haldeeman, and Herbert G. Klein, his press director. The arguments against this pull forth by the Nixon advisers were simple: No contender would be so sure of his victory as to attempt to win on the first ballot. Nixon's strategy was to win on the first ballot. Nixon's strategy was to win on the first ballot. Nixon's strategy was to win on the first ballot.

Steel Prices Increased By Two Industry Giants

The increase in production of the industry's two giants on a tonnage of 8.4 million tons of the industry's output was figured to be a 6.5 per cent increase in each year of the three-year contract. Otherwise, industry spokesmen said, two thirds of the industry's profits would be wiped out and some companies would be put out of business. South Vietnam Economy Shifts

By LEE LESCAZE The Washington Post SAIGON—"A lot of things have happened to make this economy more aesthetically pleasing for a country at war," an American official said here. "It's not the old wartime boom economy." Vietnamese are no longer rushing to buy luxury goods like television sets, motorcycles, refrigerators and air conditioners with platters carried in the streets of the city. South Vietnam's economy has switched from a wartime boom to a more conservative, steady state. The United States and Saigon governments were impatient to absorb the country's surplus of consumer goods in increasing volume 18 months ago to absorb currency and check inflation. Now, Vietnamese are not buying imports, are not making new investments, and are keeping their platters in their pockets. "The people are saving their money for a rainy day and given the number of rainy days there have been this year that doesn't seem unreasonable," one senior official said. "The inflationary tendencies of the economy get out of control." Between the Jan. 31 TET attacks, the economy began to become more buoyant. Now it is just beginning to show signs of buoyancy after the May experience. There has been one major advantage from the advent of a sluggish economy in Vietnam and there is one danger being carefully watched by officials. From the point of view of economic aid, the country's general mobilization program could not have been timed. It is much easier for a slightly recessionist economy to absorb the loss of manpower that has occurred because of the new conscription laws. In a busy, inflationary economy more men would have been employed buying, selling, trading. The danger is that Vietnamese will begin spending suddenly and there won't be enough goods for them to buy. Thus, prices will rise and the inflationary tendencies of the economy get out of control. Economic Minister Au Ngoc has said that the Vietnamese government will begin to import goods as it has not done except as the non-active partner in the American-financed commodities import program. No one is sure why the Vietnamese are now saving their platters. One important reason in the urban areas is that platters are readily portable. A man can carry his briefcase full of cash as he vacates his house and his property will not be destroyed by Vietcong, American firepower or stolen by South Vietnamese troops. (See Page Twelve)
