Semino-Melley

MRS. JOHN KENNETH SEMINO

Dowds-Leonard

MRS. FRANCIS J. DOWDS III

The marriage of Miss Barbara Ann Melley of Manchester to John Kenneth Semino of Norwich was solemnized Saturday morning at St. Bartholomew's Church.

The bride is the daughter of Mrs. James A. Melley Jr. of 328 Ferguson Rd. The bridegroom is the son of Mrs. John Semino of Norwich.

The Rev. Philip J. Hussey of St. Bartholomew's Church performed the double-ring ceremony and was celebrant at the nuptial Mass. Vases of white gladioli and light pink carnations were on the altar.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a full-length gown of silk organza appliqued with Alencon lace, fashioned with a ruffled collar, bell sleeves, empire bodice, and chapel-length train. Her bouquet of white gladioli was attached to a crown of pearls and crystals, and she carried a bouquet of white orchids.

Mrs. James A. Melley Jr. of East Hartford, sister-in-law of the bride, was matron of honor. Her full-length gown of rose colored linen was designed with bateau neckline trimmed with Venise lace, lined with rose colored ribbons and tescap sleeves. She wore a wreath of pink roses and carnations in her hair, and carried a colonial bouquet of white gladioli, pink roses and carnations.

Bridesmaids were Miss Linda Semino and Miss Cheryl Semino, both of Norwich; Miss Carolyn Macaluso and Miss Margaret McIntosh, both of Manchester; Mrs. Edward Ebbitt of Windsor, and Miss Jackie McCarthy of Waterbury. They wore dresses of rose, light pink, and white styled to match the honor attendants. They carried wreaths of pink roses and carnations in their hair, and carried colonial bouquets of white gladioli, pink roses and carnations.

Miss Donna Atwood of Middle Haddam was flower girl. She wore a light pink dress, designed with ruffled white lace collar, short sleeves trimmed with matching lace, and front pleats. She also wore a wreath of pink roses and carnations in her hair, and carried a basket filled with roses and carnations.

Patrick Lee of Norwich acted as best man. Ushers were Michael Melley of Manchester and James A. Melley Jr. of East Hartford, brothers of the bride; William Krywicki of Manchester, and Joseph M. Jewell and Claude Chlewicki, both of Norwich. Mrs. Melley of Manchester, brother of the bride, was ring bearer.

Mrs. Melley wore a cream colored silk dress with pink accessories. The bridegroom's mother wore a white dress embroidered in silver with silver accessories. Both wore corsages of pink roses.

A reception for 175 was held at the Manchester Country Club. For a trip to Bermuda by plane, Mrs. Semino wore a camel colored jacket dress with matching accessories and a corsage of pink roses. After Sept. 1, the couple will live at 58 Lockwood St.

Mrs. Semino is a graduate of Holy Family Academy, Baiton, and attended the University of Hartford. She is employed at Standard Educators, Inc., East Hartford. Mr. Semino, a graduate of Norwich Free Academy, is employed as an assistant sales manager at Standard Educators, Inc.

Miss Patricia Ann Devis of Manchester became the bride of Thomas Charles Bruett Jr. Saturday afternoon, Aug. 24, at both Methodist Church.

The bride is the daughter of Mrs. Colin Victor Davies of 379 Center St. and the late Colin V. Davies. The bridegroom is the son of Mrs. Langland Van Cleet of Upper Montclair and Thomas C. Bruett Sr. of Bloomfield, N.J.

The Rev. Carl W. Saunders of South Methodist Church performed the double-ring ceremony. Mrs. Bruett is a graduate of Holy Family Academy, Baiton, and attended the University of Hartford. She is employed at Standard Educators, Inc., East Hartford. Mr. Bruett is employed as an assistant sales manager at Standard Educators, Inc.

James Sprague of Manchester served as best man. Ushers were Kenneth Oliver of Manchester, brother-in-law of the bride; John Diets of Covington, N.H.; Clifford Leonard and Edward Leonard, both of Wapping and Cousins of the bride; and David Eines and Robert Oliver, both of Manchester.

Mrs. Leonard wore a powder blue chiffon dress and coat with matching accessories and a pink hat. The bridegroom's mother wore a pink shantung dress with matching accessories and a white orchid.

A reception for 200 was held at the Elias Carriaga House, Rockville. For a motor trip to Canada, Mrs. Dowds wore an orange double knit dress with lace appliques at the neckline, and a matching headpiece. They wore matching headpieces with a corsage of yellow and orange carnations. After Sept. 15, the couple will live in Manchester.

Mrs. Dowds is a 1966 graduate of Manchester High School. Mr. Dowds is a 1966 graduate of Manchester High School. Both are employed at Pratt and Whitney Division of United Aircraft Corp., East Hartford.

Kozikowski-Asvestas

MRS. LANCE ANTHONY KOZIKOWSKI

Miss Nikki Asvestas of Manchester and Lance Anthony Kozikowski of Crofton, N.H., were wed Saturday, Aug. 17, at St. George Greek Orthodox Church, Hartford.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Asvestas of 58 Schaller Rd. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Kozikowski of Crofton.

The Rev. James Demetriades of St. George Greek Orthodox Church performed the double-ring ceremony. Bouquets of gladioli and asters were on the altar.

The bride was given in marriage by her father. She wore a full-length gown of silk organza over tulle and embroidered chionon lace, designed with cathedral-length train bordered with matching lace. Her veil of silk illusion was arranged from a crown of seed pearls, and she carried a cascade bouquet of white roses and stephanotis.

Miss Diana Asvestas of Manchester, sister of the bride, was maid of honor. Her full-length gown of orange colored chiffon over tulle and embroidered chionon lace, designed with cathedral-length train bordered with matching lace. Her veil of silk illusion was arranged from a crown of seed pearls, and she carried a cascade bouquet of orange colored carnations and yellow roses.

Bridesmaids were Miss Edith Angelo of Arlington, Mass., and Miss Cynthia Pettis of Farmington, both cousins of the bride; and Miss Cecile Hays of Woodstock. Their gowns and headpieces were styled to match the honor attendants, and they carried cascade bouquets of orange colored carnations.

Miss Antonette Couture of Weymouth, Mass., cousin of the bride, was flower girl. She wore a yellow chiffon gown with matching headpiece, and carried a cascade bouquet of orange colored carnations and yellow roses.

Henry Angelo of Medford, Mass., cousin of the bride, served as best man. Ushers were Peter Asvestas of Manchester, brother of the bride; Ronald Kozikowski of Newport, N.H., brother of the bridegroom; and David Atwood of Hillboro, N.H. Christopher Miskowicki of Hartford was ring bearer.

Mrs. Asvestas wore a green chiffon gown with matching accessories. The bridegroom wore a pink dress with white accessories. Both wore corsages of white roses.

A reception for 200 was held at Flano's Restaurant, Bolton. Mrs. Asvestas is a 1966 graduate of Manchester High School, and is majoring in secondary education mathematics. At college, she participates in the Chorus, Chamber Singers, Student National Education Association, and the Music Educators National Conference.

Look for More Raisins

WASHINGTON — Consumers of bakery products can expect to find more items with ground-raisin spreads or fillings, because bakers can now buy a spread that solves a problem they have always had with this ingredient. Ground raisins normally set to a hard mass after a few days, which meant a baker had to grind fresh raisins every time he wanted to use them. A new heat-treated paste remains spreadable at least six months.

United Fund $$$ Work For-- Community Child Guidance Clinic

Suddenly the happy family world surrounding Jane, aged 14, crumbled. Jane, because of a congenital, uncooperative, rebellious, and her marks in school work dropped alarmingly. When Jane refused to eat, the family sought help at the Community Child Guidance Clinic.

Therapeutic interviews with Jane and her family showed that, without interest or awareness, the family had developed a pattern of deep anxiety for their adored daughter to produce high marks and to enter a good college.

Jane lived satisfactorily with the burden of these expectations as a pre-adolescent, but as the inevitable stresses of adolescent emotions emerged and her academic program increased in difficulty, she responded to the underlying anxiety of corresponding anxiety of her own. The more pressure she felt, the less able she handled her school work and, as her marks slid down, the more anxious she became. Eventually she had a breaking point for withstanding pressure.

With medication and psychotherapy, Jane gradually improved. Whether she entered a prestige college began to seem less important than that she functioned freely and wholesomely at her own level of competence.

Ted was referred to the Community Child Guidance Clinic by his minister. At home he was the apparent center for severe family conflict; he was on the verge of complete failure at school; he had become dangerously involved in mischievous gang activity. The clinic staff found that Ted, essentially, without any previous history, had become the battleground for unsatisfied needs in his parents.

After a few months of treatment, things improved. Ted released somewhat from the family pressures, was able to give up the gang activity and exhibiting behavior and give more of his attention to improving his work in school.

The Community Child Guidance Clinic, 317 N. Main St., has been helping children like Jane and Ted since it opened in January 1969. It is a member of the American Association of Psychiatric Clinics for Children, which provides investigation, diagnosis and treatment of children and adolescents who exhibit departures from mental health.

The Community Child Guidance Clinic serves Manchester and many of the towns in the area. The number of referrals from Manchester represent more than a third of the total case load. The clinic's patients come from all economic and social levels.

The professional staff consists of a full-time child psychiatrist-director, 4 full-time psychiatric social workers, 1 full-time psychologist, part-time psychiatric social worker and 1 part-time psychologist.

In the past year many hours were given in community service. Members of the staff met with groups of physicians, clergymen, and teachers to assist in identifying the problems of children and citing significant ways in which they can act as they work with children and their families.

During the past school year, Dr. Tunnah Aloyonidis, psychiatrist-director of the clinic, conducted a series of meetings with 50 elementary school teachers from the Manchester school system. The discussions helped the teachers to become more sensitive to the reasons underlying the problem behavior of children in their classes and gave them insights into ways that the school could help so that eventually the high level of mental health problems can be lowered. If problems can be diagnosed early, the James and Teds could be helped before the situations become emergencies.

Last year well over 400 referrals by parents, school pro-less than 10 per cent of the children were of pre-school age; 10 per cent of the total cases were self-referrals. The remainder were referred by parents, teachers, and agencies were processed. From these referrals 216 children and from 4 to 18 years of age. Of their families received diagnosis in these, 70 per cent were boys; 10 per cent were girls.

In order to continue use of the sliding fee scale, the Community Child Guidance Clinic relies, in part, on the United Fund for financial assistance and so help many Manchester children like Ted and Jane.

Sidewalk Complaints

Councilman Jane Romsey told of having received telephone calls from several residents who were dissatisfied with the results of the July 15 council meeting. The residents were dissatisfied with the results of the July 15 council meeting. The residents were dissatisfied with the results of the July 15 council meeting.

Sidewalk Complaints

At the July 15 council meeting, a public hearing was held at which the question of putting in the sidewalks was discussed. A heavy turnout of residents along Kelly Rd. indicated that those abutting the area to get the sidewalks installed did not want the sidewalks at all. Various reasons were cited by the residents for not installing the sidewalks, such as the loss of the rural charm, the expense, and the feeling that installation of the sidewalks would not only make Kelly Rd. safer but would make it more dangerous for pedestrian as well as driver.

Sidewalk Complaints

After hearing the opinions of the affected residents, the council voted to eliminate the plans for the installation of the sidewalks. This then presented a problem for the schools; for a primary purpose in installing the sidewalks was to have been to make it possible for many children to walk along Kelly Rd. to Avery St. and then to the Timothy Edwards School.

STEEEL, PIG IRON RISE

JOHANNESBURG — South Africa's steel production rose 20 per cent in 1967, reaching 2.5 million tons. Pig-iron output rose 15 per cent to 2.8 million tons. The increase in steel production was due to a combination of factors, including a rise in demand for steel in the construction and manufacturing sectors.

The Obscurity of Power

What has been going on in Czechoslovakia since the momentarily triumphant return of the Czech leaders from their star chamber sessions in Moscow has been a sad and tragic demonstration of the obscurity of power.

The steady, cruel, relentless application of Russian pressure, by tank and by psychology, by propaganda and by secret police, has been turning back the clock of political evolution in satellite Europe, as if that might not be postponed two hours after dawn.

There are certain to be moments, from now on, when it will look as if the repositioning of darkness has worked, and does constitute a final result, and when all the 30 years in which the supposedly more outside world has waited, hoping for time and evolution to work their way inside the relationship between Russia and its satellites, will seem wasted years, which might better have been spent in fighting and then trying to recover from another world war, than in attempting to eliminate the Communist menace.

When time and evolution and gradualism fail to produce a result—only a result that is more quickly reached, once superior physical force moves against it—we are all forced to wonder, in the problems of the world, as in the problems of the ghetto, whether force does not have to be made, after all, the final arbiter.

One has to wonder whether the only choice this world has is the choice between fragility—the slow and cruel and grinding—the other total and perhaps mercifully swift. Are our only options those between the madness of endless submission and the cataclysm of total force?

Who can deny the obscure reality of force when, once more in the history of our times, it carries out the rape of Czechoslovakia?

Still, the terrible choice has to be made. It has to be, inside Czechoslovakia, and inside the hearts of its leaders and its people, a decision to try to bear present oppression and determine that once again, some day, perhaps on some slight foundation of gain that can still be captured from the present, the experience of freedom will come to its age.

And it has to be, outside Czechoslovakia, a decision to try to preserve the world first and work for improvement in its living and its relationships second. The psychological barrier must be imposed on Russian power not merely by world attitudes toward its deeds in Czechoslovakia, but by the care and civility law the rest of the world uses in use of its own power in pursuit of its own purposes.

But there should be no mistake about one serious and solemn thing: That is that no one has yet taken the real step toward the kind of world in which the obscurity of power will not keep returning to the stage. Not until the United Nations has been made what it has to be made, with law and police of its own sufficient to guard the peace against any individual nation or groups of nations, will there be an end to the suffering and torture that nations experience in their inevitable power lusts, small nations in their helplessness.

Wicker On "Children"

New York Times Columnist Tom Wicker did some writing Sunday about the trouble at Chicago which ought to be required reading for all Americans who have an inclination to let their distaste for hippies and flyers govern their verdict on Chicago events.

"These were not," wrote Wicker, "Negro, rioting and burning in the ghetto; there were few black faces among the demonstrators. These were not snipers, looters or terrorists. No mobs were clashing with one another. No plastic bottles or Molotov cocktails were thrown. The Chicago police suggestion that the marchers planned to burn down the Conrad Hilton Hotel is ludicrous. If you want to burn down a hotel, you don't march on it by the thousands, singing peace songs and holding hands.

The marchers were political idealists, many of them radical, most of them idealistic, come country and their other men, determined to exercise the right of free speech and free assembly — as Edmund Muskie recognized in his acceptance speech — to have something to say about the kind of future they will inherit from the present and the past.

"They did not threaten law and order in Chicago, not by ordinary police procedure, common sense and legal procedure had been exercised. The truth is that these were open children to the streets, and the Chicago police beat them up."

Later, in the same piece of writing, Wicker observed that the real question raised for the Democrats at Chicago and by the nation was "the question why — why were the children of affluence marching in the streets?"

Columnist Wicker said, then, two things about these children, first that they were "our" children, and second that they were "children of affluence."

As we continue to hear, from people we know, who some of them were, we may still cling to the idea that they ought to have been spanked and sent home, but we have to admit the truth of Wicker's classification of them, that they were children of care and children of affluence. They come from our "best" families and go to our "best" schools. Maybe they are learning like it or maybe they are learning the hard way, maybe to make life a little different and perhaps even a little better when they grow up and take over.

The Cluttered Desk

In the belief that any member of the Ancient and Honorable Order of the Cluttered Desk (AHOCD) should make sure to share with all other members any news of typical and amusing and tragic desk experiences, we now recount here, from the news, the story of that New York physician the other day.

The physician in question happened to be a man of several parts — an author in one of his roles — an inventor in another.

The other day, he made an acquainted call to New York's finest, to report the loss, or possible theft, of the tidy little sum of $250,000 in negotiable securities.

Two New York detectives worked the joint, examined the door locks and the windows, and decided that "it just didn't come across as a burglary."

So they began looking for the securities somewhere inside the office, and found them, lo and behold, cluttered amid letters, magazines, books, newspapers, and notes on the good physician's desk.

Whereupon, in the New York Times account of the affair, the good doctor "beamed and said he planned to get around to tidying up the office in a few weeks."

That was, of course, how we knew he was a bona fide member of AHOCD. That is precisely what all members of the Ancient and Honorable Order of the Cluttered Desk are trained to say whenever they find themselves cornered by their own clutter.

Chicago — As Vice President Humphrey moved toward nomination on the lone ballot Wednesday night, a note was sent to the rostrum asking permission for a statement by Sen. Eugene McCarthy to be read in November's main event. Mr. Humphrey's choice of the highly penitent Catholic of Polish extraction, is good for ticket balance. The supporters of the losing presidential candidates, Barry McCarthy and McGovern, carried their respective flags down to the wire, attempting in the end to all the candidates by convincing the party should not accept its business in the "police state" atmosphere of Chicago. McCarthy's statements as displayed in brutality by the Chicago police were quite understandable, and it was widely reported, but their attempts to engineer an emotional denier of the convention, and win time to bolster their own causes, were not at all reasonable. Whether or not the Humphrey-Muskie team can now win the backing of these liberal elements in the party is questionable. In trying to please them, the vice-president cannot lean too far away from that platform any more than he could choose a dove as his running mate. Since the liberals will have nowhere elsewhere to go, unless to a "four party" meet, which probably support the party ticket at the polls, but not enthusiastically between now and November. And the country as far as the predominant Vietnam issue is concerned, will have to focus on the candidates of different ways of observing the "firm" concept, rather than on different concepts. Vice-President Humphrey and Sen. Muskie may well be at a disadvantage in the "meat of the sale" candidates, while many Americans of both parties may accept the Nixon-Agnew ticket for the same reason. It might be felt, could be less productive than the administration policy has proven to be. But a very important part can be played by Hand, too, in this contest. If, for instance, North Vietnam says its own future lies in cooperation with Mr. Humphrey in the White House, it could very easily bring about a cease-fire in the balance of the election day. This alone could tip the balance to the Humphrey cause. Whether or not words of change in the persons of Richard Nixon and Spiro Agnew will be turned aside with dramatic success, it is hard to say. The domestic or foreign policy, or both, in the next couple of months is something to ponder. If such gains do come, they will probably be confined to the area of Vietnam war. — SPRINGFIELD UNION

Wants Debate

I would most definitely like to hear a debate on state issues from the two candidates seeking the office of State Senator. I cannot comprehend Mayor Agostinelli's refusal to debate the issues regarding the welfare of the State.

This debate, if it ever comes to pass, would certainly enlighten the electorate of our district of the capability of both candidates.

Senator Barry has certainly shown his courage of conviction by offering and challenging the issues affecting our interests in State Government. Could it be that Mayor Agostinelli is fearful of the vast knowledge of State Government that Senator Barry possesses?

Sincerely,
Joseph E. McCarthy

"Diffidence"

To the Editor,
As I watched and listened for the contribution of the Connecticut Delegation to the Democratic National Convention, I was repeatedly disillusioned and disabused by their vote. It was difficult to identify Connecticut as the hard core Southern conservative bloc as reflected in the vote of the delegates to support the unit rule, to continue the administration policy in Vietnam and to oppose the delegations from Alabama, Georgia and North Carolina in respect to the issue of ratification of the new constitution.

Other delegations that voted to abolish the unit rule, for now I

Do Not Fear

Many live in dread of what is coming. "Why should we?" asks E. Stanley Jones. In his "Abundant Living" he continues with these words:

"The unknown path adventure into life. It gives us something to sharpen our souls on. The unexpected around the corner gives a sense of anticipation and surprise. Thank God for the unknown future. If we knew all the good things which are coming to us, we would sit down and degenerate. If we saw all the evil things, we would be paralyzed. How merciful God is to lift the curtain on today; and we get strength today to meet tomorrow, then to lift the curtain on the morrow. He is a compassionate God."

THE WASHINGTON POST

WASHINGTON — To Rep. Donald Rumsfeld, the young Illinois Republican who was elected to the House of Representatives last week's Democratic convention, the scene from his Congressional Hill room was frightening but not wholly unexpected.

The Democratic convention wasn't run much differently than the House of Representatives, and the protests outside the convention voted by the demonstrators outside the Conrad Hilton was simply a louder and more obscene expression of the frustration many of the younger members of the House felt about the institution in which they serve.

The latest version, revealed on June 20, is reportedly "not unmanageable" to the House hierarchy. And to wonder!

It makes the provisions on reform voting, on reorganizing the House, on the committee members and on opening committee meetings to the public applicable only to senate committees, thus exempting the House from the reforms it is supposed to lead.

It also weakens the provision for minority staffing by letting reform bill be brought to the floor of the House under a closed rule, barring amendments to reform any of the detailed or complex provisions. Even Rep. Ray Madden, the Indiana Democrat who was co-sponsor with also co-sponsored the last previous reform bill in 1964.

It cleared the Senate early in 1967, after two years of debate and in the face of a filibuster by a bipartisan majority of 75 votes to 19.

It is provided as suitable but not radical. It tightens the regulations on lobbying and takes the reform bill off the agenda of the House. It improves the House's fiscal control.

It also attempts to return reform to its proper place in the committee, where most legislation is written and where chairmen still attempt to operate as independent subcontractors. It is in this area that the Senate bill, for example, makes committee members publicly accessible to their constituents, by providing that the committee report on each piece of legislation list the outcome of each record vote and the position of each committee member.

It also provides that absent members who wish to cast a proxy vote would have to give a precise statement of their intentions, not just a check to their chairman a general authorization to "vote them" on all matters that might arise.

This last provision is designed to end the spectacle of a chairman announcing all details and argument in his committee, because he has enough proxies in his pocket to check members to outvote the man who are interested enough in the bill to attend the meeting on the floor.

Another provision, offering obvious benefits to the quality of legislation, would permit the minority party members of each committee to hire two professional employees and one clerk of their own, without a veto from the chairman.

There are other provisions as well, but the thrust of the bill approved by a 410-1 majority in the Senate is to limit the power of arbitrary committee chairmen, open committee proceedings to public scrutiny, equip the minority members with adequate staff help, and make all members publicly accountable for their votes and actions in committee.

What happened to this bill since it reached the "house 18 months ago is a classic example of why Congress has lost the confidence of the public and some of its own best members.

Despite the 1964 precedent of bringing the Congressional Reorganization Bill directly to the floor, Speaker John McCormack

referred this bill to the House Rules Committee headed by William Colmer of Mississippi. Colmer held hearings for part of one day in April, 1967, and has held no hearings since then. He has refused to bring the bill to a vote. Instead, the committee has conducted a process of private negotiation, outside public scrutiny, in which the bill has been methodically stripped of its key provisions to appease McCormack and the committee chairmen who control the House.

This alone could tip the balance to the Humphrey cause.

Whether or not words of change in the persons of Richard Nixon and Spiro Agnew will be turned aside with dramatic success, it is hard to say. The domestic or foreign policy, or both, in the next couple of months is something to ponder. If such gains do come, they will probably be confined to the area of Vietnam war. — SPRINGFIELD UNION

Democrat Party Machinery

Democratic party machinery by President Johnson. Competent professionals have been replaced by unknowns whose only credentials is their loyalty to Mr. Johnson. Thus, legitimate party leaders were shut out from control of their convention just as they were excluded from National Committee affairs.

As the nominee, Humphrey has moved quickly to restore the politicians. Criswell was summarily fired from the permanent chairman position. McCarthy was denied a customary courtesy by the arbitrary decision of shadow figure named John Criswell.

Criswell, 66-year-old treasurer of the Democratic National Committee, was unknown to most delegates here and most party leaders across the country. But non-wavering fidelity has won Criswell an Oklahoma nomination, and it was widely reported, but their attempts to engineer an emotional denier of the convention, and win time to bolster their own causes, were not at all reasonable.

Whether or not the Humphrey-Muskie team can now win the backing of these liberal elements in the party is questionable. In trying to please them, the vice-president cannot lean too far away from that platform any more than he could choose a dove as his running mate. Since the liberals will have nowhere elsewhere to go, unless to a "four party" meet, which probably support the party ticket at the polls, but not enthusiastically between now and November. And the country as far as the predominant Vietnam issue is concerned, will have to focus on the candidates of different ways of observing the "firm" concept, rather than on different concepts.

Vice-President Humphrey and Sen. Muskie may well be at a disadvantage in the "meat of the sale" candidates, while many Americans of both parties may accept the Nixon-Agnew ticket for the same reason.

It might be felt, could be less productive than the administration policy has proven to be. But a very important part can be played by Hand, too, in this contest. If, for instance, North Vietnam says its own future lies in cooperation with Mr. Humphrey in the White House, it could very easily bring about a cease-fire in the balance of the election day. This alone could tip the balance to the Humphrey cause.

Political Parade

By DAVID BRODER
THE WASHINGTON POST

WASHINGTON — To Rep. Donald Rumsfeld, the young Illinois Republican who was elected to the House of Representatives last week's Democratic convention, the scene from his Congressional Hill room was frightening but not wholly unexpected.

The Democratic convention wasn't run much differently than the House of Representatives, and the protests outside the convention voted by the demonstrators outside the Conrad Hilton was simply a louder and more obscene expression of the frustration many of the younger members of the House felt about the institution in which they serve.

The latest version, revealed on June 20, is reportedly "not unmanageable" to the House hierarchy. And to wonder!

It makes the provisions on reform voting, on reorganizing the House, on the committee members and on opening committee meetings to the public applicable only to senate committees, thus exempting the House from the reforms it is supposed to lead.

It also weakens the provision for minority staffing by letting reform bill be brought to the floor of the House under a closed rule, barring amendments to reform any of the detailed or complex provisions. Even Rep. Ray Madden, the Indiana Democrat who was co-sponsor with also co-sponsored the last previous reform bill in 1964.

It cleared the Senate early in 1967, after two years of debate and in the face of a filibuster by a bipartisan majority of 75 votes to 19.

It is provided as suitable but not radical. It tightens the regulations on lobbying and takes the reform bill off the agenda of the House. It improves the House's fiscal control.

It also attempts to return reform to its proper place in the committee, where most legislation is written and where chairmen still attempt to operate as independent subcontractors. It is in this area that the Senate bill, for example, makes committee members publicly accessible to their constituents, by providing that the committee report on each piece of legislation list the outcome of each record vote and the position of each committee member.

It also provides that absent members who wish to cast a proxy vote would have to give a precise statement of their intentions, not just a check to their chairman a general authorization to "vote them" on all matters that might arise.

This last provision is designed to end the spectacle of a chairman announcing all details and argument in his committee, because he has enough proxies in his pocket to check members to outvote the man who are interested enough in the bill to attend the meeting on the floor.

Another provision, offering obvious benefits to the quality of legislation, would permit the minority party members of each committee to hire two professional employees and one clerk of their own, without a veto from the chairman.

There are other provisions as well, but the thrust of the bill approved by a 410-1 majority in the Senate is to limit the power of arbitrary committee chairmen, open committee proceedings to public scrutiny, equip the minority members with adequate staff help, and make all members publicly accountable for their votes and actions in committee.

What happened to this bill since it reached the "house 18 months ago is a classic example of why Congress has lost the confidence of the public and some of its own best members.

Despite the 1964 precedent of bringing the Congressional Reorganization Bill directly to the floor, Speaker John McCormack

referred this bill to the House Rules Committee headed by William Colmer of Mississippi. Colmer held hearings for part of one day in April, 1967, and has held no hearings since then. He has refused to bring the bill to a vote. Instead, the committee has conducted a process of private negotiation, outside public scrutiny, in which the bill has been methodically stripped of its key provisions to appease McCormack and the committee chairmen who control the House.

Tolland fire truck and firemen race to a set point during Tolland County's second annual firemen's muster in Ellington.

Tolland Firemen Again Take Muster Trophy

The 20-member Tolland Volunteer Fire Department muster team captured first place in the 14th annual Tolland County Firemen's Muster in Ellington, reaping 98 points compared to runner-up Ellington's 81 points. The Bolton Fire Department placed third.

The Tolland team, under the watchful eyes of coach Frank Wilhelm, scored its second consecutive win in the county muster. The team practiced an average of three nights a week for the past five weeks in preparation for the event.

The excitement among the 800 persons watching the strenuous drills mounted steadily as Tolland and Ellington became close competitors.

An Ellington competitor's motorized wet hose run, in which the team answered a real drill, extinguished a tobacco netting fire at the rear of Ellington High School. Their speed and efficiency in donning the hose resulted in their return to the muster in ample time to compete in the next event.

Tolland stands an excellent chance of capturing the trophy on a permanent basis. Winning the first two muster meets, it needs only one more win to retain the trophy, which goes to the first team to win the muster three times.

The Tolland team won first place trophies in the Motorized Hose Laying (wet) and Motorized Hose Laying (dry) events; second place in the Hand Drawn Hose Laying, Tug of War and Pole Climb contests, and third place in the Bucket Brigade.

The muster events appeal colorful to the spectators, but are designed to give the firemen practical training in skills needed to successfully fight fires under various conditions.

Highlights of the muster were the hand-drawn pig contest in which two firemen grabbed an end of the hose of a two-wheeled pig pulled by other team members, attaching it to a hydrant, and the Midnight Alarm.

Contests in the Midnight Alarm must run from a starting point to a pile of boots, jackets and helmets, don the uniforms before jumping on the truck and then speeding over the finish line. The books must be pulled to full height (although not necessarily on the right foot).

Jackets buckled and helmets on before boarding the truck.

Ellington captured first place in the Hand-drawn hose laying contest with a 17.6 second time, followed by Tolland in second place and Bolton third.

Tolland won first place in the Motorized Hose Laying contest with a 34.2 second time; Rockville took second place with 37.2 seconds and Bolton third with 37.9 seconds.

Tolland also won first place in the motorized hose laying dry contest with a 21.8 second time; Ellington placed second with 22.7 seconds and Bolton equaled third with 23.2 seconds.

Rockville placed first in the Midnight Alarm with 55.9 seconds; Bolton second with 56.0 seconds, and Bolton third with 60 seconds. A protest by Tolland against his time was dropped.

Ellington captured first place in the tug of war contest, Tolland second and Rockville third.

Bolton captured first place in the Pole Climb in 13.8 seconds; Tolland second with 15.5 seconds and Ellington third with 16.5 seconds. An Ellington protest was dropped.

The final event of the afternoon was the bucket brigade which resulted in almost every participating fireman getting wet. The Tolland team completed its activities by jumping in a mass into the tank of water, and aim it at raised disks to make them revolve.

Participating teams included Tolland, Ellington, Bolton, North Coventry and Rockville. Broad Brook participated in selected events as rehearsal for the Hartford County Muster.

In Boston's Roxbury Area White Principals Removed, Replaced by Two Negroes

BOSTON (AP)—A divided Boston School Committee, concerned over possible violence, has acceded to Negro demands that Negro principals be placed in charge of two public schools in the Roxbury black area.

After hearing School Supt. William H. Ohrenberger describe the situation as "potentially explosive," the committee by a 3-2 vote Tuesday transferred white principals of two schools in Roxbury and replaced them with Negro acting principals.

Ohrenberger told the committee the lives of both white principals, John J. Kelly and Cornelius P. Cronin, were threatened during the weekend.

The superintendent's warning that retention of the white principals might mean violence when schools opened today was related by committee Chairman Thomas Eisenstadt, one of the two voting against the compromise plan.

"Government cannot yield to such threats," Eisenstadt said.

Ohrenberger asserted that "extraordinary situations demand extraordinary actions" and added that maintaining the integrity of established policies was "not worth risking the life of one child."

Under the plan eventually adopted, Kelly was replaced at the Martin Luther King Jr. middle school by John A. Joyce, who was assistant principal. Cronin was replaced at Timothy Junior High School by David S. Owens, an assistant principal. The white men will take other assignments.

Kelly and Cronin were appointed to the Negro area schools July 26. An uproar immediately arose from the Negro community.

Prior to the vote, Ohrenberger said he had received information "from indisputable sources that serious, extremely perilous and potentially explosive steps are being planned to prevent the opening of the Timothy and King Schools."

This was the reason, he said, that he was recommending replacement of the white principals with Negroes on a temporary basis.

"One act of violence at either school location," he said, "could well provide the spark which could ignite a disastrous and destructive riot."

May Charges HHH Did 'About Face'

NORWALK (AP)—The Republican nominee for U.S. Senate from Connecticut, Edwin H. May Jr., contends that Vice President Hubert H. Humphrey went to the Democratic National convention a "doomed" and emerged a "hawk."

May said Humphrey did an about face and left the convention as a hawk, supporting the position of President Johnson on the Vietnam war. He said the Republican Party is "a party of the open door" and that the property had been purchased recently under a bond for deed.

The motion to rent came from Mayor Nathan Agostinelli, already in the hands of William Schaller, both Republicans.

The request for renting had been made to Town Manager Robert Weiss, who has the authority, as town administrator, to approve requests of that type. Weiss, however, called the request "unlucky, because of its political implications," and asked the directors to make the decision.

Agostinelli, running for the State Senate against incumbent Democrat David Barry, said, "I am happy to help the Democrats in their predicament."

Tolland Withdrawal Delays Hiring of Road Aide

The Board of Selectmen declined to name a road superintendent at last night's meeting and instructed the Board of Finance to postpone applications for the position.

The selectmen's action came after the withdrawal of one of the two recommended applicants, Virginia Bronz of Vernon, "for personal reasons."

Thomas's withdrawal left the selectmen with one name, Democrat minority Selectman Eugene Wansel, high scorer on the state tests for the position. Wansel obtained from voting on the action regarding the post last night.

job description, does not grant the appointee the right of preference of the issuing or hiring of the appointees own family, partners or corporate equipment, for use on town projects.

State statutes note that the appointee can hold no other town position or office either elected or appointed.

If Wansel were again to be recommended and was appointed, he would, according to the description and the statutes, be required to resign as a selectman.

The job description requires the person hired to have the temperament and character to deal fairly and justly with fellow employees and to discuss any serious employee problems or grievances with the Boards of Selectmen and Finance.

The applicant can have no history of arrests and/or convictions other than minor traffic violations.

The selectmen granted the permit and zoning commission permission to proceed with several items they have been holding pending the hiring of a road superintendent. These include holding a public hearing prior to the adoption of revised road specification regulations.

Future Town Meeting

A town meeting will be scheduled in about two weeks to act on the purchase of additional land for the town industrial park, presently being held under option. The property abuts the present park and is owned by James Buckley.

The authorization of the Board of Selectmen to accept the sale property from the state is also likely to appear on the call, according to it.

Newfoundland Is Embroiled in Political Fight

By DAL WARRINGTON
Canadian Press Writer

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld. (AP)—Canadian used to call it "Joey's kingdom." Joey, Premier Joseph R. Smallwood of Newfoundland, is still around and very much alive, but the description no longer fits.

The 1967 came last June in the federal election, when Smallwood's Liberal party won only one of the seven seats that Newfoundland has in Parliament at Ottawa. Up to that time, this newest of Canadian provinces had been known as Liberal territory. While the Liberals still dominate the provincial government, with a term running into 1971, Smallwood has called a convention this month as the first step toward reorganizing the party.

The political developments rekindled controversy over Newfoundland's future. Industrial development has come to the province, but unemployment is severe, especially in winter. The province is heavily in debt, and the sales tax is 7 per cent.

Smallwood's critics, who are centered in the business community of St. John's, cite a 400-page book called "Report of the Royal Commission on the Economic State and Prospects of Newfoundland and Labrador."

The commission chairman was Gordon F. Pugh, former deputy minister in the Economic Development Department, of which Smallwood is minister. The other 13 members were Newfoundland businessmen and industrialists, active or retired.

The commissioners were far from complimentary to the Decision Closed On School Closing

MANCHESTER EVENING HERALD
Tolland correspondent, Betty Quatraro, tel. 375-3265.

MANCHESTER (AP)—A federal judge has reserved decision on an injunction from the Norwalk office of the Congress of Racial Equality to have the school closed.

The suit was filed last week by U.S. District Court Judge William Timber.

The school had been phased out over recent years in an integration program. In 1963 tuition of the school's pupils to other Norwalk schools was started. The school board then decided to close the school July 9.

South Windsor Water Rate Raise Scored by Council

The Town Council, at its regular meeting last night in the high school library, roundly condemned the requested 10 percent rate increase in the South Windsor Water Co. water rates.

Mayor Howard E. Fitts said that the Connecticut Water Co. had not improved the poor quality of water and the color of the water, and if a 10 percent rate increase is approved, the water will be of even poorer quality.

The Council, after a long and heated discussion, voted 11-3 to reject the rate increase. The Council also voted to refer the matter to the Public Utilities Commission.

Ota Sik Resigns, Authored Reforms

The invasion frayed the ideological ties that bound the Czechoslovak army to its Warsaw Pact allies and one Communist source said: "It just can't see how they could stay, leaving our country during the next 10 years."

The Czechoslovak army stood firmly behind Alexander Dubcek and supplied emergency transmitters to the underground radio stations that operated extensively during the first 10 days of the occupation.

New occupation troop movements were reported Tuesday, away from public buildings in Prague, toward the West German border and back into Hungary from Czechoslovakia.

Soviet forces withdrew from the headquarters of the national news agency CTIK, the radio station at Bratislava. President Hruska's headquarters in Bratislava and most ministries were guarded by the police, and supplied emergency transmitters to the underground radio stations that operated extensively during the first 10 days of the occupation.

New occupation troop movements were reported Tuesday, away from public buildings in Prague, toward the West German border and back into Hungary from Czechoslovakia.

Workers Set Picket Lines at Royal Typewriter Plants

Producers set up picket lines at the Royal Typewriter Co. at Hartford today while state and federal mediators continued an all-night session with labor and management negotiators.

The strike was called Tuesday by Local 977 of the United Auto Workers union, representing some 2,500 Royal employees at the Hartford and West Hartford plants, after the union members rejected the company's last wage proposal.

The old contract expired at midnight Saturday.

The strike today was the second walkout by Local 977 this year. A five-week strike was called late in 1967 over a separate pension contract and it was not ended until Jan. 30.

A union leaflet circulated near the West German border because "in recent days reactionary forces have succeeded in stirring up disorders there. It did not describe the disorders."

Radio Bratislava reported that Hungarian troops stationed in southern Slovakia were going home in increasing numbers. Some reports said there had been incidents between the Slovaks and Hungarian soldiers.

Police in Hungary closed the road between Bratislava and Győr to an civilian traffic Tuesday. Columns of trucks with a white stripe indicating military use in Czechoslovakia, were moving southeast on the road, away from Czechoslovakia.

Hungarian officials told newsmen earlier there was "a strong possibility" that Hungarian troops would be withdrawn from the Soviet forces and that eventually the only foreign troops stationed in Czechoslovakia would be Russian.

A union leaflet circulated Tuesday said the union offered to extend the contract on a day-to-day basis, but the company refused the offer.

The leaflet urged the firm's management negotiators.

Workers had been instructed by the union Friday to work Tuesday. The issues being debated at union-company meetings Tuesday were wages and holiday allowances, a union spokesman said.

The company issued a statement Tuesday saying they had offered Royal employees an opportunity to continue working and not lose wages while contract talks were in session.

The union committee refused to accept the offer and was working toward a fourth party at this time.

Relations between the company and workers are now being worked out by the parties negotiate, the statement said.

Tolland County Politics Break in Democratic Party Shows Little Effect in Area

By BETTE QUARLES

Political gatherings have been attended by both groups and candidates have not expressed difficulties in working with both groups.

Anderson has pledged himself to working for the campaign of Abraham Ribicoff. He also backs Congressman Emilio Daddario, although he does not run in this district.

Mrs. Hamner returned from the convention stating, "There are no winners or losers in the convention. We have to accommodate each other and put the party back together."

Anderson, returning from the convention, is "disturbed about Humphrey," but described Senator Edmund Muskie as "an honest politician, who provides an ethical balance to the ticket."

"Muskie's job will be to appeal to the ideologically disaffected," Anderson predicted.

The Second Congressional District Democratic caucus will meet on Tuesday, before the final election campaign.

A fourth party would not be constructive at this time, Anderson believes, following the line of reasoning of the Connecticut Committee on the Party's Readjustment, which was announced by the state co-ordinator, the Rev. Joseph Duffy.

Anderson foresees a possible realignment of the political party in the future, however.

Senator McCarthy has urged all his workers to stay in the Democratic party, according to a statement by McCarthy.

Public relations and general service in the future.

Republicans have set up a caucus at the Tolland High School, 12 beginning at 8:45 p.m. The caucus will be conducted by the Republican State Central Committee, will focus attention on the areas of public relations, research and general service, finance and voter registration.

The caucus will begin at 8:45 with a half hour social period. The purpose of the seminar will be explained by the August, chairman of the state advisory committee. Workshops will be held from 7:30 to 9:30 p.m. led by Tony Plack, public relations; Betty Replanta, research and general service; Jim Dingham, finance; and Pat Yeager, voter registration.

The seminar is one of several scheduled for selected areas of the state. It is the first time Republicans have used this approach to pre-election orientation.

Sewer Tie-in Proposed by Manchester

Representatives from the Town of Manchester and Glastonbury met last night to discuss a sewer tie-in project. The project involves connecting the sewer lines of the two towns to improve sewage treatment and reduce the risk of flooding.

The tie-in project is a long-planned initiative that will require significant investment in infrastructure. The meeting was held at the Manchester Town Hall, and both sides expressed a commitment to moving forward with the project.

The project will involve laying new sewer lines and upgrading existing ones to handle the increased flow of sewage. It is expected to be completed within the next few years.

Firemen Return to Scene Today Of Suspicious Tuesday Blaze

Town firemen returned today morning to a vacant two-and-a-half-story frame house at 635 Center St. to cause a similar fire in the chimney area and apparently the remains of a fire which badly damaged the building yesterday.

Firemen, who feel the fire was started by someone, believe it began in an enclosed rear porch on the ground level and spread into the second floor and attic at the rear.

The last tenant in the house had moved out on Sunday, and had planned to keep it while he owned the building. He said he bought it about a month ago and had planned to keep it while he owned the building.

Portelli said he had cleaned out the yard around the house only a few hours before the fire was discovered by an unidentified person who phoned in an alarm from headquarters. Meanwhile, the driver of a passing truck spotted the fire and sounded an alarm from Box 19 at Center and Fairview Sts.

Fire Chief William C. Mason said the Red Cross Lodge, 11 West Dover, Vt.

There will be presentation of awards after the House, Beef tary; Donald G. and Mrs. Henry E. Burt Jr. of Longmeadow, Mass., publicly.

Waterbury Sailor Plunges to Death

JAMESTOWN, R.I. (AP) — A Waterbury, Conn. sailor who plunged to his death Monday morning from the regular bridge apparently did so on purpose, the police say.

A witness who said he saw Seaman Francis R. Scavone, 39 fall, said the youth climbed the railing and jumped to his death on a rocky beach below, police said Tuesday.

Scavone was attached to Navy Squadron Two at Newport, R.I. Navy officials said.

School Bond Issues On Machines Nov. 5

Manchester voters on Nov. 5 will vote on three proposed bond issues totaling $2,845,000 to fund a new Lincoln School in Center Springs Park, a new 22-classroom school to be built on the north side of Center Springs Park, and a new 22-classroom school to be built on the north side of Center Springs Park.

The Board of Directors last night, faced with public hearings and possible action on 14 proposed bond issues, decided to put the three proposed bond issues on the ballot for the November 5 election.

That approval, he said, came only after the directors were told the school would be placed in the south portion of the park near Valley St.

The Board of Directors last night voted to place the three questions on the voting machines at the state and national elections.

The Board's vote was 6 to 1 in favor of the three bond issues.

Immediately after this vote the Board of Directors and the town planning committee met to discuss the details of the bond issues.

Double Top Value Stamps every Wednesday

Stamps In the News

By SYD KRONISH AP News Service New Zealand's 1968 Health stamps will be devoted to the Summer Olympics in Mexico City. The stamps will feature two popular Olympic sports—track and swimming—and will bear the Olympic five-ring symbol. The 3¢ cent stamp (34¢ cents plus 1 cent) depicts a young runner crossing the finish line. It has a green background. The 4 cent (3 cents plus 1 cent) shows the head and shoulders of a young girl swimmer against a blue background. Health stamps have been issued in New Zealand each year since 1959 with the recent surcharge going to the King George V Memorial Health Centre for children. The designs usually feature New Zealand children. In 1967 the series started to highlight sporting themes.

Israel has issued the Festival Stamps, 8729, reports the Israel Philatelic Agency in America. Two values are devoted to Jerusalem, the new city. Three values are for Jerusalem, the old city. Also issued by Israel is a commemorative honoring the 50th anniversary of the Jewish Social Movement. Another new issuance is a revenue set of 10 values for use in the occupied area of Jordan, overprinted in Jordanian currency. Overstamped Sabal-Taras Defense Forces similar sets were previously announced for use in Gaza, Sinai and Syria but were overprinted in Israeli currency. All these stamps are available at your local stamp dealer.

Vietnam has issued four "Allied Nations" stamps to honor the several countries actively participating in the war against North Vietnam. The 1¢ stamp shows the flags of the helping nations. The flag and the 1.50 d. The 3 d illustrates the flags and a friendly handshaking. The 50 d features the flags in a flamboyant design.

Two new stamps have been issued by Cyprus in tribute to the United Nations' World Health Organization and UNICEF. A 60 mils for the WHO shows a status of Assoum, Greek God of healing, and the U.N. symbol with the dates 1948-1966. A 30 mils depicts a child drinking milk and the UNICEF emblem.

An unusual stamp design has been issued by the Netherlands to commemorate the 400th anniversary of the national anthem. The design bears only the words "Wilhelmus van Nassouwe 1600-1968" (We are 67 years old now). There is no illustration or emblem anywhere on the stamp. The lyrics of the national anthem "Wilhelmus van Nassouwe" were written by Marinus van St. Aldegonde in 1664 at the beginning of the War of Independence against Spain.

Gibraltar has issued a set of four stamps to commemorate the 60th anniversary of the Gibraltar branch of the Boy Scout Association. The 4 pence bears a portrait of Scout founder Lord Baden-Powell. The 2 pence, 3 pence and a Boy Scout flag over a silhouette of Europe are featured on the 7 pence. The 5 pence depicts a symbolic design of Scout attributes. The 1 milling features Scout badges. Each stamp also has a profile view of Queen Elizabeth.

Many nations issue stamps of beautiful design, color and engraving. But a recent issuance by the Portuguese colonies of Cape Verde and Guinea not only have no artistic value but are poorly designed. One stamp honoring the visit of President Thomas of Portugal bears his portrait which seems to be smudged. Two stamps for "National Defense" depict Portuguese crosses on figured backgrounds. Both are on soft paper, poorly centered and with ragged perforations.

Switzerland has issued a new 30 cent stamp to honor the 15th Chess Olympiad which will be held in Lugano from Oct. 17 to Nov. 17. Three hundred players representing 30 nations throughout the world from Mongolia to Iceland will compete in the chess matches. This event is held every two years under the sponsorship of the International Chess Federation. The United States has high hopes this year of winning the title now held by the Soviet Union.

Coffee and... Provided with 'Maxiservice'

PLINT, Mich. (AP) — Port-to-port bus service—a kind that picks you up at the front door and puts you off at the building entrance nearest your job—goes into operation in this industrial city of 126,840 on Sept. 7.

Outside these buses look like any other city bus, but inside there's a big difference. Simulated leather seats are contoured, there's stereo music, and interior colors are coordinated. Two pairs of turn seats face each other for the card players.

Occasionally there'll be a couple of "bus bunnies" aboard, serving doughnuts and coffee and requesting suggestions for improvement.

The buses represent an experiment in which private, city and federal agencies are cooperating in the hope of turning back to public transportation those who now clutter the expressways and parking lots with personally driven cars. It is designed to run three years.

Another aim, of course, is to wipe out deficits which now plague municipal transportation systems over the country. Flint lost $169,319 in 1967, up from $75,716 the previous year.

Financial underwriters of the three-year experiment are the Mott Foundation of Flint, the Flint Transportation Authority, City of Flint and the U.S. Department of Transportation.

Cooperators include the American Academy of Transportation, a nonprofit transportation research agency of Ann Arbor, Mich., and General Motors Corp., which might lose some two-car families, but, of course, makes the $25,000 buses.

Newspaper racks and coffee vending machines may be added to the buses later.

And from the start, when 13 of the projected 26 buses go into operation, on-time pick-ups and deliveries is guaranteed, along with a plush bucket seat. In case of a bus breakdown, a fleet of taxis will take over if another bus can't make it on time.

Chicago Events Also Affected World Capitals

LONDON (AP) — The impact of political events in Chicago and Miami Beach was often felt just as strongly in the capitals of the world as it was in households of Berlin, Wis., or New London, Conn.

For some foreign observers, the whole process of selecting the next president was drawn into serious question.

Another reaction came from the Paris magazine L'Express, which wrote: "The best news in the Kremlin when the Russian banks were rolling in Hungary in 1966 was that Britain was invading Suez."

The Sunday Times in London also linked the events in Chicago with the Soviet invasion of Czechoslovakia.

"For non-Americans, and many Americans too, last week's news from Chicago was not only uncomfortable but also a little disturbing."

Security men said the old-time palaces would be hard to protect. Others submitted that the renovation of tall-ceilinged rooms to accommodate air conditioning would be overly costly.

U.S. Moves to Protect Many Small Stockholders

By JOHN CUNNINGHAM
Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP)—As the impact of recent charges and court cases is absorbed by the financial community, the significance of recent government moves is becoming apparent. They are attempts to protect the small investor.

As the number of shareholders increased fourfold in 15 years, inequities in what some people on Wall Street like to call "people's capitalism" have been made to glare.

The emergence of a middle class with money for stocks has thrown the issue to the forefront. And, next to experience and basic intelligence, the difference is primarily one of information.

There is a great disparity in the quality and timing of information available to the public compared with that to which a select group is privy. This has been the situation for so long that it is thoroughly ingrained.

It has, in fact, been the basis on which some traders have made their money.

Now the Securities and Exchange Commission appears to be saying that there is no reason why this old, club-like atmosphere should continue, especially when the welfare of 34 million shareholders is involved. At least three decisions or charges are establishing the new pattern:

1. A ruling in SEC vs. Texas Gulf Sulphur Co. that stated, in essence, that nobody can trade for personal profit with information intended only for corporate use, knowing that the information is not publicly available.

The case was developed after the SEC detected purchases by Texas Gulf officials prior to a major announcement of a strike in Ontario.

2. Accusations by the SEC that Merrill Lynch, Pierce, Fenner & Smith, the nation's biggest broker, violated antifraud laws in that it provided information on an earnings decline at Douglas Aircraft to institutional investors while withholding it from smaller investors. Merrill Lynch denies the charges.

3. A court decision involving BarChris Construction Corp., a builder and operator of bowling alley in which a prospectus failed to include information that might be construed as deceptively ingrained.

Individuals claimed they purchased stock in BarChris without realizing it was also an operator of bowling alleys, which were dropped out of favor a few years back.

This case seems to leave anyone connected with a misleading securities offering personally liable for damages. It includes accountants, officers, directors, and underwriters.

There are several other cases in which the withholding of information or the release of misleading information is attacked, very clearly stated and perhaps a couple of cases, at least, involve suits against accountants.

chance that, with a new administration in Washington, following the most distressing circumstances, for they are quickly forgotten.

Until clarification is reached, thousands of persons must eliminate hunches and rely on the remotest of intimacies and concentrate instead on hard, factual information.

The corporate director worried that by serving on a board he might leave himself open to a personal liability suit from a disgruntled stockholder.

The company president fears to talk with his wife about office affairs, lest his wife innocently divulge inside information to a bridge partner.

The public relations man who casually drops hints to the stock market gossip columnist now wonders if somebody over there in the SEC is watching him.

Trend to Cosmetic Surgery Helps Child's Attitude

By AP Newswriters

"Here comes Johnny Big Nose" or "Look at Gloria's big ears" taunt the children in the playground.

Although parents may tell Johnny or Gloria or any other child with unattractive features or a severe physical defect that "it's what God made them that way," it is now recognized that what's inside may be adversely affected by the non-conforming outside packaging.

A severe physical defect may permanently distort the child's body image—the lifelong psychological attitude that a child forms toward the body by age 3 or 4—before causing irreversible damage to his personal and social development.

Recently there has been a growing trend toward performing cosmetic surgery on young patients. But even though cosmetic surgery devoted to improving physical appearance can now improve almost any deformity, disfigurement or unattractive feature a child may possess, cosmetic surgery is not for every child.

Much depends on the individual child, how serious his defect is and how he adapts to it. In fact, states Alex Kary in the September issue of "Family Circle," "Plastic surgeons often refuse to operate when a child expresses no desire for surgery, even though the parents request it."

Since changing a person's appearance can in itself be psychologically upsetting, doctors want to be sure that young candidates for cosmetic surgery are stable and mature enough to handle the emotional impact of the operation. The ideal timing for such surgery varies from one operation to another, depending in many cases on the age at which the feature reaches its full size.

The success of any kind of cosmetic surgery depends not only on the doctor's technical training but also on his artistic ability—the ability to envision how surgery can enhance a set of features.

A family physician may be most helpful in locating a reliable cosmetic surgeon. Medical associations, local hospitals,

New Weather Data

SUITLAND, Md. — Weathermen estimate that before the new U.S. satellites came along, observers knew of conditions over only about 50 percent of the earth's surface. Now meteorologists at the National Environmental Satellite Center here are obtaining photographic and infra-red data on all parts of the globe and are analyzing weather phenomena that were unknown eight years ago.

Architects Eye Tech Schools For Upgrading

NEW YORK (AP) — Now that the schoolhouse and classroom are taking on a new look, architects are hoping that vocational-technical schools will be upgraded in the process.

Stores Around Town

Snare Compliments for Yourself
THE LITTLE SHOP, 305 East Center Street, is ablaze with vibrantly-colored SKIMMERS, ERS, SLACKS and TOPS that are destined to share compliments for you with the "It" and flattery you hope for. They are at THE LITTLE SHOP.

When making cuttings of some of your favorite plants, try using potatoes as the rooting medium. Cut the eyes from the potatoes so that they will not grow; then insert stems of cutting into potato and plant. The sugar and starches in the potato hasten the rooting. This will work on soft stemmed plants.
