tain, which dominates the rice plains around Tay Ninh City. Light, scattered contact also was reported from other parts of the country as the large contingent of U. S. Marines scouted along the border.

The 2,800 men of the 8th Marine Regiment, 1st Marine Division, are part of the 25,000 Americans slated to leave South Vietnam by the end of August, said President Nixon's withdrawal order.

The U. S. Command also announced that additional elements of the 9th Infantry Division and a National Guard unit, the 650th Medical Detachment, will leave for the United States on Tuesday. The first back body of troops in the withdrawal were 814 men of the 1st Division who flew home July 4.

The sharpest fighting reported today occurred along the border near an armored troops of the 1st Infantry Division probed the lower slopes of Black Virgin Mountain.

The 1st Division men had reported killing 22 Viet Cong on Saturday when they went in to check the results of 192 strikes on enemy positions on the jungle slopes.

Artillery and fighter bombers pounded the mountainside again Sunday as the armored troops fired at areas where enemy troops were holed up in bunkers, caves and trenches.

Lt. Peter Augustus of Houston, Mo., said the mountain was "like a rotten log."

"You beat it and the bugs come boiling out," he said. "It must be awfully noisy up there."

A search of the area late Sunday produced the bodies of 10 more enemy who had been killed by small arms fire, bringing the total claimed to 232 in two days. There were no U. S. casualties, the command said.

The command also announced the launching of another Marine sweep along the coast south of Da Nang, the third such operation in that area in two months. The headquarters said men of the 26th Marine made a helicopter assault from aboard ship to seven miles south of the landing on July 10, and enemy have been killed. Seven American wounded were reported.

In another delayed report the U. S. Command said U. S. 8th Division troops killed 20 Viet Cong in a fight Sunday near the Plain of Reeds, along the Cambodian border 70 miles west of Saigon.

Home Ec Posts Difficult To Fill

Mrs. Grace F. Harrison of 27 Meadow Lane, State Department of Education consultant for home economics education, said the shortage of home economics teachers in the state is "far more serious than people realize," she reports. She said 25 vacancies in 21 state districts.

"Hardly anyone is coming forward to apply for these jobs, and school district recruiters are having a hard time finding qualified people," she said. "In addition, schools may yet receive some resignations from home economics teachers."

Mrs. Harrison added the pool of prospective home economics teachers is getting shallower, pointing out that only 18 teachers were graduated last month by two state colleges offering home economics.

She pointed to two other factors bearing on the shortage. One is that some teachers are accepted positions in private businesses or community programs instead of in classrooms. The other is the increase in home economics positions, partly the result of an increasing number of middle schools. The state has more than 20 such schools, and their home economics departments are among those looking for teachers.

Mrs. Harrison hopes that some certified home economics teachers, perhaps unaware of the need, will inquire about jobs that are open. Information on specific openings is available through the education department's bureau of research, statistics, and finance at the State Office Building, Hartford.

Red Cross Structure To Change

The National Red Cross is reorganizing its structure and the Connecticut Division will be one of the first to make the switch, according to an announcement from the Greater Hartford Chapter of the Red Cross.

Under the new program, which starts today Hartford will become the central office for all 27 chapters in Connecticut. All state chapters will receive services from the Greater Hartford Chapter, but financial and staff support will still come from the National organization.

Donald L. Corliss of the Hartford Chapter will have the role of chapter and division manager. He will be assisted by a staff of five.

Objectives of the new organization, the National Red Cross said, are to extend improved and up-to-date program services, to get more participation in all services given by volunteers, to move toward better personnel policies, and to establish a more contemporary structure.

Chapter chairman Roland H. Lange, who helped work out the new organizational plan, said that within two years, most of the 1,000 Red Cross chapters across the nation will be reorganized under the 100 division plan.

"Every chapter within the division will retain its present responsibility, interests and identity," Lange said.

Soccer Flareup Ignites Battle In Central America

TEGUCIGALPA, Honduras (AP) — A new undeclared war raged in Central America today as Honduras and El Salvador, with each accusing the other of aggression, the Organization of American States demanded a peace treaty from Honduras.

Honduran authorities charged that Salvadoran ground forces invaded Honduras Monday for two points, and that Salvadoran planes made widespread attacks on Honduran territory.

A dispatch from Guatemala, which borders both countries, said Salvadoran officials reported some 1,000 Honduran troops had crossed the border into El Salvador. Sources in Tegucigalpa said the Honduran air force was available.

Unofficial reports said the Honduran air force was available. The Honduran government said it was not immediately known.

'We Are Happy To Be Ready' Says Commander Armstrong

CAPE KENNEDY, Fla. (AP) — The Apollo 11 astronauts spent the day before their trip to the moon reviewing the mission plan as servicing of their space ship continued flawlessly and ahead of schedule for Wednesday launch.

"We are happy to be ready to fly," said Neil A. Armstrong, the space shuttle commander, as he reviewed the mission plan.

At dawn Wednesday, 24 hours before their scheduled 9:32 a.m. ERT lift-off, Armstrong, Edwin E. Aldrin Jr. and Michael Collins were in their capsules to begin their most ambitious exploration.

The weather outlook was good. "The three of us have no fear of launching on the expedition," said Armstrong, set to become earth's first messenger on the moon. "I'm sure that American ingenuity and American craftsmanship have given us the best equipment that can be made available. We are happy to be ready to fly."

Janet Armstrong, the astronaut's wife, arrived during the night to be at the Cape when Apollo 11 was launched. The other wives stayed home in Houston, Tex.

Aldrin will follow Armstrong down the steps of their lunar lander. Collins remains in orbit overhead in the command ship, awaiting their return.

The astronauts, in sports clothes, were released as they answered questions.

"I plan to stay in the sun and read the flight plan—again," said Aldrin of their prelaunch activities. Collins said he had made available. We are happy to be ready to fly."

Wing Crack Sets Back C5A Plane

WASHINGTON (AP) — The controversial C5A super transport has suffered what could be its first major test failure—a wing cracked under pressure 25 per cent below the contract-specified level.

The Air Force disclosed Monday the wing cracked during ground static tests of a C5A airplane minus its assembly at the Marietta, Ga., plant of the Lockheed Georgia Co.

The impact of the break on the overall program, and why it occurred, is being assessed by the Air Force and contractor engineers. Completed models will continue test flights in the meantime.

The C5A—world's largest air transport—has been the focus of considerable criticism and expense because of soaring cost.

Under original plans, the Air Force intended in 1968 to buy 120 models for $1.1 billion but that has escalated by $1.5 billion, according to official estimates.

In the face of the criticism, a major Pentagon argument has been that the plane has capabilities exceeding virtually all contract specifications.

Goddard: Pioneer in Space

Rockville Hospital Notes

...vast reaches of space. I wish he were here now to share this moment. It belongs to him.

Goddard was a physicist and professor at Clark University in Worcester, Mass., when I first heard of him. In 1886, when he was 16, he read H.G. Wells' "War of the Worlds" which, as he would later write personally to Wells, "made a deep impression. The apell was complete about a year afterward, and I decided that what might constitute research" he called "high altitude research" was the most fascinating problem in existence.

"He devoted himself to that problem with prodigious energy for the rest of his life. It would cost him isolation, ridicule, and eventually years of his life. 'God pity a one-track man,' he wrote as he began his work.

Goddard began to experiment with small rockets as early as 1908. Eleven years later he published a paper entitled "A Method of Reaching Extreme Altitudes," which espoused the theory that rocket power could lift a large payload to great heights if the rocket were designed to use its fuel effectively. He was careful to mention the possibility of lunar landings only casually, lest he frighten away potential sponsors. But despite his almost indifferent mention of the subject, the press seized upon the paper with gross exaggeration. The headlines were all similar: "Moon Rocket to Reach Moon With New Rocket."

"I never lost the dream," his wife, Esther, has said. "He knew that he would build something that would go higher than anything had gone before, and that eventually man would explore space, with the moon only the first step."

interrupted us to read aloud from the New York Times a clear and descriptive prose. By 1940, Goddard had built a rocket that was very similar to the German V2 missiles which were to assault London three years later. Goddard and his neighbors, I suggested to Lindbergh that he visit this man Goddard in behalf of the fund and discuss his work.

Lindbergh did call and Goddard, quite surprised, invited him to come to Worcester.

In their meeting, Goddard confessed his vision of one day rearing into the reaches beyond. He explained the difference between rockets and the technique he believed could be employed for invading the unknown limits of space.

From this meeting, Lindbergh returned, impressed by the scientist and his ideas. We agreed that support should be obtained to underwrite Goddard's experiments. Lindbergh made the case to my father, Daniel, as I left to begin my duties as ambassador to Cuba. Daniel Guggenheim endorsed our proposals and agreed to provide the funds for a two-year period. After his death, the Daniel Guggenheim Foundation took up Goddard's work until 1941.

These grants made it possible for him to give up teaching and, for the first time, to devote his full energies to rocket research. They also enabled him to move from New England, where his neighbors regarded him as a nut, to Roswell, N.M., where he would have freedom, privacy and open space.

During the years that followed, I was able to observe the man and his work first hand. I was deeply touched by his modest, self-effacing manner, his cheerfulness and his optimism.

His disappointments were considerable. Once, in 1936, Lindbergh and I journeyed to see the rocket on test flight. It failed. He refused to accept it as anything more than a temporary setback, a problem to be solved. He did solve it, and later, in writing to explain what happened, he said, with that very plainness that marked his whole demeanor: "I have not yet forgotten the fact that the matter of the gasoline engine to my attention just at the time you and Cabot Lindbergh were here."

Board Formally Approves Emmerling as Principal

George J. Emmerling was formally appointed Manchester High School principal at last night's Board of Education meeting. Vice principal since 1968, he was informally and unanimously elected on July 8.

His promotion makes necessary the appointment of a vice principal and director of the Manchester Adult Evening School. Another vacancy has been created by the resignation, effective Aug. 15, of Sidney Cohen as occupational coordinator. He will become a consultant in teacher education in the State Department of Education Bureau of Vocational Education.

Superintendent of Schools Donald J. Hennigan recommended that the position of Director of Adult Basic Education, formerly held by the occupational coordinator, be made a separate position. He also went on record last night as saying he believes the existing openings can be filled from within the system, although they will be advertised as required by contract with the Manchester Education Association.

Dr. Hennigan reported that Emmerling has already recommended that vice principals be released to spend more time supervising teachers, with the cooperation of department chairmen. Mrs. Robert Pratt and Miss Helen L. Jelle, appointed June 17, will assume some administrative duties in supervising high school girls. Vice principal Lawrence Leonard will be in charge of sophomore boys and half the junior boys.

At that time, Charles A. Lindbergh was a guest in my home in Port Washington, N.Y. I had met him when he came to Roosevelt Field for his historic flight to Paris (from which, I anticipated, he would never return). He did get back, much to my surprise, and subsequently became a consultant for the Daniel Guggenheim Fund for the Promotion of Aeronautics. This was a fund created by my father to promote research and education in aeronautics and to help encourage flying as a means of transportation. I was then the fund's administrator.

Lindbergh and I had talked on several occasions about the potential of space flight. He had often expressed the opinion that airplanes, confined as they were to the earth's atmosphere, would ultimately prove too "limited" for the full scope of man's aspirations. We had discussed rocketry for its potential in delivering large quantities of mail over great distances.

On this particular day, we were discussing the work of the fund, when Mrs. Guggenheim Commander Neil A. Armstrong, left, if all goes well, will be the first human to set foot on a planet other than earth. He will stroll for about two hours and forty minutes—despite his distaste for exercise.

Michael Collins, center, command module pilot, would prefer anonymity (he dreads publicity.) He will stay in a 69-mile orbit of the moon while Armstrong and Aldrin fly down for man's first landing on the moon.

Edwin E. "Buzz" Aldrin Jr., right, lunar module pilot, will follow Armstrong onto moon's surface and feels humility at the prospect of becoming one of history's great explorers. NEA Color From NASA

This is an AP artist Ben Valdivieso's conception of how Apollo 11 Astronaut Neil Armstrong will plant the American flag in the moon's soil soon after stepping onto the lunar surface. The flag will be made of nylon, three by five feet, and will be attached to an eight-foot-long staff. Space officials said the flag was designed to look good despite the absence of a breeze in the moon's atmosphere to keep it unfurled. A spring wire mechanism will hold the flag at a right angle to its pole. Both flag and staff will be stowed in an aluminum tube attached to one of the moon lander's four legs. AP Color

Neil Armstrong met Janet, left, during his senior year at Purdue where she was a sorority beauty queen. They married in 1956 and are the parents of two sons.

Michael Collins met and married Patricia, right, from Boston while they were in France. She was working there for the U. S. Air Force. They are the parents of three, two daughters and a son. AP Color
