Norwalk Bank Robbed By Three Masked Men

NORWALK, Conn. (AP) - Three armed men wearing Halloween masks and nylon stockings over their heads held up the Post Road Branch of the Fairfield County Trust Company in Norwalk at 10:37 a.m. today.

After cleaning out the vault and the cash drawers, the robbers fled out the rear door into a black sedan. The amount stolen was not immediately known.

Police said the gunmen entered with the bank through the rear door, forced two tellers to lie face down on the floor and then forced the manager to open the vault.

It was the first bank robbery of the year in Connecticut. In 1968 there were 31 such robberies throughout the state.

Confession Disclosure Rocks Trial of Darwin

Darwin, who lives in Marlton, N.J., was arrested by police on campus yesterday afternoon as violence flared on the picket lines. (AP Photos)

The Roy Darwin murder trial was rocked by testimony today from the high sheriff of Tolland County that Darwin admitted to him in December of 1968 he killed Hope Fern Rothwell.

Paul Sweeney, called to the witness stand in the third day of the trial, easily testified: "He told me that he had not yet told his lawyers he had killed Fern Rothwell."

The testimony came as a complete surprise to the defense. Atty. John F. Shea exploded from his seat and after a sharp exchange with Sweeney a recess was called. The trial was to resume this afternoon.

Under questioning by State's Atty. Robert Pigson, Sweeney said he had been in the office of the Tolland State Jail "seven or eight days after Darwin's arrest. Darwin was arrested on a coroner's warrant Dec. 8, 1968 and formally charged with the murder two days later.

Sweeney said he was the jail administrator. He said Darwin had asked to see him.

"He asked some questions about being before the grand jury," Sweeney said, "and (wondered) why his lawyer wasn't permitted in the grand jury room."

He went on, "He told me he had not yet told his lawyers that he had killed Fern Rothwell."

Sweeney said he had told Darwin that he had good lawyers and could turn to them.

Sweeney continued, "He said he didn't make up his mind whether he was going to plead guilty or not until he had talked to his lawyer."

For December total employment stood at 78.1 million, 100,000 more than in November, the department said.

Suspect Caught In FBI Slayings

WASHINGTON (AP) - A man charged with slaying two FBI agents surrendered meekly in the attic of an apartment house Wednesday night, silencing an intense house-to-house manhunt in the Capital's South East section.

The capture of Billie Austin Bryant, 29-year-old auto repairman and prison escapee, came less than seven hours after the agents who sought to question him about a bank robbery were found dead in the hallway of his estranged wife's home.

The slain agents were Anthony Palmisano, 26, and Edwin Woodruff, 27, a Negro and the first of his race to die in the line of duty with the FBI.

The slayings, which touched off a search by hundreds of police dogs, and submachine gun-puncturing colleagues of the dead agents, followed by less than two hours the armed holdup of a suburban Maryland Savings and Loan company.

A teller had reported Bryant's name to police, saying she recognized him as a former customer.

Bryant, a Negro sought since he escaped from the nearby Leontine Reformatory in Virginia last August, was arraigned here.

Bryant was wanted for robbing a Maryland Savings and Loan firm.

South Windsor Fitts Asks PUC to Explain Difference in Water Rulings

In a letter to Eugene S. Loughlin, chairman of the Public Utilities Commission, Mayor Howard E. Fitts has expressed his concern over the Town Council's concern over the recent Connecticut Water Co. rate increase. He asked the PUC for any "explanatory comments you can make to us."

Fitts' primary concern centered on the fact that the PUC had granted a partial increase to the Connecticut Water Co. in its letter. Fitts said, "The rationale used to deny a rate increase to the Rockville Water and Aqueduct Co. is equally applicable to the product and service supplied to South Windsor by the Connecticut Water Co., yet no apparent recognition of this was included in your ruling."

"South Windsor's customers," Fitts continued, "are entitled to the same good quality water as do customers of Rockville Water and Aqueduct Co. and are dependent on a filtration plant as are Rockville Water's customers. While South Windsor customers participate in the same problems as Rockville customers, it appears the average South Windsor customer pays a higher quarterly bill than without the recently approved rate increase."

"With these thoughts," said Fitts, "we wish to understand why South Windsor's customers received a rate increase when our neighbors in Rockville with the same problem, did not."

In addition Fitts' letter expressed the Council's concern that the rate increase will indeed lead to improved service. Fitts noted that the PUC had granted the increase to Rockville Water and Aqueduct Co. and reducing the rate increase to South Windsor would be a most desirable project and would be in the public interest. Berg Work Done Well By Bonacini

Tenato Bonacini, the orchestra conductor, was featured at the Hartford Symphony was heard in another of its beautiful Subscription Concerts. He acquitted himself very well, offering the Violin Concerto by Alan Berg, a difficult and seldom played composition.

There are violatists with a more ingratiating tone than that displayed by Mr. Bonacini, but except for a few passages, this type of tone is not demanded by the work he heard. In many ways it is as stark as "Wozzeck," the opera by the same composer. Berg scored rather well in his performance, and his performance after many years.

In general Mr. Wingard provided sensitive and well-balanced playing. He was not over-enthusiastic, but he did not shy away from the heavily at times against the resources of the soloist, but he did not shy away from the heavily at times against the resources of the soloist.

South now tried three rounds of spades, hoping that West had started with Q-x-x of that suit. Actually, East took two rounds and two clubs, collecting a penalty of 300 points. It was a desirable result when you consider the fact that South should have scored 1,440 points for his slam.

South was right; the first place when he assumed that he did not have the material for a safety play to shut your partner out. If he bids a slam, you have nobody to blame but yourself. At four spades or five clubs, you may have some explaining to do.

Weed Invader Threat to Area Scallop Beds

WEST KINGSTON, R.I. (AP)—The scallop beds of New England are being threatened by a Japanese invader from Europe—a species of seaweed known as Chthamalus fragilis.

The National Marine Fisheries Service's West Coast Laboratory at Westport, N.H., said the weed was first discovered in Northeast coastal waters in 1957 in a native of Japan. It was carried to Europe from Japan in 1960.

The weed attaches itself to rocks and grows rapidly, forming a brown mat which causes the scallops to float on the water's surface or just below it.

"Honeymoon" Will Come Later

There are routine formulas for analyzing commentary which can, on occasion, be as unreliable as any other set rule or tradition.

The air seems full, these days, of discussions of how President-elect Richard Nixon is like all past presidents, coming into a period of honeymoon.

During this honeymoon period, according to political tradition, the nation and the Congress will be so enraptured of the new occupant of the White House that there will be nothing they can deny him, nothing but affection they can express for him, no fault they can find.

Then, according to tradition, their honeymoon period will come to an end. The next rupture will depart. The new President's whims will cease to become automatic commands and will be treated rather as controversial whims or unreasonable demands of seeking to please him, the Congress will begin to look for sparing matches with him. Instead of giving everything he does unreserved approval, the matter will be judged as if he were an ordinary mortal.

All this, it seems to us, is ridiculously far from the prospect as they really exist. The honeymoon, it seems to us, is something closer to a reversal of the normal honeymoon process.

The election of Richard Nixon was not a marriage of love and affection, which nation and the man rushed impetuously together.

It was, rather, a marriage of convenience, in which it was Nixon rather than somebody else, arranged by a minority of the nation's voters.

Like any marriage of convenience, arranged on some basis other than overpowering true love, this match is not likely to have a very romantic honeymoon. It may be something of an effort, at first, for the two parties merely to be polite to one another. They are more likely to engage in exploratory games and maneuvers than in any impetuous embrace.

When we set forth the plot in such terms, the actual prospect for the relationship between President Nixon and the Congress and the Nation becomes clear. The progress will be from a cool, exploratory honeymoon toward a back at home relationship in which the two parties begin gradually to discover that they can like each other a little more than they appear to.

That will lead to small experiments in pleasing one another, and to a gradual growth of mutual thoughtfulness until, at just about the point in time when the normal honeymoon might begin to fade, the two parties would be beginning to discover some genuine affection and respect for one another.

In summary, President Nixon will not begin with the traditional honeymoon, but with, if all goes not too badly, reverse the usual tradition, and experience his best relationship with Congress and the nation not in any initial rupture, but in a slower and more mature, and sounder affection which will ripen about the time the normal political honeymoon would be ending.

Could SDS Self-Destruct? It is of some significance that, at the Ann Arbor convention of the Students for a Democratic Society, there was overwhelming defeat for a proposal backed by Mark Rudd, the "hero" of the "revolution" at Columbia last spring.

Rudd's plan was to have the SDS sponsor and organize a militant demonstration in Washington in a sort of attempt of blasphemy of the Inauguration on Jan. 20.

The majority of the young radicals assembled in the SDS convention seemed to think that the American people had reached the saturation point so far as planned confrontation and violence were concerned, and that the movement would be likely to injure itself by trying to create an artificial nucleus at the Inauguration.

Further analysis of the debates and actions at Ann Arbor indicates that the SDS is currently suffering from two developments. One is that, with negotiations of some sort under way in Paris, the Vietnam war has lost something of its power. It was, of course, originally the biggest issue and the focus of the second development is that the membership itself is splintering into several factions, all perhaps equally unappetizing to normal Americans, but very talented at carrying on intensive warfare inside the same movement.

There are the Communist Chinese-oriented Progressive Labor Party or P.L.P. faction, the Trotskyites, who believe that the true vein of Communist revolution was betrayed by Stalin, and the delightful anarchists, who believe that the only way to improve this world is to root up and bludge destroy as many existing institutions and values as they can.

There was at least a hint at Ann Arbor that this third, to destroy existing institutions might be beginning to apply itself to the SDS itself.

And perhaps one of the points on which there did seem some agreement at Ann Arbor was also a revelation of possible desperation weakness on the part of the organization as a whole. It was agreed that, for the immediate future, the nation's high schools should be a main target for the SDS "thrust" for increased membership. Why not, while the SDS is at it, reach out to the kindergarten? Or the orb, where anarchism, a clear, joyous sort of wanton destruction, is often some part of the nature we are born with?

"A WOMAN HOLDING A PINK": Rembrandt Van Roon

By Rowland Evans Jr. Robert D. Novak

Inside Report

WASHINGTON—President-elect Nixon is now planning to issue his private warning to the North Vietnamese in Paris; it is being called the "Hanoi letter."

It is the 20th wedding anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. Whitney M. Young, he being the first Negro to be elected to the National Urban League.

Mr. and Mrs. Theodore W. Kheel gave the dinner at the Regency Hotel, that ornate pink-and-gold room that needs no artificial decoration.

There were 200 guests, with more than 400 guests, who were described by Mrs. Kheel as "an ecumenical cross section of the civil rights movement."

"The plan, which she wore on a burly-necktie of pearls with a chain of pearls with a pearl equal sign in the middle, and Mr. Young, who gave it to his wife for their anniversary, wasn't about to say how nice the party was."

"That is perhaps the key to the question of this social event, which is not likely to have a very romantic honeymoon. It may be something of an effort, at first, for the two parties merely to be polite to one another. They are more likely to engage in exploratory games and maneuvers than in any impetuous embrace."

The legislative "reform" proposals which are being by a recommendation for annual sessions and for doubled legislative salaries are going to have an easy time of it selling themselves to the members of the 1968 Legislature.

They flatter the importance of the legislative branch. They promise it increased prestige and remuneration. And they will be cast, these legislative reform proposals, as some kind of let's guard the stable door before it happens again strategy against the future development of such state emergencies as the financial emergency now confronting this session.

Against this relatively easy sale of self-permission into which our good legislators of 1968 already seem to have plunged themselves, there ought to be expressed a few somewhat rude and challenging concepts.

From our observations of the way the present state financial emergency has developed, we would offer the following legislative bills for consideration:

1. The financial responsibility of the state should be placed on the shoulders of the state's citizens, which are behind the present state deficit.

2. The legislators who look to the state's treasury as a source of income should be required to make up the deficit by their own efforts.

Ex-Goldwater Speechwriter Now Approves of 'New Left'

By HANLEY F. ROSENTHAL

Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP)—Barry Goldwater's chief speechwriter in the 1964 presidential campaign—the man who wrote the famous "extremism" speech—now speaks approvingly of the New Left.

"Technically," says Karl Hess, "I am an anarchist. I would like to see the state abolished."

"I'm opposed to authority at every level and in every area," he said. "I think people should have the absolute right to their own lives and the control of them and I think this is what the Republic is all about."

Hess said he began to change his position when he became convinced "that the United States has supported the wrong side of the security of the world."

Hess said he still regards Goldwater as "a great American political figure," but that he is now a member of the New Left.

The high school program of studies will be completed at a meeting to be held next Tuesday at 7:30 p.m. in the high school auditorium.

Parents of eighth grade students at Bykes, St. Bernard's and St. Joseph's schools are invited to attend the meeting.

Principal Edward Masker, counselors Alice Masker and Tate Cantor and Director of Guidance Francis Shortell will be present to discuss what the subjects cover and what the different courses such as industrial arts and technical courses are designed to do.

They will also give guidelines to help parents determine what course is most appropriate for their child. The varying requirements of colleges will be explained.

The formal presentation will last less than 45 minutes and then any questions the parents might have will be answered. All parents who are not familiar with the program of studies at the high school are urged to attend.

Three Plead Guilty To Weapon Charges

NEW HAVEN, Conn. (AP)—Three men arrested on weapons charges here have pleaded guilty to guilty.

They and three others had pleaded innocent to the charges Tuesday in Superior Court. But Thomas Viola, 31, of East Haven; Carl Reynolds, 26, of West Haven; and Edward Gould, 26, of uncertain address, changed their pleas to guilty Wednesday.

Gould waived his right for a reason. He reported on the charge against him, having a dangerous weapon in a motor vehicle. Judge Douglas E. Wright sentenced him to a state prison term of two to four years.

Reynolds and Viola, charged with carrying pistols without a permit, are to be sentenced Jan. 14. Both are under $40,000 bonds.

The other innocent pleas on charges of having a dangerous weapon in a motor vehicle were made by Francesco Amunzio, 25, Donald Lambert, 37, and Dominick Esposito, age unavailable, all of East Haven.

According to New Haven Police Chief James P. Albert, several of the six were "associates" of Richard Blawie who was shot to death in New Haven Dec. 8 in what has been called a gangland-style slaying.

From Your Neighbor's Kitchen

By Vivian F. Ferguson

Traditionally, Chinese cooking should appeal to the three senses of smell, sight and taste. Vegetables are included in the majority of dishes, the flavor enhanced by meat or fish, the latter in much smaller quantities per person than our Western culture might command. The common people would be lucky to have a slice of pork only occasionally, and then in a limited amount.

Firewood was at a premium, necessitating shorter cooking time, and ingredients were cut in small pieces for this reason. The Chinese also believed that spices should not be used, something they had learned from the Taoist philosophy which called for a return to nature and a simple, frugal life. The eating of young tender plants was advocated, to be eaten raw or only partially cooked as it was thought they were the gifters of life. Today we know the value of vitamins, so the Taoists were wise indeed.

During the middle of the 19th century, a time of heavy famine the Chinese left their country to great numbers, many of them through Canton which was the first port of call in the United States. Today we know the Chinese food generally known in this country is the result of the fusion of the two cultures.

MRS. CARSKY AND GAIL

Richardson Carasky. Her mother is of Croatian descent and her father told her he never truly understood until she came here. In 1930, three Richardson brothers settled in the Massachusetts Bay Colony. The Solomon Richardson house at Old Riverbridge Village, Mass., belonged to one of her ancestors. The Milwaukee area is just the place to find German recipes like Mary's luscious dessert. I have not to see a German dessert which wouldn't make Zsa Zsa Gabor go off a diet, and this is no exception.

Schaum Tort. 1/4 cups egg whites (about 9 egg whites) 3 cups sugar 1 1/2 teaspoons elder vinegar 1/2 teaspoon vanilla extract with 1/4 cup cold water and cook until thickened (about 2 minutes) (1 lb. pkg. of frozen is O.K.)

1 cup heavy cream, whipped, sweetened with 222 worth of material, the living room couch was reupholstered as a gamble and Mary ended up winner. She makes and sells what she calls vegetable plaques in bas relief. What appears to be fresh celery or asparagus is in reality only paper towel and slight cardboard mounted on plywood and then antiqued. She has not once purchased a dress since her marriage six years ago. The dress in the photo is one of her creations.

Born in Milwaukee, acclimation to New England weather was an easy transition for Mary.

NEW HAVEN, Conn. (AP)—Three men arrested on weapons charges here have pleaded guilty to guilty.

They and three others had pleaded innocent to the charges Tuesday in Superior Court. But Thomas Viola, 31, of East Haven; Carl Reynolds, 26, of West Haven; and Edward Gould, 26, of uncertain address, changed their pleas to guilty Wednesday.

Gould waived his right for a reason. He reported on the charge against him, having a dangerous weapon in a motor vehicle. Judge Douglas E. Wright sentenced him to a state prison term of two to four years.

Reynolds and Viola, charged with carrying pistols without a permit, are to be sentenced Jan. 14. Both are under $40,000 bonds.

The other innocent pleas on charges of having a dangerous weapon in a motor vehicle were made by Francesco Amunzio, 25, Donald Lambert, 37, and Dominick Esposito, age unavailable, all of East Haven.

According to New Haven Police Chief James P. Albert, several of the six were "associates" of Richard Blawie who was shot to death in New Haven Dec. 8 in what has been called a gangland-style slaying.
