Republicans, Democrats What Is the Difference In Economic Philosophy?

By JOHN CUNIFF AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP)—What is the difference in economic philosophy between the Democrats and the Republicans? Surprisingly, as necessary the answers are, many people couldn't state them.

Most people won't find an awful lot of help either in reading the two platforms, for there are perhaps as many similarities as differences, at least in the important areas.

The chief one of the chief arguments used by the presidential candidates, and most of the lesser candidates as well, is that they can guide the economy better than their opponents.

In search of guidance, Dr. Paul McCracken, a Republican, and Dr. Walter W. Heller, a Democrat, were asked what, in their opinion, were the fundamental economic differences in the party philosophies.

McCracken, a University of Michigan economist, was a member of President Dwight D. Eisenhower's Council of Economic Advisors from 1961 to 1969, and is mentioned as a possible council chairman should Richard M. Nixon be elected president.

Heller, economist at the University of Minnesota, was congressional chairman from 1961 to 1969, serving both Presidents John F. Kennedy and Johnson and remaining an influential voice in policy after leaving the job.

"First of all," said McCracken, "I think it is important to state as a preface to emphasize that one of the great strengths of the American political system is that the change from one party to another doesn't produce a 90 degree turn, as in some systems."

"I think this is an important aspect. It isn't to imply that there are no differences between the parties. There are, although the middle ground they share is substantial."

"It means to me that the key difference revolves around the allocation of money to the private and public sectors. This is critical to our nation's economic welfare."

"The Republican position is more nearly what I would call the liberal position," McCracken said. He conceded "a semantics problem" with "liberal" as he said he meant "liberal in the classic sense, which would mean fewer rather than more federal imposed restrictions on private enterprise."

"What are the tangible manifestations?" he continued. "In a Democratic administration the federal budget four years hence would show higher expenses and taxes than the Republicans." But, he said, "they'll probably be higher in any case."

Heller said he also believes there is an area of agreement in economic philosophy but great differences too. "You start out with the fact essentially a bipartisan consensus on this." "But as you get beyond these," he continued, "there are really sharp differences. There is a difference, he said, in 'distributive preferences' in regard to revenues. "Nixon is upper income inclined, Humphrey is inclined toward the lower income."

Apartments, Auto Museum Approved by Town Planners

The Planning and Zoning Commission, in an executive session last night, approved a 44-unit apartment complex and a 26-car antique auto museum.

The apartment complex, to be erected by the Davis Co., on Thompson Rd., was approved by the commission, subject to a bond which would cover the construction of a public road and landscaping of the grounds. One objection was raised by Dr. Robert Karna; he said that the slope of the land in the proposed recreation area was too great and that "it would be difficult even to set up a chair there."

An antique auto museum proposed by Edgar Clarke was also approved. The commission, after discussing the matter, brought up an objection raised at the public hearing by a neighboring property owner. Omsted's objection was that the museum would be a detriment to the other possibilities that a 24-acre parcel would permit. The commission then investigated the possibilities of changing the land to some other use that would still permit the museum, but came up with none. Dr. Karna explained that the museum would be an enterprise. They will charge admission.

Low Describes Lease Progress To Region Unit

The executive committee of the regional office of Manchester Community College met last night on the Hartford Rd. campus and heard a report by Dr. F. W. Lowe that progress was being made in leasing a building at 218 Hartford Rd. which will be used for a variety of purposes by the college.

"With fingers crossed, I think we're making progress," said Lowe. Part of the building at 218 Hartford Rd. will be available by late spring, and the whole building could be in use by the school by next fall, he said. The lease is expected to be signed by Dec. 1.

Lowe said the owner was eager to lease the building and the lease would be a major step in the development of the area.

Approved was a request of John Bramanti of Manchester to change three acres of land near the Pioneer Parachute Co. from residential to business use. Bramanti intends to develop the area as an industrial park. Dr. Lowe commented that the area doesn't have much use as it is now. The commission advised Bramanti that he should apply for a Zoning Change to Residence C. John Potter, the new town planner, termed Bramanti's problem "a legitimate request." The commission also heard another request which said would be a public hearing. Henry

Columbia PHNA Cites New Policies

Three new policies are being considered by the tri-town PHNA, according to a statement by the professional advisory committee. The policies would be designed to handle new members with babies, patients with a communicable disease, mentally ill patients for non-emergency or to children who are retarded or crippled.

A fee, based on the cost per visit, is charged for therapeutic care of the sick, disabled or for health guidance for the sick.

No appraisal of financial resources will be made when the family or individual accept service. If the family cannot afford the regular fee a guide will be used to determine the ability to pay.

Home health services are provided within the patient's living within the tri-town area (Hartford, Andover and Columbia). Public health services are provided by the tri-town area (Hartford, Andover and Columbia). Mrs. Morgan Hill and Mrs. Howard Stanley, chairmen of the commission, thanked Karna for his many fine judgments.

South Windsor Humphrey Edges Out Nixon In Poll at High School

The students of South Windsor High School have conducted a poll to elect their representatives to the State House. Humphrey, 282 votes (56 per cent) for Nixon, and 141 votes (28 per cent) for Wallace. The remaining 50 votes were cast for various other presidential hopefuls.

Pat Paulson edged out McGovern, Kennedy, and McCarthy for fourth place with 39 votes out of his ballot.

The results of the election were somewhat surprising, according to Alan L. Benford, faculty advisor for the club, since it was expected that Nixon would be removed as a part of the development of the conservation project planned for the town hall open space area.

Computer Networks Seen Replacing School, Teacher

PARADISE, Calif. (AP) — The day may not be far off when Junior will learn his Three R's at home under the prodding of the electronic schoolarm who also can teach more and more of a few things.

The reason he'll study at home, experts told a meeting of the National Academy of Sciences Monday, is that schools will have vanished—replaced by a network of computers cheaper and more efficient than present-day school systems.

Junior's teacher will be a console—one of thousands hooked up to a computer which will monitor his learning constantly, telling him instantly whether he has given the right answer. He won't have to wait hours or days for a test to be graded. This means his learning speed will be limited only by his own ability, not that of his classmates. And they won't have to waste time going to and from school.

Students May Earn, Learn Tending Bar

The Record, Hackensack, N.J. — They go to parties so they can study.

They say the parties are sometimes harder work than school. Depending on the amount of time he can afford away from his studies, a man may earn anywhere from $10 to $100 a year.

The University urges all students on scholarships to work part of it in cold cash, says Edwin L. Brocque, dean of the Maine, co-manager of the Bartenders Agency at Columbia University.

"It isn't easy either, but when you go to work you have got to make the time in which to do it."

There are 22 student agencies at Columbia, said Edwin L. Brocque, a senior industrial engineering student, and Harvard, a junior history major, share a tiny office at 617 W. 125th St. in an ancient apartment with several of the other agencies. Students register for work here, and get their assignments in the faculty supervised work agencies.

To have a Columbia University student tend bar, a host pays him a $15 minimum, plus $4 for each additional hour after four hours, plus transportation costs if the party is out of the city.

"The agency always has as many jobs as needed, and we can always fit in," says Brocque. "But three weeks before New Year's Eve we are booked solid."

The agency advertises in the Village Voice, Park East and West Side News and the majority of job offers come from mid-Manhattan. But students gladly travel to Long Island, Westchester or those over 21 to New Jersey.

Jerry Haskoff of Hillsdale, N.J., a 19-year-old pre-med freshman, said his family has a poor opinion of his earnings because he can't drink, but he says he likes bartending because he can easily schedule around it. In the summer he plays piano for a lounge performing in and around Bergen County.

Several times a year Brocque and Haskoff schedule a bartending school consisting of six lessons for $5, the next course has 110 registrants.

Along with polishing, pouring and serving, the professional always gives the young men tips on how to handle the sober or tipsy guest.

"I went to some sort of a business affair one night," said Brocque, "shaved, polished and dressed. As soon as I got there they made me strip to the waist but the waitress kept on their tops."

However, it must be obvious that students at Columbia have the brains and find the time as well as the energy for studies, sports, and work, for 500 are involved in the 22 student agencies. Among the other student employment agencies are tutoring, typing, charter flights, Bar-rop-by-Car, souvenirs and refreshments, games, and magazine subscriptions.

Computer Networks Seen Replacing School, Teacher

PARADISE, Calif. (AP) — The day may not be far off when Junior will learn his Three R's at home under the prodding of the electronic schoolarm who also can teach more and more of a few things.

Italy Faces Prospect Of Political Crisis

ROME (AP)—Italy faces the prospect of another political crisis today following the failure of the Italian Socialist party to agree on conditions for its return to the government.

The Socialists ended their fall congress Monday night with the split on future relationships with the Communist party and the price to exact from the Christian Democrats, Italy's largest party, for agreement to participate in a new center-left coalition government.

First fights, whistles and shouting matches among the 1,000 delegates emphasized the differences within the party. The congress finally agreed that all decisions would be left to the party's central committee, whose 121 members were elected by the congress on factional lines.

A majority of the Socialists agreed that a new alliance with the Christian Democrats and the tiny Republican party should be negotiated to give Italy a majority government. But there was no agreement on demands to be made.

After five years in a center-left government, the Socialists returned to continue after losing more than a million votes in the

Youth Panel Warns of Drug Use

The availability of drugs in combined with values he had received from his parents. He thinks of us as persons, but still need for a local recreation center were described as the major problems facing Tolland teenagers in a panel discussion at St. Matthew's Church Sunday.

A panel of nine teen-agers discussed their problems with an audience of about 50 adults during the follow-up session to Project Challenge, last year's ecumenical program on life and love for teen-agers.

The panel was described as "the cream of the crop," by Miss Susan Dick, leader of the program, and as "the leading panel of bright kids" by some of the parents.

The availability of drugs in the area (particularly marijuana) on both the local area high school level and the college level came as a shock to many of the parents.

"I could name at least 10 kids who take pot," stated Traftman, a 17-year-old senior at Rockville High School. "They've told me what the like to be under its influence," he added, explaining many of these teen-agers were freshmen and sophomores.

"The drug use is so under ground at school, I don't know how they are going to handle it," he said, adding "you sometimes hear it being talked about in the halls."

"I do know there are several pushers in school and in our town." Asked where the center for the activity is, Greg replied it's done "on an interspersed basis."

Drug Education

Dennis Healey, a 20-year-old bearded psychology student at Eastern Connecticut College, reported that "the first four persons he met on the campus, invited me to their apartments to take drugs."

Mark Slaves, a 19-year-old sophomore at Central Connecticut State College, was critical of the lack of drug education received in the schools. "You ask any student or teenager about drugs, and he can tell you how it feels to be under the influence of drugs."

"Very few can tell you of the effects of the drugs on the body," he complained citing the need for this type of approach in the school systems. "We are learning it in college biology," he explained, adding that it is often too late by then.

Nancy King, a 17-year-old senior at Rockville High School, told of "students who go into the girls room at school to sniff glue as a way of relieving their tensions."

"There has to be something to turn to, so that you don't turn to drugs," she stated.

Craig Chesser, a 16-year-old junior at Rockville High, told of being offered marijuana, and of the "tough decision" a teenager has to make.

"It's a tough decision to say no," he explained. He attributed his ability to refuse the drug to "a respect for himself and for his parents."

"This is probably a harder decision for college students who are away from the influence of their parents," he added.

Dennis explained that he had turned down the drug "because he could not see where he would receive any value from them."

A Message To The People

WHY I CHOOSE TO RUN FOR THE STATE SENATE

I Believe There Is A Better Way

Along with so many other Americans I share the concern, that our once proud nation has lost its glow of optimism. Along with so many Connecticut residents, Democrats, Republicans or Independents, I also believe that many of the issues that are of a negative nature could be remedied by a firm, positive approach based on faith in the people and community spirit.

- 1) State controls. Recent proposals have called for towns to lose their long held right of controlling school systems. A member of a State committee advocating such a State takeover rudely added, "Let the chips fall where they may." As Mayor of Manchester I have vigorously worked for regional cooperation. I feel that State coercion will not solve any problem. Force never has. Another proposal called for a takeover of Town property zoning. I would fight these two proposals.
- 2) Violence and crime in our cities. I feel that we must pass State laws that will aid teachers and law enforcement agencies in protecting the people. Our State will not tolerate crime. Our children and wives must be able to walk in safety. Senate action—not reaction—is urgent.
- 3) Town needs must be better represented at the State levels. A portion of the gasoline tax can be retained by towns for road repairs. Also, State aid for education must be furnished without hidden strings attached. The elderly of our towns have received virtually nothing from the State. They have a right to their fair share. Most of the State income is directed to city needs and welfare. By weeding out the welfare chiselers, and more careful attention to all of the people's needs, our great State could once again begin to move ahead.
- 4) The waste on the State level must be checked if we are to keep our economy strong and promising. Many young people and executives have an investment in the future of Connecticut. The present State government has incurred a debt of over $120,000,000.00. We cannot allow this huge debt to act as a drag on our economy. A State Senator has a duty to his town or city, but he also has an obligation to maintain a check on all matters affecting the taxes collected from the people.

THERE IS A BETTER WAY

THERE IS NOTHING TO PREVENT OUR STATE FROM ONCE AGAIN BEING PROSPEROUS AND PROMISING. WE CAN ONCE AGAIN HAVE A CONFIDENT, OPTIMISTIC OUTLOOK FOR OUR ECONOMY AND SECURITY.

U.S. Actors Involved Soviet Invasion of Slovakia Suspended Prague Filming

By BOB THOMAS
AP Movie-Television Writer

HAMBURG, Germany (AP)—Four American actors were faced with the job of reuniting a film that was suspended by the Soviet-led invasion of Czechoslovakia.

Their reactions: Robert Vaughn: "If we can bring some taste to the picture, it will be a miracle. The whole project is being so Mickey-Moused back into production that it will be hard to match what went before."

Burdorf Dillman: "Czechoslovakia had a feel and look to it that you just can't get anywhere else."

Ben Gazzara: "As far as I'm concerned, what we're doing now is a totally new picture."

George Segal: "Look—a movie is a movie. As long as you're working with good people—and in this case you are—you can pick up where you left off. Every movie set in the same, no matter where you are."

"The Bridge at Remagen," which was filming its 40th day of production in Czechoslovakia when the Russians and their allies invaded on Aug. 20, is once again before the camera with the four actors and a large cast of Americans and Germans.

How the film was saved from abandonment is a lesson in ingenuity.

David L. Wolper, television documentarist turned feature producer, had searched throughout the United States and Europe for a bridge to match the famed Ludendorff Bridge at Remagen, where American soldiers made the first bridge crossing on March 7, 1945. He found it near Prague on the Vltava River. Filming on the bridge area—just the make-believe fighting he mistook for the real thing.

Next the filmmakers needed an area where they could build a perfect copy of the one they constructed in the Czech area. Production resumed here Sept. 20, and will shift to Italy, where the bridge is a building.

The actors were sent back to the United States for a month while German film workers reconstructed the Czech sets. Production resumed here Sept. 20, and will shift to Italy, where the bridge is a building.

Negotiations were opened with the Czechs for return of the costumes, guns, props and expanded film. To the surprise of the Wolper company, all were returned—except 60 bayonets, four pistols and steel hand grenades, which were confiscated by the Russians.

Still sorely needed were battle scenes involving the bridge and tanks. Another surprise: The American soldiers made the bridge area—just the make-believe fighting he mistook for the real thing.

GOP Campaign Swings Through Sparse Hebron

Parade-watching crowds are hard to find in the John Paonessa, GOP state representative candidate, tours through town over the weekend.

Lynda's Baby Named Lucinda

WASHINGTON (AP)—President Johnson's new granddaughter has been named Lucinda Desha Robb.

The first name is a combination of the names of the President's two married daughters—Lucy and the baby's mother, Lyndon B. Johnson's second wife, Mrs. Lyndon B. Johnson (née Robb).

Lynda had held up an announcement of the name saying she wanted to see if it fit the baby and also hoping she could check it out first with Robb. When he gave final approval, Lynda called her parents and Lucinda—three campaigning in New York City—and told them. She also relayed word to Robb's parents, Mr. and Mrs. James S. Robb of Milwaukee, Wis., before permitting a public announcement.

Little Lucinda, meanwhile, was progressing well. Lynda, an Episcopalian, went to services in the Protestant Chapel at the hospital, and took communion.

She and the baby are expected to return to the White House the week.

A funeral is the pivotal point in a family's transition from deep despair to normalcy. It serves as a better emotional outlet, after which families are better prepared to look beyond today's loss and face the tomorrows which lie ahead.
