

Down Averages Climb 10 Points Stocks Rally During Week Best Since Last November

NEW YORK (AP)—A four-week slide in the stock market was stopped this week as the market regained its best rally since last November.

Analysts saw the market as rebounding from a period of low activity, but prices also were helped by bullish news.

On Monday the Dow Jones industrial average added 10.25 points to 881.1, a level around which Wall Street technicians had expected buying to develop. The advance followed for three full days.

On the week, the Dow industrial average advanced 30.81 to 911.84. This was still 10 points below the near-record high of 922.60 reached on Nov. 22, right before the first of a series of interest rate boosts. There was enough momentum in blue chips to push the average to a fraction to 908.21 on Dec. 3, but from that point on it was all downhill.

Lester O. Hooper, of W.E. Hutton & Co., said that the week's rally resulted "from a temporarily overvalued condition."

"Psychologically, we have seen sort of a temporary climax of bearishness," Hooper added. "It is hard to see the rally continuing to go. Hooper added 'no one is smart enough to measure all the factors, especially when trading is so institutional.'"

If there were a classic recovery of about half the losses, he said, it would bring the Dow industrial back to the 945-950 area.

The Associated Press average of 80 stocks this week advanced 4.0 to 328.0, its best rise since the week ended Nov. 20, when it rose 3.0. That was the week all averages and indices made new highs for 1968.

Volume for the week was 56,000,000 shares, with 67,117,000 the previous week.

Sheinwold on Bridge

By ALFRED SHEINWOLD

As a good bridge player you must have faith in your ability to make a difficult contract. If you can make the contract only if a certain king is at your right, have faith that the king is actually there, but do not believe any more than that. Faith will move mountains, but practice on small mountains to be a real dealer.

Neither side vulnerable. Opening lead—Nine of diamonds.

West led the nine of diamonds. East put up the ten and South won with the ace. Since South was a good player he now knew how to play the spades.

If you are looking at the East-West cards you see over the knuckles and concentrate on working out the correct reasoning. You should know how to play the spades even without looking at the hands of the defenders.

Since you are sure to lose two diamonds and one spade you cannot afford to lose a trump, and you cannot afford to mis-guess the spades. You must rely on the king of hearts to be at your right, where you can finesse through it.

The opening lead told you that East started with K-Q-J-10 of diamonds, and the hand is hopeless unless East also has the king of hearts. If East had the ace of spades too he would have opened the bidding. There-

Space Program Said Doomed in Present Budget

TULLAHOOMA, Tenn. (AP)—America's space program is destined to dwindle to nothing within three years under the present budget request, a National Aeronautics and Space Administration official said Thursday night.

Dr. George Mueller, NASA's deputy administrator, said the $2.87 billion budget request for the space program for fiscal year 1969-70 "will put us out of the business by 1971 or 1972."

Mueller, speaking at a news conference before a lecture at the University of Tennessee Space Institute, said the Russians are moving ahead with a space program at a level that will far outpace the United States in the long run.

"The Soviet Union is moving ahead on all fronts in space at the same time, developing programs for manned stations, lunar landings and planetary probes," Mueller said.

"This is a much more ambitious program than ours, which is centered on landing on the moon," he added.

Mueller said the Russians' success Thursday in transferring men between two spacecraft was a significant engineering accomplishment, but he added that the U.S. Apollo 9 moon-landing rehearsal in earth orbit next month will be of comparable complexity.

"The future of the space effort depends on the attitude of the next president," he said. "If he wants stop-or spending, I think from past indications Congress will go along with him. If he believes we have to outdo, I think Congress will adhere to that also."

Anti-Semites Being Ousted

Poland's Gomulka Reported Leading Party Crackdown

By MARTIN ZUCKER

Associated Press Writer

WARSAW (AP)—Communist party boss Wladyslaw Gomulka has cracked down on anti-Semites in the Interior Ministry and is consolidating his position after a serious challenge to his authority in 1968, sources reported today.

Since the 68-year-old party apparatus and topple Gomulka. His secretary's spokesman last November, said the informants, there have been a number of "personal changes" in the government and party, and more Gomulka supporters regarded him as a tool of a campaign hatched by Moscow to shake up the party.

The sources also reported that Gen. Mieczyslaw Moczar, a party secretary, deputy member of the ruling Politburo and the interior minister and secret police chief until last July, may lose the chairmanship of Poland's 200,000-member Veterans Organization and "collaborator" who betrayed their own people walked up in Nazi ghetto.

He also accused Jews, who left the country after being dismissed from jobs, of joining an "anti-Polish slander campaign" and "betraying Poland" with charges of anti-Semitism.

Moczar, interior minister and secret police chief at the time, Ryszard Gomulka, a journalist linked to the anti-Semitic campaign and a member of the Communist party cell in the Interior Ministry, accused men close to Gomulka of being "revisionists"—the worst criticism in Communist ideology.

In July, Moczar was promoted to a party secretary and deputy member of the ruling Politburo, executive committee of the cell was dissolved, and Gomulka re-

Longer Town Clerk Terms Sought by Mrs. Grasso

Legislation designed to increase the term of office held by town clerks and by registrars of voters is being drafted by Secretary of the State Ella Grasso, for presentation to the General Assembly.

Her recommendation is for four-year terms. They now are two-year terms.

The same proposal was introduced into the 1967 Legislature but was not reported out of committee. It was opposed by both political parties, on the basis that town clerks and registrars are popular vote-getters and are needed every two years to lead the ticket at local elections.

Mrs. Grasso, in other legislation being drafted, is proposing an increase in compensation to town clerks and registrars when attending conferences called by her office.

The present rate, paid by the respective towns, is $10 per day, plus 10 cents per mile traveled. She is proposing $25 per day, plus the 10 cents per mile.

At Home, Smart Loses

By JOAN CROSBY

HOLLYWOOD (NEA) — Don Adams was doomed. He knew it and his wife Dorothy, knew it, but he was going down fighting.

He was relaxing at home after a long, tiring day at the studio, filming scenes for the new season of his NBC series, "Get Smart." He was too tired to go out to dinner, and said so. He was not too tired to conduct a tour of his Trousdale Estates home, however.

"That coffee table was a door to Madrid," he said. "If a decorator says to my wife, 'We have something that belonged to a lama and we can only get it here by dog sled, canoe, carrier pigeon and mule train,' she'll want it. It took us a year and a half to furnish two rooms. They tell us they send all over the world for it. They have a junk yard in Venice, Calif."

Some beautiful paintings are on the walls of the Adams home, including very good ones done by Don. "I'd like to show you that part of the house," he said, pointing to a long hallway, "but my wife won't even let me go there."

Dorothy walked by and said, "What he is saying is a gross exaggeration."

"Some of it is a slight exaggeration," Don said, as the telephone rang. It was an invitation to go out for the evening. Don kept saying he was too tired. "I'm saying no on this phone and my wife is on the extension saying yes," he said to his visitors.

Don ended the conversation by telling the caller to drop by and if he was too tired to go out — and he knew he would be — their friend could take Dorothy.

Summing Up: A Year To Forget

By LAWRENCE LAURENT
The Washington Post

Summing Up: The end of the year has no significant place in the television calendar. TV divides the year into three unequal parts: The "season," the "second season" and summer re-runs.

Still, few will refer back to 1968 as a vintage television year. As usual, the bright, high moments came from live coverage of a major event. Last year's high point, of course, was the coverage provided by the space exploring Apollo 8 team of astronauts.

Elsewhere, the sensory assault provided the only new program form. The oldest kind of television, production of original drama that seeks to find answers to a generation's problems, continued its comeback in the form of "specials."

This generation, in turn, began to regard television — in its 21st year — much as the residents of a boarding house regard the daily meals. Programs are usually on schedule, but if one is missed few persons really suffer.

The biggest audiences, as usual, were for major sports events such as baseball's World Series and the major football games. Any sort of pageant that provided incidental entertainment with the selection of some kind of beauty queen was guaranteed a huge audience.

It was a big year for having babies on TV and infants arrived, singly and in groups, for such programs as "Petticoat Junction" and "My Three Sons." Ever since Lucille Ball produced an infant for a 1962 episode of "I Love Lucy," producers have known that childbirth is a certain path to an enormous audience.

Death, however, is avoided on television except in action-adventure programs. Actors who die simply disappear from TV's fairy tales and folk dramas with scarcely a word of explanation.

The television industry did discover that Negro actors are available for roles other than household menials or as dancers and singers. Leading or featured roles are being played by Negroes in more than a dozen weekly series. The most popular — and most frequently condemned — is "Julia." It is hailed, by some, as a marvelous situation comedy that, only incidentally, centers on a Negro widow and her small son. It is also denounced as "overly cute" and for avoiding the "real" problems that a member of a major minority faces in the United States.

The argument that began in 1964 over whether violence on TV contributes to violence in American life reached a new pitch in 1968. Television networks promptly promised to reduce the uses of guns, knives and fists in TV drama but the almost ritualistic announcement did little this time to quiet criticism.

By year's end, the programs that had been most popular in previous years were the most popular one in 1968. Of the new programs only "Laugh-In," "Julia" and "The Mothers-In-Law" could enter the list of the 20 most popular programs. Movies, now booked seven nights each week, showed the first sign of weakening as major attractions. No one could tell for certain whether the drop was the result of a drop in movie quality or whether viewers had grown weary of truncated, edited and interrupted film stories.

Finally, the term "special" (See Page Four)

Lawford Thin and A Success

NEW YORK—(NEA)—Suddenly Peter Lawford is thin and successful again.

As for being thin, "I just quit drinking and 25 pounds rolled off. Now I only drink white wine," he said.

As for being successful, he has recently been guest host of "The Tonight Show," substituting for Johnny Carson; he has a United Artists film, "Buena Sera, Mrs. Campbell" about to be released; he plans another "Salt Pepper" movie with Sammy Davis.

"Yes, it's been good for a change," he says. "I had a terrible four years. But we all go through it. I think things like that are good. They make you appreciate the good times so much more. I have lived very well for 20 years on my profession.

"I must admit my slump began as I was turning 40, and that's a bad time to have one. I wouldn't advise it if you can pick your slump times. That was not my first, either. I had one at 29 or 30. Things were slow. Then I did The Thin Man on TV and things picked up a bit."

Lawford's loss of weight has made him look nearly as young as he did in the MGM musical days (he describes most of the roles he played then as "pieces of furniture"). It has also given him an outlook on life which he says is "super groovy." Like wow!

the Down Under continent and its rugged frontiersmen who forge a life in the manner of the pioneers of America's Old West, will be presented as the season's third National Geographic Society color special Feb. 18.

The broadcast sweeps the great untamed core of Australia, a continent almost the size of the United States but with a population barely larger than that of New York City. It focuses on the land known as the Outback and the people there who are carving a civilization from the desolate plains.
