They All Should Live

The United States was dead in Vietnam last week totaling "only" 110, the lowest weekly figure this year.

It is still 110 deaths too many in a war for which the main outcome — that nobody is going to win — has already been determined.

Happily, there are some indications, in the new strategy now apparently in force for American troops to protect themselves and their positions, but not to go out on the usual "search and destroy" missions — that the casualty rate can be reduced some more.

Ever since the peace talks began in Paris, the logical first objective has been the achievement of a cease fire which would end the needless sacrifice of any more lives in a war already half-ended.

Now, although formal agreement on a cease fire seems as remote as ever, there has been some tacit progress toward a lowering of the scale of military activity. Evidence of such progress has led to revival, in the past few days, of the old theory that this may have to be one of those wars which just fades away, without the benefit of all the diplomatic rites. One way or another, the North Vietnamese, Vietnamese and North Vietnamese dying under their separate banners for their separate causes are grim and sad, and the lower the number becomes the greater a shame it seems they all cannot live.

Slow Down To Catch Up

The oldest argument in the economic world is the argument about which is the cart and which is the horse in an inflationary period. Does this or that sector of the economy promote inflation by grabbing too much for itself? Or does it really have a hard time just catching up in the mad inflationary race?

Lately there have been impressive statistics showing that although organized labor has achieved certain gains in real dollar income during the last four years, most and sometimes all of this gain has been eaten away by inflation. When the man who now gets perhaps $15 a week more than he did three years ago adds himself up at the end of his work, he finds that the cost of everything from food to taxes has taken all that $15 or perhaps more.

There seems no reason to doubt the accuracy of such statistics. It can be concluded, we think, that most of the income increase Americans have received lately has been cancelled out by increases in the cost of living.

Where the real argument comes of course, is in the remedy. One part of the argument looks back, and says it could have been predicted, when present wage scales were being negotiated, that these wage scales themselves would spark additional inflation which would, in turn, reach back and cancel out all the gain.

The other part of the argument looks forward, to a consideration of what should happen now, and says it has to be inevitable that, if higher wage scales are now sought and negotiated in order to give people a chance to catch up with inflation, that will give inflation itself another shot in the arm, and off we all will be again, to the race in which the ordinary wage earner always feels like a loser, and in which retired people do not even have a chance of holding their own.

Whichever way the argument looks, it is difficult to escape the conclusion that boosting wage scales in itself is no satisfactory answer.

But when you look into human nature, you know that such possible common sense and caution are not going to cool down the seeking of those who now feel themselves behind. In the race, some of the hourly figures sought and achieved by the skilled trades in some of their recent new contracts indicate clearly enough what the human urge is — to try to get out in front of the race, if possible, and run whatever risks that may entail of sparking increases in wages for everybody else and prices of goods and services for everybody.

Sooner or later, everybody tires of the effort to catch up or get ahead, and the ordinary people begin dealing with the situation by cutting down on their purchasing of goods and services. That is still the most effective, indeed the only, means of slowing down an economy which has begun to kid itself it can keep on expanding forever. If there is a slow down in time, the danger must be avoided, and between such slow downs and new wars we have managed, for more than 30 years now, to escape a real depression. One way to get more nearly even in the inflationary race is not to run so hard.

Diluting Democracy

Certain provisions of the Nixon Administration's bill to fight crime in the nation's capital, coming soon after the Justice Department's attempts to expand its writtapping powers, suggest a disturbing conclusion: That the Administration considers the lowering of traditions designed to protect individual rights a valid weapon against crime.

The most disturbing feature of the proposed new legislation calls for amending the 1968 Bail Reform Act to provide for "preventive detention of suspects accused of certain violent non-capital offenses."

Two apparent conditions: encourage the Justice Department to press for expansion of the bill's "preventive" provisions as well as to insure their trial appearance. First, in the Columbus, Ohio, case, where Federal courts dealt with crimes handled by state and local courts elsewhere, or crimes committed by state police released before trial are on the increase — despite the bail reform act, some judge continue to set high bonds who suspects they consider dangerous, even with little reason to believe they might flee to escape trial. The Justice Department thus contends the amendment of "preventive" detention might serve the dual purposes of reducing crime in the District and rationalizing the often arbitrary practice of setting unreasonably high bail in certain cases.

If expanding the preventive detention concept to some lesser crimes in the District of Columbia means a small step, it involves a major principle. By requiring the judge to make what amount to a pre-trial ruling on a suspect's criminality, it violates the tradition that the accused must be considered innocent until proven guilty. The decision to violate it can only be uncomfortable for a judge conscious of democratic legal traditions.

The fact that the decision to violate it is made by the judge routinely violates the tradition by setting unreasonably high bail is hardly an argument for crime rate dramatize the need for more effective law enforcement, they also give the nation the opportunity to return to traditions designed to protect individual rights. Overworked police and courts that result in unfair treatment of the guilty may result in unfair treatment of the innocent as well.

This a careful observation should be made between measures to improve the structure and mechanics of the judicial process (also included in the Administration's Washington, D.C., proposals) and those which threaten long protected individual rights.

For the moment, crime may well be reduced more effectively by more police, better trained, paid and equipped, and by more courtrooms and judges. But if more courtrooms and judges are added to insure speedy trials and conviction of the guilty, that by giving the current number of police and judges new powers to violate individual rights to privacy and freedom.

The day may arrive when the threat of crime grows so serious as to require reduced protection of individual freedom for both the law abiding and the criminal, conditions are not that bad now. As matters stand today, we would feel better if the Justice Department showed a greater sensitivity to the significance of plans to give judges and police more powers. If fear politics of crime is justified, the federal dilute democracy should be resisted with high intensity as possible. WALL STREET JOURNAL

LHRR May Have Answer To Continental Drift

By DR. I. M. LEVITZ, DIRECTOR

The Fels Planetarium of The Franklin Institute of Philadelphia has announced that the Laser Range-Finding Retro-Reflector (LHRR), its two-foot square laser-light reflector, made up of 100 quartz corner reflectors, is providing an answer to the basic question of the motions of the continents.

The LHRR is providing an answer to the basic question of the motions of the continents. The laser retro-reflector is housing back to the earth beams of light spotlighting the moon and the return of these light beams will provide inputs for one of the most sophisticated experiments ever attempted. This reflector has an array of corner reflectors, which are really simple devices that can be made by cutting the corner off a box or cube. The effect of the curvature of the earth is taken into account by the geometry of this corner reflector. It is that matter where the light comes from the corner must return in the same direction. Thus, if a laser light beam is focused on the retro-reflector in the Mt. Palomar Observatory, the laser light will return the beam right back at Mt. Palomar.

The objective of this experiment is to precisely measure the earth-moon distance. A preliminary measurement can be monitored to see whether it changes. If it does change, scientists can speculate on the cause of the change. The precise distance between the earth and the moon, and the motion each has toward or away from the other, will refine our knowledge concerning the moon's size and shape, variations in the length of the earth's day, movements of the earth's continents. With the laser retro-reflector, we may also be able to test gravitational theories and, perhaps, observe gravitational waves. The earth has been looked at the continents and have compared outlines. They appear to fit together, giving rise to speculation that at one time in the past, perhaps 250 million years ago, the continents formed a single block of land and since that time have drifted apart.

Effective as this means that this "punch of light" toward the moon. Actually, if the beam did not spread, it would be 60 inches in diameter — for a 60-inch diameter telescope will transmit this light to the moon. However, even these highly collimated or directed beams spread so that when the 60-inch beam reaches the moon it will be two and a half miles in diameter. Thus, the laser will be beaming to the moon "light pancakes" 10 feet in diameter.

The atomic clock governs the error involved in this determination. It can measure the two-way travel time to an accuracy within five feet in the total distance of about 480,000 miles. A 11th o u g h observatories throughout the world may aim laser beams at the lunar reflector, the experiments will be centered in the Catalina Mountains near Tucson, Ariz., using the 60-inch telescope operated by the Air Force and University of Arizona.

The use of laser reflectors to accurately measure distance is neither new nor confined to U.S. laboratories. The Soviet Union, France and other countries are engaged in similar experiments. Since the Soviets have launched several payloads on the moon, they may well have a laser range finder already in operation.

An fascinating question may be answered as a result of this experiment — that of continental drift. Scientists over the years have looked at the continents and have compared outlines. They appear to fit together, giving rise to speculation that at one time in the past, perhaps 250 million years ago, the continents formed a single block of land and since that time have drifted apart.

But there they were face to face, giving it to each other. One of them was a representative who has always almost automatically been ranked as an all-around liberal. The other was a representative who has special reason for concentrating his interest on one particular phase of civil rights.

What was between these two representatives was a mutual charge of desertion. The all-around liberal was accusing the civil rights liberal of having deserted the liberal position in the particular instance of some civil rights measures.

Somewhat, two representatives who, by all normal odds and expectations should have been perfectly harmonious in their heretofore voting had found discord and enmity between them.

And perhaps the bitterest feelings left by this General Assembly were those between liberal legislators who placed single block of land and since that time have drifted apart. It is such a drift in continuing, the motion is so minute that in the time that this problem has engaged scientists there has been no way of measuring to determine whether the drift is real. The laser retro-reflector may resolve this problem.

Dr. Julian indicated that at the workshop gathering Friday at the University of Bridgeport, "There are not less than 2,000 people dependent on narcotics, 6,000 who are classified as drug abusers and 11,000 who expect to meet with drugs in Connecticut."

In comparison, he said, 120,000 persons in the state have been alcoholics at least 5 to 10 years.

Charges Withdrawn

HARTFORD (AP) — Hartford authorities have decided not to press a number of charges against a captured burglar.

The decision will enable state authorities to press their charges against Arthur DeLoe, 34, of Bridgeport, who escaped Thursday from the state prison farm at Enfield.

State charges against him include robbery with violence, aggravated assault, escape from prison, theft of an automobile and binding and gagging.

Who deserted whom first? Perhaps what went on behind the scenes had a different timetable, but what we observed in the open was that the special

Shopping Center Plans

HARTFORD (AP) — A group of real estate dealers in a predominantly Negro and Puerto Rican Northside neighborhood plans to build a $1 million neighborhood shopping center in the heart of the district.

Bradford J. Howard, president of the newly formed Inner-City Research and Development Corp., announced Thursday that the planned structure will occupy 3 1/2 acres in an area fronting on Barbour Street, the main thoroughfare.

Howard said the shopping center will emphasize products and services best suited to the neighborhood and expected to be in operation by the fall of 1970.

July Not Wettest

WINDSOR LOCKS (AP) — Despite the rain and spalled sidewalks, July rainfall was far short of the record for the month set back in 1967. In July of that year 13.76 inches of rain fell in comparison with only 5.7 inches that fell last month.

Yet last month's rainfall was 2.18 inches more than the average for the month. According to the Weather Bureau, annual rainfall was 217 inches below normal on July 1, but the deficiency was more than made up for in the remaining 20 days, to leave a surplus of three hundredths of an inch.

If July was humid, it was also the coldest July on record since 1902. The average temperature was 70.6 degrees, 2.8 degrees lower than the normal.

Second Offer Rejected By Ironworkers

MERIDEN, Conn. (AP) — About 1,200 striking ironworkers from throughout the state for the second time have rejected a management contract offer.

They were here Friday night was nearly 2 to 1 against the proposal. Albert Krasnow, chairman of the negotiation committee representing Connecticut construction firms, called the latest rejection "absolutely ridiculous."

The Connecticut State Public Safety and Security Council, the Association of General Contractors and the Ironworkers Union have offered increased wages and benefits, Krasnow said.

Earlier this week a tentative agreement on contract terms was reached after a 24-hour lockout by the State Labor Department headquarters in Waterbury.

The Ironworkers Union had asked for a wage increase of 25 per cent over the contract period. Under the old contract, members receive $3.05 per hour in direct wages plus fringe benefits.

Officials of Ironworkers Union in Hartford and New Britain were not available for comment.

Strike Back At Mildew

By AP Newswriters

What grows into a powdery or downy mildew on plants and temperatures where the humidity is over 70 per cent.

Catching it early is essential to preventing permanent damage to clothing, linens, paint and wood and leather goods.

People who live in air-conditioned homes should be sure to keep people who don't, because mildew can plague air-conditioned homes too.

It is also advisable to leave the covers off hot basins, to keep storing garments in tightly closed bags and to be careful about putting clothes and cleaning away when they're not thoroughly dry.

Washing clothes in hot water and then drying them thoroughly will help to prevent mildew from returning.

A man of mass guilt and corporate reputation has decided the American people. For he is from me to discourage in the conviction of personal culpability, with an attendant individual sentence for those who are necessary to Christian conversion and redemption of the soul.

Some would have us hang our heads simply for being relatively affluent. Americans, blessed with material abundance. Unless we personally are guilty of refusal to share with the needy, we are being uncharitable. We can and should be concerned—sympathetic with the victims of social abuses and deriving no comfort from deriving to correct the causes. But this is by no means suggested, corporate guilt or masochistic self-flagellation.

New Salvation Army Head

First Non-British Chief

By JOHN GALE
The London Observer
ERIC WICKBERG, 65, the newly elected leader of the Salvation Army, is Swedish and the first general in the 100-year-old organization's history not born in Britain or the British Commonwealth.

He is tall, bearded, with a rather old-fashioned cowboy haircut. He is dressed in a military uniform, the kind of a bow from the past. Yet he is relaxed and quietly confident. His office in the Salvation Army's new international headquarters in London is modest and his uniform at first glance is little different from that of other Salvationists. His English is perfect, with the faintest accent. He has been in London as chief of staff (second-in-command of the Salvation Army) for eight years, and came to the post in 1964 when he was trained in London between 1923 and 1925, and first job was in Scotland. He was in London again from 1934 to 1939. He has four children and two grand-children.

He is a good organizer, a fine chess player, and some of his hobbies include golf, tennis, and fishing. He has been in the Salvation Army for 40 years and has held several posts of increasing responsibility. He was in the Salvation Army for 10 years before he came to London in 1964. He has been in the Salvation Army for 10 years before he came to London in 1964.

Thousands Cheer Nixon

Upon Bucharest Arrival

Workers, who ordinarily quit at 1 p.m. on Saturday, were let off several hours early to be in the streets to greet the American president.

The "slowdown" of the motorcade meant that the early part of the program would be set back. But a Romanian television announcer told his audience: "The people want to greet President Nixon, so we are forced to speed the speed of the convoy."

Dense crowds forced the motorcade to stop once. The spectators applauded and shouted.

Nixon appeared delighted. He stood up in the car, hands held high in a broad grin on his face. Besides him on the motorcade were a number of American officials, including the American ambassador to Bucharest, William Sullivan.

This Nixon probably set the record for a presidential motorcade in Europe. In the past, Nixon's motorcade in Bucharest was the longest in the world. It lasted for 10 hours.

Food Prices Still Rising, Experts Say

Major Factor in Soaring Living Costs

Prices for meats eaten in restaurants are likely to increase by more than last year's 5.2 percent, the forecast said.

As has been the case all year, meat is a major factor. The increase in meat prices is expected to continue well above last year, the department says. Possibly lower prices for other foods may occur because they are being produced in larger quantities, the report said.

The wholesale report earlier in the week noted a drop in prices paid for cattle, but at that time agriculture economists cautioned that the month's figures might be a prelude to a price jump of 4.5 percent in June over the previous year. Government and industry experts have said a heavy appetite for beef and will increase the price of the commodity.

There were predictions that cattle production would increase in 1969. It has been a record year for the industry, with a 10 percent increase in output.

Sen. Murphy Has Erased His Image as a 'Hooper'

By RICHARD BERGHOLZ

LOS ANGELES—In all the years he has been a congressional member, George Murphy never could join the Los Angeles Country Club because of the no-actors-allowed rule. But now that Murphy is U. S. senator, he has an honorarium of $100,000 to buy a membership in the exclusive club. Murphy is playing the part of a senator, not an actor.

He is a strong backer of President Nixon's plan for an Anti-Ballistic Missile System and in his view, anyone who matters loosely lumped into the "law and order" category. He particularly admires the way his longtime friend and former co-worker, Gov. Reagan, is handling the campus unrest issue here.

In recounting this, the senator conveys the idea that an important transition has taken place. When he was elected in 1964, the first of the movie colony to "captivate" the Senate.

Recently Murphy has added to his basic speech an ardent plea for the "law and order" issue. He has also been seen in the hallways of the Senate.

Murphy really will not be a senator in the old-fashioned sense. He is a movie star who has been in the Senate for the last five years.

There are not many senators now. He is generally thought well of by his colleagues. He is a Republican. Thomas J. Kuchel's defeat last year.

And, from a politician's point of view, that is the ideal position to be in, when you are seeking reelection.

A Father's Anguished Decision

NEW YORK (AP)—The court never even made the case. That's why it differs in the memory.

The name is different, but this is the way the father felt. He was born in China and now lives in New York. He has three children, one of them a son, 11.

Recently he gave the boy a used motorcycle. The law forbids a child to drive on the street, but he can in a park. So one day the son and some of his friends took the bike out to ride. He immediately to the station house and told the police.

They were approached by some other boys—white—who demanded the bike. The boy said he didn't want to give it up. He was hit and he walked home. The smaller boys gave up and surrendered the bike.

The older boys wheeled it away, but the son followed immediately. He went to the station house and told the police.

He saw them take the bike to an apartment house. He went to the apartment house and saw the boy. He was furious. He called police.

The officers went to the apartment house and saw the boy. He was furious. He called police.

Mariner 7 Still Sending Good Photos

The time of the start was not crucial, a spokesman said. "It was important, however, that the spacecraft be launched during a period of high solar activity. This was necessary to ensure that the spacecraft would be able to communicate with Earth during its mission."

Mariner 7's camera path along Mars' white south polar ice cap, an interesting area glimpsed from a distance in the first photograph taken on Thursday.

Scientists hope that Mariner 7 will be able to examine the atmosphere and clouds of Mars. The road from the airport to the launch pad was lined with soldiers armed with automatic rifles. Above them were the flags of the United States and Romania's red, yellow and blue national flag fluttered.

'Build More Cities' He Sees U.S. Population Explosion by Year 2,000

By ALEXANDER ALTBACH
The Los Angeles Times
LOS ANGELES—C. V. Wood is a manufacturer. He makes cities. In the process he also makes a great deal of money.

"Look, there are going to be another 100 million more Americans in the next 20 years, and they're going to need a place to live," Wood says in a light tone. "There are only three ways to grow: you continue, taking off a person a cabinet."

"There's urban redevelopment. That's where you tear down the homes of 100 people and put in high-rise apartments for 10,000, destroying a city's balance."

"There's urban sprawl, just miles of patchwork growth that's ruined every city in America. Developments spring up where they weren't meant to be and the city is always 10 years behind in roads, schools and public services."

Here Wood pauses to sweep a contemptuous arm across the city. "You can build an entirely new city. That's what Wood's company, McCulloch Oil Corp., has done at Lake Havasu City in Arizona and is doing at Wildcat Islands. The company more or less fell into the city building business."

It started in the late 1940s when Los Angeles International Airport built a road through a street from a chain saw and outdoors motor plant owned by a doctor. P. McCulloch and his office buildings followed and McCulloch's property taxes soared to $5,000 a year.

"He had some land, 300 acres, at Lake Havasu. He was using it in connection with logging outwards in the lake. He took care of moving his plant there, because you can't manufacture on a land that costs you $100,000 a year in taxes," Wood says.

Wood was then head of his own engineering firm, but he just finished building Disney land.

"We flew over the place and I told him he had to be out of his mind. There was a damn thing there. It was 40 miles to the nearest town—and it had only 6,000 people."

Saturday afternoon," said the Weather Bureau at midnight.

Westerners advised small craft from Moorehead Bay, Mass., not to venture far from shore until Anna was clear and posed no further risk.

At dusk Friday Anna was steadily strengthening and winds between 9 and 10 m.p.h. The storm's circular winds had taken form by 10 p.m. and were accompanied by a tropical depression off the African coast. Anna was an intense Category 1 hurricane, but it was still a tropical storm.

Shortly after it became a hurricane, it was still a tropical storm. It was still a tropical storm.

GOP Lead 103 In Voter Total

Manchester Republicans now hold a 103 lead over Democrats, more than yesterday morning.

The increase results from a three-hour enrollment session, held yesterday afternoon by Manchester, Ariz., and has a third, Pueblo West, in Colorado. Wood figures the company can add two more million voters to its list of registered voters to switch their party enrollment to Republican.

Changes from one party to the other become effective in an article about vacation spots, the French newspaper Le Monde.

A total of 26 unaffiliated voters signed up with a party. It became Republicans and 8 became Democrats.

In addition, 11 Democrats switched to Republicans and 7 Republicans switched to Democrats. The net result was that the Republicans will be effective until Feb. 1, 1970.

That's what Wood's company, McCulloch Oil Corp., has done at Lake Havasu City in Arizona and is doing at Wildcat Islands. The company more or less fell into the city building business."

Cardinal at Concordia

Richard Cardinal Cushing, Roman Catholic archbishop of Boston, will speak tomorrow at an ecumenical service at 11 a.m. at Concordia Lutheran Church.

This special event, which is open to the public, is one of the 75th anniversary observances of Concordia being held this year. After the service there will be a reception in Kaiser Hall of the church.

The Rev. O. Kari Olander, president of the New England Synod of the Lutheran Church in America, and also participate in the service.

So that more people can hear the archbishop, Concordia has installed a public address system in Kaiser Hall, and is opening a room near the nave which will seat about 40. All area clergy have been invited to attend the event.

Twins' Manager Settles for Shirt Off Back Box Manager Fines Yaz For Loafing on Basepaths

YOU'RE OUT — Carl Yastrzemski, Boston Red Sox outfielder is called out at the plate trying to score from third on an infield bouncer to pitcher John Odom. Catcher Larry Haney made the tag.

NEW YORK (AP) — Dick Williams took $500 out of Carl Yastrzemski's pocket. Billy Martin, settled for the shirt off Earl Weaver's back.

Twins' Manager Williams yanked Yastrzemski for loafing on the basepaths during the Red Sox 4-3 loss to Oakland Friday night and then fined the American League's 1968 batting champion $500.

Yastrzemski was taken out for not hustling, and he was fined $500 for loafing on the basepaths. "I'm not worried about the $500," he said. "I'm worried about the fact that I'm being called out."

Divisional Race Tightened, Astros Are in Contention

NEW YORK (AP) — The top of the National League's West Division is getting more crowded than a subway during the rush hour. But any veteran of the commuter wars can tell you there's always room for one more sardine on the Houston Astros.

The fifth place Astros won their sixth consecutive game Friday night, whipping Montreal 5-3 on a pair of two-run homers by Curt Bleafly and a bases-empty shot by Jimmy Wynn. The victory, combined with Atlanta's 5-4 loss at New York, left the Astros a mere 2½ games from the lead.

Baseball's Single Players Are Hits Off the Field

NEW YORK (NEA) — Ken Holtzman, the tall, dark and good-looking Chicago Cubs pitcher, was financially trapped. Three months of unanswered phone calls, letters and frantic searches for a "bachelor" who was a single man in Chicago, Illinois, were finally trapped. Three months of unanswered phone calls, letters and frantic searches for a "bachelor" who was a single man in Chicago, Illinois, were finally trapped.

Ken Holtzman looked as if he were a party man. He was wearing a tuxedo and had a big smile on his face. He was surrounded by a group of people who were looking at him with interest. He was the center of attention.

Bill Williams, Ironman Cub: 'I'm Lucky to Be in Majors'

NEW YORK (AP) — There are kindergarten teachers and garbage collectors, hangmen and kings who never miss a day's work. Bill Williams, who captured the batting title last season with a .345 average, is one of the few players who play every day.

Williams, who is 33 years old, has played in the major leagues for 14 years. He has been a member of the Chicago Cubs, St. Louis Cardinals, and New York Yankees. He is known for his durability and consistency.

Darkness Halts Two-Light Game

Legion Finds Key, Trounces Glastonbury, 12-0

Key Errors Help Locals To Victory

FINDING THE KEY TO success, Manchester American Legion trounced Glastonbury last night at Mt. Lebanon 12-0. It was the second straight win for the Legion over the Stars.

Manchester unloaded the scoring power on Glastonbury as they scored once in the first inning, added three in the fourth and seven runs in the fifth inning. Brian Maher lured the pitcher, allowing only two hits, striking out seven and walked only three.

The locals scored their first run when head-of-house Crispino walked but was caught off first on a pick off. Al Nade rounded to second and Crispino walked but was caught off first on a pick off.

Veteran Jets Defeat All-Stars, Quarterback Cook Shakes Defense

CHICAGO (AP) — Joe Namath was a thousand yards from a touchdown when he got enough passes out of his system to lead the New York Jets to a 26-24 football thriller over the College All-Stars.

In the last play of the game, Cook hooked up with Namath for a 26-yard touchdown. The Jets led 24-24 with 1:15 left in the game.

The Jets' defense held the All-Stars to 24 points. The Jets' offense scored 26 points. The game was a thrilling contest.

Cool, Quiet Bert Green Heads Field

HARRISON, N.Y. (AP) — Bert Green, a cool, quiet competitor, is not one to count his birds before they hatch.

Green, who is 34 years old, has won several championships. He is known for his calm and collected demeanor. He is a professional pilot.

Namath Shields Beautiful Face Meets Joe's Return

CHICAGO (AP)—Joe Namath wound up a disappointing evening at the College All Star game Friday night by getting into a scuffle with a young fan who tried to steal the chin strap from his helmet.

Namath was seen in a scuffle with a young fan. The fan tried to steal the chin strap from Namath's helmet. The incident occurred after the game.

Checked Flag Meets Joe's Return

THOMPSON (AP)—The rain plagued month of July took its toll again and rescheduled the racing at the Thompson Speedway. Sunday Aug. 2, the Twin Tiger feature events will be on the program with the fifty lap features for the modified division.

The racing was rescheduled due to rain. The event is the Twin Tiger feature. The race will be held at Thompson Speedway.

Mooney-Hooper

Miss Callista Edyth Hooper of Concord, N. H., became the bride of Allen Richard Mooney of Vernon Saturday afternoon, July 5, at the First Congregational Church of Concord.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Laurence E. Hooper of Concord. The bridegroom is a son of Mr. and Mrs. Richard A. Mooney of 33 Sunset Ter.

The Rev. Steven Wardwell of Providence, R. I., performed the double-ring ceremony. Dudley Terrill was organist and soloist.

The bride was given in marriage by her father. She wore a full-length gown of silk organza accented with lace, designed with portrait neckline re-embroidered with seed pearls, long tapered sleeves coming to points at the wrists, bouffant skirt, and detachable chapel-length wattleu train edged in matching lace. Her veil of silk illusion was arranged from a matching headpiece, and she carried a colonial bouquet of rosebuds and daisies.

Miss Elaine Heath of Washington, D. C., was maid of honor. Bridesmaids were Miss Kathleen Mooney of Vernon, sister of the bridegroom; Miss Diane Carroll of Providence, and Miss Frances Mabry of Kittery, Maine. The flower girl was Susan Lang of Madison, cousin of the bride.

The attendants wore full-length gowns fashioned with bodices and cuffs of the long sleeves accented with floral appliques. The honor attendant and the flower girl were dressed in yellow and the bridesmaids in green. They carried colonial bouquets of daisies and rosebuds.

Donald Mooney of Vernon served as his brother's best man. Ushers were Hugh Boynton and Michael Bover, both of Providence, and Bernie S. Hobbs of Woodhaven, N.Y.

Mrs. Hooper wore a blue lace dress with matching accessories and a white orchid. The bridegroom's mother wore an orchid color floral dress with white accessories and an orchid.

A reception for 125 was held at the church. Mrs. Mooney wore a yellow dress with white accessories for her wedding trip. The couple are living at 115 Waterman St., Providence, R.I.

Mrs. Mooney is a 1966 graduate of Concord High School and a 1968 graduate of Bryant College, Providence. She is employed as secretary for the Providence District Nursing Association. Mr. Mooney, a 1965 graduate of Rockville High School, graduated in June from Bryant College where he majored in business administration.

MR. AND MRS. ALLEN RICHARD MOONEY

Engaged

The engagement of Miss Ellen Dorothy Firestone of Manchester to Roger Joseph Merriman of Hartford has been announced by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Morris Firestone of 27 Coburn Rd.

Her fiancé is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Elliot Merriman of Englewood, N.J.

Miss Firestone is employed as a staff nurse by the Visiting Nurses Association of Hartford. She is a 1963 graduate of Manchester High School and a 1967 graduate of the University of Connecticut School of Nursing.

Mr. Merriman is employed as a project engineer by Frank Briscoe Co., Newark. For six years he served in the U. S. Army National Guard, Teaneck, N.J. He is a graduate of Fort Lee (N.J.) High School and the State University of New York, School of Engineering, in Farmingdale, N.Y.

The wedding is planned for Dec. 28 in Manchester.

'My Sons' Will Get A Mother

HOLLYWOOD — (NEA) — Hollywood can be a cruel place. I was there when they ripped off George DeNormand's boutonniere.

This heartless act took place on the set of "My Three Sons." It should have been a happy occasion. Fred MacMurray and Beverly Garland were getting married.

The whole Douglas family was there — Don Grady was his father's best man and the kid brothers were watching and Cole cried and William Demarest put on his best sour face. And Beverly made a lovely bride, as she came down the aisles.

That was the problem, that coming-down-the-aisle routine. The playback played back the wedding march, and Beverly walked down with the slow step all brides can manage automatically. She was accompanied by George DeNormand, who was playing her uncle, there for the sole purpose of giving the bride away. It was a silent bit, and DeNormand was cast because he looked distinguished.

But he couldn't manage the slow walk. He would trip, or stumble, or falter.

"Cut," said director Fred DeCordova.

And they would try again. Finally, they took one of the other distinguished-looking extras—Tony Regan—and tried him. He got the walk on his first attempt.

It was then that the assistant director went over to where DeNormand was sitting—he had traded places with Regan—and stripped him of his boutonniere. He pinned it on Regan.

When you watch this show next fall on CBS, see if you can spot the first uncle. He'll be sitting in the third row, looking sheepish. There will be no flower in his lapel.

The addition of Miss Garland as MacMurray's wife, and a little girl as her daughter, is not leading to a corresponding subtraction in the cast. Everybody else in the My Three Sons family stays, too.

Julie Driscoll is among guests on ABC's "Masters of Pop: Innocence, Anarchy and Soul," Thursday 9-10

"We've finally got a larger cast than Peyton Place," says producer Edmund Hartmann. "We're not dropping anybody—we're just getting a wider lens."

Hartmann, like everybody else connected with the show, had dropped in to watch the wedding. After all, when a show has been going for 10 years and the star finally takes a bride, it's an event.

"Beverly is right for him," one of the crew said.

She's happy about it, too. She's one of Hollywood's nicest ladies and a capable actress, and it's good to see her fitting into such a successful show. She thinks she's very lucky.

"So many girls tried out for it," she says. "I was afraid all the heavy dramatic things I'd done would hurt my chances. When I met Fred MacMurray, I told him it was really my story — I'd married a widower with children, I raised them and now I'm a grandmother."

Beverly and her real husband, Fillmore Crank, have two of their own, too. I wondered whether that was in the cards for her and her television husband. "Maybe later," she said. "Fred says he did the new-father shtick when Don Grady had triplets last year."

Fred's real wife, June Haver, and their twin daughters were on the set for the wedding. June said she had "mixed emotions" watching her husband marry another woman, "but at least I'm glad she's a blonde."

When the minister pronounced the words that tied the knot and Fred kissed Beverly, he waited until DeCordova said "Cut" and then quickly turned to June — you know how it is.

Next Season, Wrinkled Prunes

By JERR YBUCK

AP Television-Radio Writer
HOLLYWOOD (AP) — "Laugh-In" producer Paul Keyes leaned back in his chair and said, "Last season we opened with Richard Nixon and closed with Billy Graham. How're we going to top that?"

The question was really rhetorical because Keyes already knows how he hopes to top it.

He has some guests in mind for cameo appearances in the opening show in September that will be just what Beautiful Downtown Burbank needs. The arrangements have not been made yet.

NBC's "Laugh-In," No. 1 in the ratings all year, has added a new dimension to the use of guest stars with its cameo shots.

"We've already got Peter Sellers and Michael Caine," said Keyes, a big, deeply tanned man with white hair and aluminum-framed glasses. The show doesn't go into production until Aug. 12 but because Caine was in town his lines had been taped that day.

"We're introducing a new tag line this season—'Wrinkle your prune,'" Keyes said. "We did it 12 ways today with Michael Caine. He said one, 'She'll wrinkle your prune.' What's it mean? I don't know, but it's funny."

Keyes said the cameo role had always been in the format, but the superstars didn't begin appearing until John Wayne

Millette Relaxes On 'Guiding Light'

NEW YORK (NEA) — When Millette Alexander is seen by several million people each day on the soap opera, "Guiding Light," it's about as alone as she ever gets.

Millette is married to James Hammerstein (the son of lyricist Oscar Hammerstein) and lives in a house that includes 28 bodies, counting six dogs and seven cats.

Crisis is just a normal, everyday word for this humorous, bright, pretty actress. She and Jimmy are the parents of four children. The household help consists of a family of nine, grandmother and five children.

"When I go to the Supermarkets," she laughs, "they see me coming and assign two clerks just to help me."

Her children all play electric instruments. "You drive down the highway and you can see the house reverberate. If I were to ask for one thing in life, it would be a little quiet. The cameras and lights and confusion in a TV studio are nothing compared to what I have at home."

The house Millette lives in is in upstate New York, about an hour's drive from the city. It's on a hill overlooking the Hudson River and was built by noted architect Stanford White for a hunting lodge.

In her spare time (and the wonder is that Millette can find any), she copies works of art in needlepoint. "It's quiet work," she says. "I grow things, too, because that's quiet. The plants don't talk back."

Cyril Ritchard Set for Musical

Cyril Ritchard makes a special guest appearance in "Hans Brinker or The Silver Skates," the two-hour original musical which will be broadcast on NBC during the 1969-70 season.

Ritchard portrays the innkeeper, Mr. Kleef, in the show, based on the Mary Mapes Dodge classic about a poor Dutch boy's attempts to win an ice skating race and to seek help for his ailing father.

UGGAMS SHOW

"The Leslie Uggams Show," a one-hour blending of Miss Uggams' singing and dancing skills with topical comedy, satirical sketches and exciting guest stars, will premiere Sept. 28 on CBS.

Ed Sullivan Salutes 60's

Ed Sullivan will salute the 10 years of "The Swinging, Soulful Sixties," presenting in person many of the entertainers who became stars during the decade, on a special edition of "The Ed Sullivan Show" Dec. 21 on CBS.

In addition, the broadcast, drawing upon the more than 500 Ed Sullivan programs presented during the decade, will show such memorable entertainment highlights of the '60s as the debuts of The Beatles, Barbara Streisand and The Supremes.

MITZI SHOW

"Mitzi's 2nd Special," a musical-variety hour starring Mitzi Gaynor, will be telecast on NBC Oct. 13. Like that first special, "Mitzi's 2nd Special" will feature songs, dances and comedy sketches spotlighting Miss Gaynor, who will be joined by a male guest star to be announced.
