ACCIDENTS
 Donald Lanch, 46, of East Hartford, charged with driving without a license and issued a written warning for driving after drinking, following a minor accident on the W. Middle St. near Wickham Park, today at 1:15 a.m. The driver of the other car involved was Stanley Cieshowski, 38, of Springfield, Mass. Court date for Lanch is Nov. 17.

As the result of investigation into an accident on Center St., near Summit St., this morning at 12:40 police have issued a summons for the arrest of Joseph DeFazio, 36, of 188 Bissell St., and charged him with reckless driving, evading responsibility, failure to meet requirements for a registration and improper use of registration plates. Police say DeFazio left an accident on Center St. on foot. The accident involved a car DeFazio was allegedly driving and a car driven by Kevin Whigman, 19, of 287 Woodbridge St. Bissell St. is a one-way street. Whigman car was treated and released at Manchester Memorial Hospital where she was taken after the accident. Both cars were towed.

Donald Anderson, 39, of 261 Green Rd., charged with failure to grant the right of way, after an accident on Summit St., near Hollister, yesterday at 7:32 p.m. The other car involved was driven by Sara Chaston of 387 Summit St. Her car was towed. Anderson will appear in court Nov. 17.

A written warning for failure to drive right was issued to Keith Swain, 17, of 29, Candewood Dr., following a one-car accident on Durkin St., near Brookfield, yesterday at 11:15 a.m. Apparently Swain lost control of his car and struck some fencing and shrubbery on Durkin St.

Police say that car trouble caused Nicholas Carlo, 38, of Vernon, to lose control of his car yesterday on Spruce St., near Bissell, around 7:40 a.m. Carlo's car struck a no parking sign.

Nixon Urged to Set Date For Bringing Boys Back
 WASHINGTON (AP)—President Nixon should declare a cease-fire in Vietnam and accelerate the withdrawal of U.S. troops, two Democratic congressmen declared Thursday.

Rep. Robert N. Givins of Connecticut and Edward I. Koch of New York offered a resolution that would have the President announce a cease-fire effective at a date of his choosing and set a timetable for his own removal of all American troops.

"We believe that the time has come for those of us with differing views on the conflict in Vietnam to reach agreements as to the best method of terminating our involvement, and that, in respect of our position, we are of one mind that the further expenditure of American lives in Vietnam is intolerable," the resolution said.

than a straw in the wind," said Douglas Hall, long an attorney for radical and liberal causes. "It was the whole damn tree," Stevens defended the appointment, just as he defended the earlier appointments of two key administrative aides—one white and one a Negro—both of whom had police records.

"As a policeman," Stevens said, "an ex-policeman, I should be more open minded to rehabilitation. We believe in it more than anyone."

In Paletta, Stevens said, he found a man who "will reach people that intellectuals in the community that I don't reach."

"They are one piece of society as well as you, or me, or anyone else."

The problem in the past, Bissell said, was that City Hall had lost touch with the common man.

That, as much as law and order, was the reason he was elected for two years to an office once held by Hubert H. Humphrey, he said.

"The people wanted someone they could associate with," Stevens said, "a guy like me with three or four kids, a house in an average neighborhood, a guy trying to make his paycheck, just like anyone else."

Whelock Whitney, investment broker, board member of the Minnesota Twins and chairman of the Urban Coalition's task force on police-community relations, got a chance to experience the extent of the mayor's support shortly after Plymouth Avenue.

Whitney's committee met with the mayor to discuss a written warning for driving after drinking, following a minor accident on the W. Middle St. near Wickham Park, today at 1:15 a.m. The driver of the other car involved was Stanley Cieshowski, 38, of Springfield, Mass. Court date for Lanch is Nov. 17.

Ellington Teen-Agers Formerly on Heroin Tell Audience of Their Bad Trip

By JUNE LANTON
 Three teen-agers, just a few weeks removed from an excitement which required a "fix" of heroin daily, told it like it had been to a Vernon-area audience this week.

About a hundred teen-agers and adults attended the third and final meeting of the series on drug abuse sponsored by the Vernon, Ellington and Toland Junior Women's Clubs held Wednesday at the Ellington High School.

Three youngsters were there unexpectedly. They came with the main speaker, Jack Cohen, coordinator for the state's Division of Alcohol and Drug Dependence.

He introduced them as "my brothers and my sister," adding that he had an arm around the nearest of the trio, "We feel family."

He shares an intimate knowledge of drug addiction with his charges at the Blue Hills Clinic in Meriden. Many are ex-addict, an ex-15-year addict, he might add.

He got involved in the rehabilitation program on a job he's working during a year-long voluntary stay at the federal hospital in Lexington, Ky. After taking in own four-and-a-half-month cure, he began learning to help others by becoming a task force on police-community relations, got a chance to experience the extent of the mayor's support shortly after Plymouth Avenue.

Richard, Wash. (AP)—Jimmie Rank wanted to marry Lillian Harville but he figured it was only right to get her son's consent.

"You're both over 21," said son, Dr. L.B. Harville, "and I couldn't stop it."

"You know," Jimmie said later, "I guess he was right on both counts."

So Jimmie, 100, and Mrs. Harville, 98, were wed Thursday in the lounge of the Heather House Nursing Home.

Love at first sight when they met at the nursing home two years ago?

"I didn't think I'd get strung up," Jimmie said, "but I started shooting 'it every day.'"

"You lose your memory," you're just not sleep nights," Jimmie said, "but you still and when you're strung out you don't worry about your stealing from."

Cohen stepped in here, laughing and exclaiming that Jimmie would ruin his program. He said he didn't agree about legalizing marijuana, but that this is how Jimmie feels and he may or may not change his mind, but Jimmie is of the opinion it should be under tight control, but not made such a serious offense.

Cohen concluded his statements with the observation that "it is a monumental task to harmonize and hopefully make a happy human being."

A nurse asked him after the meeting if he needed workers. His answer was to give her his telephone number, enthusiastically.

Psychoanalysts Seek Study of Pornography

By BRIAN SULLIVAN
AP Science Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — An officer of the American Psychoanalytic Association has suggested that the federal government set up a national commission to study whether to legalize pornography in the United States.

Dr. Bernard L. Paella, chairman of the association's public information committee, made the suggestion after a seminar on pornography and violence at which participants said the dangers of pornography to society were minimal.

"Psychoanalysts in general," he said, "believe that there is no direct relationship between pornography and crime and violence."

But because there is great controversy over the subject, Dr. Paella said, a major national study should be conducted to seek clear answers.

Such a commission, Dr. Paella said, should include a psychiatrist, a sociologist, an anthropologist, an educator, opponents of legalized pornography and others.

The pornography seminar was held for science writers by the association. Dr. Paella said, to explore analysts' viewpoints on current problems. Part of the tendency in the profession to "move away from isolationist confrontation" with social issues.

Dr. Paella, chief of the child psychiatry division at Roosevelt Hospital in New York, suggested the pornography question in an interview Wednesday after the seminar.

In Denmark, he said, legislation of pornography followed such a commission study.

Disputing the argument that pornography can lead to antisocial behavior in children, Dr. Aaron H. Kaman, director of psychiatric training at a New York mental health agency, commented:

"I have never seen an instance of pathological behavior in any child that could be attributed to pornography. That I can say categorically, I have never seen an instance in which this is true."

Agreeing, Dr. Abram Blau, psychiatrist and chief of child psychiatry at the division at Mt. Sinai Hospital in New York, added that even the definition of pornography is unclear.

"I don't know what it is... I don't know what it is with the modern trend in nudity."

The analysts agreed that what is important for children and adolescents is not exposure to pornography, but their family life. Given a strong home life, reasonable parents, reasonable freedom, Dr. Paella said, "I don't think it matters what pornography they see, really."

But Dr. Paella said that before any legalization of pornography takes place, society should be aware of many questions: How to handle sex education in schools? What effect would it have on marriage? What about a person's aesthetic values? "And a multitude of other questions."

Dr. Paella listed some of the reasons for legalizing pornography offered by the commission in Denmark:

Scientists Check On Shrinkage Of Mediterranean

By JOLLA, CALIF. (AP) —

Scientists are preparing to test a theory that the Mediterranean sea, now a modest seventh in size among the earth's salt water bodies, once was a vast ocean lapping at the Himalayan Mountains.

Dr. Terrence Edgar, a research geologist at Scripps Institution of Oceanography, said forthcoming comparisons of Mediterranean and Indian Ocean bottom sediments may bolster the belief that both were part of the same watery expanse 70 million years ago.

Some scientists theorize that the Mediterranean once constituted a titanic body they call the "Tethyan Sea."

They believe shifts in the earth's land areas jammed what are now lower Asia and India into the present Asiatic continental mass from the south, while Africa and the present Middle East also moved north.

The result, Edgar said, would have been to cut the "Tethyan Sea" in two. He said the process may be continuing, with the African continent still moving to the north and west, diminishing the size of the Mediterranean sea further.

He said the same action, coupled with a slow eastward movement of the Arabian Peninsula, is gradually enlarging the Red Sea.

The plan to obtain Indian Ocean and Mediterranean sediment cores by deep drilling is part of a $22 million Scripps managed project which during the first 18 months produced sediments up to 140 million years from the Atlantic and Pacific Ocean bottoms.

Dr. Glenn Cornish, leader of the project, said the cores from Tropic 2, and Allison Cornish from Junior Tropic 62, worked with the Scripps.

Dr. Paella said, legislation of pornography followed such a commission study.

Disputing the argument that pornography can lead to antisocial behavior in children, Dr. Aaron H. Kaman, director of psychiatric training at a New York mental health agency, commented:

Air Defense Cuts 'A Calculated Risk'

By FRED S. HOFFMAN
AP Military Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Defense officials say they are taking a calculated risk in cutting back the nation's antimissile defenses to save money.

They are gambling, although they probably would reject that term—the Soviet Union will not build a force of new bombers that could threaten the United States.

"We're taking a calculated risk here, there's no doubt about it," one official said after the Pentagon disclosed Wednesday it is sharply scaling down its antimissile units in connection with closing 307 bases as part of an economy drive.

But if a new medium range bomber being tested by the Russian state does go into production, the officials say there will be time to install a modern air defense system or beef up the old one.

Also, Pentagon authorities contend that phasing out segments of the old air defense system, which a recent Cuban MIG raid on Oct. 7 influenced, at least in part, a decision to scale-down some of the present air defenses.

"One Pentagon official said our chances of getting new defense to be suspected, gives equipment is better if we can come to grips with the reality that the older equipment is an up-to-date and admittedly costly protective network."

A total of 18 fighter-interceptor, early warning and radar squadrons, five combat and direction centers, and air defense Control System—AWACS—which would combine sophisticated radar and an improved fighter-interceptor. The novel feature of AWACS is that its radar would look down from their airplane platform and spot low flying enemy bombers which now can evade land-based radar.

There have been estimates that the AWACS system could cost as much as $12 billion to $15 billion.

Congress has balked at voting large sums for modernized air defense because senators and representatives have been unconvinced of a significant bomber threat to the United States.

Back in the late 1950s, Air Force advocates repeatedly warned of a major Soviet bomber menace, but the Russians never lived up to those ominous expectations and even now have only about 150 long-range bombers.

However, U.S. intelligence has detected Soviet tests of a new swing-wing bomber with a range of about 2,500 miles.

With mid-air refueling, such a plane could reach U.S. targets. U.S. authorities do not yet know what the Russians intend. "We don't know if they're going to produce that plane in numbers, an official said. "And if they do, they could be replacing older bombers in their inventory rather than building up a big new force."

Some of the air defense job will be shifted to the Air National Guard, which will be equipped with newer planes inherited from the regular Air Force.

However, the Air Guard itself will suffer a net loss of two squadrons, dropping from 18 to 16.

The Air Force will assign bomber defense responsibilities to tactical fighters in vulnerable areas, increasing the role of the Tactical Air Command.

When the readjustments are completed, the United States will still have 30 squadrons of F106, F10 and F101 fighters—receptors in the United States. In addition there will be 37 heavy radars in the United States and 30 in Canada, as well as three aircraft control and warning squadrons in Labrador.

There was some evidence the Cuban MIG flight beneath U.S. radar on Oct. 7 influenced, at least in part, a decision to scale-down some of the present air defenses.

"One Pentagon official said our chances of getting new defense to be suspected, gives equipment is better if we can come to grips with the reality that the older equipment is an up-to-date and admittedly costly protective network."

A total of 18 fighter-interceptor, early warning and radar squadrons, five combat and direction centers, and air defense Control System—AWACS—

which would combine sophisticated radar and an improved fighter-interceptor. The novel feature of AWACS is that its radar would look down from their airplane platform and spot low flying enemy bombers which now can evade land-based radar.

There have been estimates that the AWACS system could cost as much as $12 billion to $15 billion.

Congress has balked at voting large sums for modernized air defense because senators and representatives have been unconvinced of a significant bomber threat to the United States.

Back in the late 1950s, Air Force advocates repeatedly warned of a major Soviet bomber menace, but the Russians never lived up to those ominous expectations and even now have only about 150 long-range bombers.

However, U.S. intelligence has detected Soviet tests of a new swing-wing bomber with a range of about 2,500 miles.

With mid-air refueling, such a plane could reach U.S. targets. U.S. authorities do not yet know what the Russians intend. "We don't know if they're going to produce that plane in numbers, an official said. "And if they do, they could be replacing older bombers in their inventory rather than building up a big new force."

and 8th Fleet commanders were on separate ships cruising in the Mediterranean.

Marines attached to the 6th Fleet were sent into Lebanon in 1968 to shore up the pro-Western government during an insurrection which the Eisenhower administration said was Communist.

But Helal said another such landing has apparently been ruled out "because of the reaction it might arouse in Arab countries."

"An alternative under study provides for a military role to be undertaken by Israel, not in the Lebanon's direction but against Syria," he added.

In Moscow, a Soviet spokesman said the crisis in Lebanon shows a "web of intrigue is said, and the raids lasted only a few minutes."

There was no mention whether Israeli aircraft took to the air.

In Cairo, the semi-official Middle East News Agency said the Egyptian planes met no Israeli opposition in the skies, it said the raiding aircraft destroyed Israeli tanks, ground-to-ground missile batteries and fortifications.

The Current Brothers Are Live Wires

PEARL HARBOR, Hawaii (AP) — Lt. (jg) D.C. Current doesn't mind it when Navy pals call him "live wire."

David Charles Current, 28, of Litchfield, Minn., keeps his cool as the boom of an explosive disposal unit, working on everything from nuclear warheads to old cannibals.

The name is more likely to bother the post office. His older brother, Lt. D.C. (Donovan Clark) Current, 26, an electrical engineer, is an instructor at the Naval Academy.

Naturally, his specialty is electricity. "We're a second generation of alternating currents," said the younger D.C. "because my father is an A.C."

"That would be Armin Clay Current," said the older brother. "Dave figures his father wasn't thinking of the common electrical terms when he named his son."

"Our small farm in Litchfield didn't have electricity then," he said. "Nobody thought about electricity very much, let alone the two different types of electrical currents."

Maybe that's why his parents named their middle son Dennis James.

Current, 28, is a Navy midship aboard the USS Summers out of Long Beach, Calif. You guessed it: He's a first class electronics technician.

Dave is married and has one daughter. Had his first child been a boy, he would have named him after his grandfather, Andrew Christopher Current.

"And we're going to encourage the state to name their sons after us and June 30, 1971, D.C." Dave said.

State Welfare Head Resigns

ing that he had "tried to persuade her to bear with me a little longer, but I see it is beginning to affect her health."

Dumpey told newsmen that Shapiro was an "outstanding commissioner and truly dedicated and devoted to working for the citizens of Connecticut."

Last month Shapiro said the state is in a "welfare crisis." In a 48-page report to the governor, he was strongly critical of the 1969 General Assembly for failing to provide properly for the poor.

"The general public either does not seem to understand the problem," he said, "or finds it distasteful, or does not wish to be identified with a system in which families and children are deprived and in need of financial, social and emotional stability."

Shapiro took over in 1967 with a two-year budget of $90 million and 900 department employees. The budget grew to a $237 million appropriation by the legislature for the current two-year biennium, and employees now number about 2,000.

The Welfare Department operated under an open-end budget until his year, continuing to provide benefits even when the legislature's appropriation had run out. In the 1967-69 biennium, the expenditures outran appropriations by $75 million dollar.

Under the new system, the budget is closed, like the budgets of other state agencies. No decision has been made on what the state would do if the appropriations fail to match the welfare needs of the state before June 30, 1971, D.C." Dave said.

Will Governments Impose Controls to Stop Inflation?

By JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business Analyst
NEW YORK (AP) — Some economists are warning that price-credit controls in Canada, the U.S. and Canadian status at the present time have more than ordinary significance for the citizens of the United States, where the same underlying problems of inflation exist.

Nevertheless, the remarks by Pierre Elliott Trudeau after largely ignored in the United States.

After explaining in the House of Commons that the government had done all it could to hold down its own expenses and expressing the fear that voluntary price controls would not work, the prime minister told newspapers that the private sector does not accept responsibility, then he drew conclusions for the Canadian people that the private sector is not able to manage its own affairs.

If unions and business do not voluntarily accept wage and price restraints, he said, the government might be forced to take all necessary measures available to the government to break the back of inflation.

"I repeat," he said in Commons shortly before, "that if necessary we are determined to take all necessary measures available to the government to break the back of inflation."

Now these words could be interpreted as nothing more than jawboning, or the use of threats to accomplish ends unattainable by more gentle persuasion. But such an interpretation would be a wise one.

First, the remarks were apparently not made idly. Canada is in the midst of a very serious battle against inflation. It has set up a Prices and Incomes Commission to study the situation and to make recommendations.

Belief in the effectiveness of voluntary restraints seems to be waning, and the call for less restrictive methods of inflation control seem to be gaining power.

The Canadian Labor Congress and the Confederation of National Trade Unions has already urged the government to adopt price controls. And a recent price increase in Canada has added further to the discussion.

Hartford's economist John Kenneth Galbraith feels after these latest feelings when he told the Commons Finance Committee bluntly this week that voluntary restraints wouldn't work and that direct controls had been tried.

What, then, are the implications for the United States? Half-facetiously you might say as a first consequence Galbraith could be called upon to express his views before the

Everyone Needs a Disease He Can Suffer with Pride

NEW YORK (AP) — What's in a name? Well, when it comes to having a disease, the name is half the fun.

There is really no point in getting an ailment if the mere name of it alone is enough to make you half-sick. You might as well stay healthy if you can't acquire a malady that inspires respect in yourself and admiration in your neighbors.

For example, what grown person would like to have it known publicly that he was a victim of a disease? Well, he would if the disease were something like a venereal disease. Or a disease that makes you feel rather like you were a barn roof in poor repair?

The reason that some people stay in bed with a virus that they are too common to catch is a common cold.

Fortunately, medical nomenclature is rich in important sounding afflictions which one can point with pride. You probably have had some of these in your life and never even knew it.

Do you get tired of coping with life now and then, and feel that your wife, your boss, and your mother-in-law are asking too much of you? Well, hold your head up, man, and regain your self-respect. It really isn't your fault, it is if you have a creeping case of hypoglycemia, or, if the designation of responsibility should be assigned by the Department of Health, Education and Welfare.

With an identifying code on every tablet and capsule, proper treatment or antidote could be administered without delay. It is a sick, too. He's got an unconscious case of emprophobia, the fear of being lonely.

Senator Proposes Drug Code System
WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Gaylord Nelson said today a uniform coding system for all prescription drugs could mean the difference between life and death in cases of overdose.

He introduced a bill requiring all such drugs be assigned a code number identifying the manufacturer, the recommended dosage and the manufacturer's approach to the problems of identification and welfare.

"With an identifying code on every tablet and capsule, proper treatment or antidote could be administered without delay," Nelson said. "It is a sick, too. He's got an unconscious case of emprophobia, the fear of being lonely."

St. Matthew's Masses for All Saints Day will be held tomorrow at 8 and 10 a.m., and at 6 p.m.

Tomorrow is the final opportunity for all town residents to appear in person at the Town Hall to declare all fees payable. A 10 per cent penalty charge will be added to the tax bills of those who do not declare their property. The assessors will be at the Town Hall tomorrow from 9 a.m. until 4 p.m.

"Excellent Choice"
Allan Thomas, Democratic candidate for the Board of Education is an excellent choice. In the past he has shown his interest in the affairs of his community. As a member of the Board he has consistently demonstrated his willingness to do the job well. Keep him on the job.

"Warth and Intelligence"
I wish to add my name to the long list of those who support the candidacy of Allan Thomas for the Board of Education.

"Whatever the State Wants"
The Herald's report of the candidate's meeting Tuesday night. It was stated that Mr. Fitzgerald said all of us must become involved with the urban crisis of housing, unemployment, education and similar needs. He said the problems must be solved by all our citizens. How can we take on the problems of Hartford when we haven't solved all our own?

Mr. Fitzgerald always seems to agree whatever the state wants. Too bad he doesn't live in Manchester more of the time. He can tell us about our responsibilities, what about our rights? Since Hartford wants to increase Project Concern by five times as much, does that mean we should increase our number of students to over 300 in our schools that need so much money to expand and improve? Is that why we need bigger and more schools?

Memorandum to the Editor
I am a resident of Manchester, Connecticut and also a soldier in the United States Army, serving the country that I love. I am presently serving in the 11th Arm. Cav. Regiment which is now presently serving in the Republic of Vietnam. The words I have to say may not be spelled correctly, or the sentences punctuated the right way, but this letter represents the feelings of many of the men I fight with.

The main thing the Memorandum accomplished was that it showed the Nixon Administration how the public feels and what they want. The Administration to do about the war. So instead of being told by the side of the war on National polls and surveys, they've been included to make personal feelings about the war. Maybe, just maybe, this will change their theory on troop withdrawals and the eventual end to the war; but the effect on the soldier the Memorandum caused is far more important than the effect it had on the Nixon Administration.

I'm in a combat unit. So I guess I'm fortunate or unfortunate to see the effects of the Memorandum had on the men I eat, sleep, live and fight with. Sure, we want to come home even more than the people "back in the world" may realize. But instead, we're being told to fight and it's not for "real estate" as it was in the war of the past. It's far more important than that. We fight to keep ourselves alive until that day comes along when

This Pumpkin Presents a Problem

"Hey Dad, dear dad, I can't lift this pumpkin and I'm feeling so sad." Charles King Jr. of 22 Pine Hill St. fell in love with 100 lb. pumpkin at Pero Fruit Stand, but how can he get it home? Charles is four months older than the 6-month-old pumpkin, which makes the difference in weight seem most unfair. You'd think the older guy could lift the younger. To find out how Charles resolved the problem, turn to page 15.

Lawyer Accuses Natalizio In Drug Smuggling Trial

BRIDGEPORT, Conn. (AP)—A Miami underworld figure, Mario Natalizio, should be on trial on drug-smuggling conspiracy charges instead of Milford hardware store owner James Miller, Miller's lawyer told a U.S. District Court jury Thursday. Natalizio, who resembles Miller, is the man who accepted two large shipments of heroin at the Bridgeport Motor Inn in suburban Fairfield in August and September of 1968, said Yale Law Prof. Steven Duke. Natalizio once confessed to the crime, but repudiated his confession later, saying he had been coerced into making it. Duke made his statement about implicating Natalizio after the government rested its case against Miller, who is on trial for the second time. Miller's first conviction, returned by a federal court jury in Hartford in 1966, was overturned by an appeal court last March on the grounds that it had not been disclosed at the trial that the prosecution's star witness, Joseph "Mike" Caron, had been hypnotized by his interrogators. Caron and his wife Marie have both insisted under oath that the man who received the heroin was Miller and not one else. Mrs. Caron took the witness stand Thursday as the government was winding up its presentation of evidence.

Three Problems Chief Concern Of FitzGerald

Democrat William FitzGerald, an incumbent town director running for re-election today listed what, in his opinion, are the three major problems facing Manchester. In his statement, published here in its entirety he pledged to seek solutions to the problems of schools, refuse and traffic.

His statement: "It is the duty of each candidate for public office to state what he considers the major problems facing Manchester and his position in regard to them. As a Director for the past three years I have concluded that Manchester must seek solutions to three major problems in the next biennium.

"1. Schools: The condition of our schools is poor. Maintenance, repairs and renovation will be necessary. This will be especially difficult to accomplish because of the need to control spending and hold costs to an absolute minimum in the immediate future, because of inflation. Some maintenance and renovation must be undertaken in the immediate future, and to delay such taxpayer problems will only prove more costly in the long run. Therefore, I pledge to place further emphasis on seeking a solution to the Lincoln School problem.

"2. Refuse: The refuse problem continues to be serious, and a solution must be found. I pledge to continue to support the bipartisan effort that has been directed to a solution of the refuse problem.

"3. Traffic: Traffic continues to be an ever increasing problem. Several key intersections in Manchester must have attention. Some are already controlled and, if re-elected, I promise to pursue the State Highway Department to compel action on the Center and Broad St. intersection, to make improvements at the Center, and to seek solutions to the problems that will be raised when Rte. 4 is completed and additional traffic is rerouted on Charter Oak and Spruce Sts.

"Further attention will be given to the traffic in the Paradise area. In the area of traffic improvement, however, every one must be even more prudent and cost-conscious, and I will not support any program that jeopardizes the financial position of the Town or contributes to inflation.

"I have enjoyed serving the people of Manchester and hope that I will be afforded the opportunity of serving you again as a Director."

Youngsters Enjoy An Extra School

By MARGARET HAYDEN

Young dancers are designing new steps in a choreography class while other children learn to play chess, bridge and guitar in weekly lessons in the Community Enrichment Program. Youngsters are also making wire and craft projects, painting with acrylics, playing in a toddler group and going on field trips.

Some 120 children are enrolled in the first season of the program which meets at Temple Beth Shalom. The classes, conducted by qualified but unpaid teachers, are sponsored for the Manchester area by the sisterhood of the temple, the full-time teachers.

Plans are under way for enlarging the program's curriculum for the second ten-week session to start in December. Mrs. Alan Krupp, director, hopes to have some adult courses as well as continuing and expanding the present ones for children.

Mrs. Krupp teaches choreography to children in Grades 1 to 4. Her classes start with conditioning exercises; then, she gives an assignment to create a dance, such as pretending to be a puppet. After a 10-minute practice, three students at a time perform individual dances for the class. The teacher and parents discuss each dance. Pupils comments indicate they have gained knowledge of the principles and disciplines of dance while improving their posture, poise and confidence.

Grades 5 through 8 students work with acrylic, water-based paints which give the appearance of oils. During the first lesson of the course, Mrs. Martin Stepper taught them how to make a charcoal sketch on canvas from still life arrangements they had set up. In the second lesson she showed them how to make a wash to begin their painting. One student is getting a three-dimensional effect on a cat in her picture by mixing the acrylics with a polymer emulsion. Mrs. Stepper and her assistant, Mrs. David Sedoway, go to the students to answer questions and talk to them about various techniques. "We have a lot of fun," Mrs. Stepper said. "The class is very informal, but the students are deeply involved in their art."

Toddlers are learning rhythms and modern dance in Mrs. Josiah Lesner's class. Fred Tilden has a chess class. Mrs. John Garoppolo's eight students have conversations, play games and sing in French. "I had no idea how this class would work out when we started," she said, "but it seems to be going well."

Mrs. Richard Wood's arts and crafts class has had perfect attendance. "Children love arts and crafts because they like to make and do things," she said. Miss Sue Hurwitz, a Manchester High School teacher, also has an arts and crafts class. The continuance and expansion of the program depends on volunteer teachers. "There must be many people who would like to teach one class a week," Mrs. Krupp said. "I hope they will consider participating in this program."

"We are limited by the number of teachers," she said, "but we are very fortunate that almost all of our 17 teachers will come back for the next session." The program provides the teachers with supplies and expenses.

"Most of the children that are taking courses this session want to continue, taking the same or different courses in the next session, and new friends

Murray Hits Both Parties For 'Silence'

A deafening crescendo of silence is the description of Manchester's election campaign given today by William Murray, the Republican candidate for town clerk, running without the backing of his party.

David Caron, in a statement issued today, charged, "The leadership of each party is trying to outdo the other in the art of the non-campaign."

He called for election of town committee members by the caucus system, a proposal made Monday by the GOP Town Committee by Lemuel Miller, a Murray backer.

Caron's statement followed: "The $200,000 appropriation was based on the cost estimate for the addition as submitted by the School Building Committee. The estimate is for $48,121 for the area of the addition (two ball fields); $31,976 for architectural plans; $23,000 for furniture (11 classrooms at $2,100 per classroom); and $39,448 for a 7 1/2 percent contingency.

Ben Crittendon chairman of the School Building Committee, explained that under Public Act 731, the Town would reimburse 50 percent of the cost and new ideas, began to elect town committee members to successive two year terms.

As the time has passed by the chairman between the parties and the people has grown wide, with the logical result that we see in 1969 a non-campaign of no debate waged by each party. "Hot Issue" slogans on the one side are answered by silence!

"If it were not for Bill Murray's uphill fight against Democratic and Republican propaganda, this dead campaign would have been buried the day after Labor Day. Bill's candid, refreshing and scolding letter is a qualified, dedicated, civic-minded citizen who would help of the people, and he is received."

"His platform is very simple, the essence of sincerity: To facilitate voting registration by mobile unit, to open his office one night per week for the convenience of the people, and to supply information regarding benefits and services available through the Town Clerk's office."

"For the first time in over 10 years, the people will decide who their Town Clerk will be and not the party bosses. That is a real choice."

Hebron $550,000 Voted For School Wing

Residents voted at last evening's town meeting to appropriate the sum of $550,000 for the addition of a 15-room addition to the Hebron High School building with furnishings, supporting facilities, equipment and recreation facilities. Only about 50 people attended the meeting.

The School Building Committee was authorized to expend the appropriation and the Board of Selectmen to borrow or bond the sum in accordance with Public Act 731.

The $500,000 appropriation was based on the cost estimate for the addition as submitted by the School Building Committee. The estimate is for $48,121 for the area of the addition (two ball fields); $31,976 for architectural plans; $23,000 for furniture (11 classrooms at $2,100 per classroom); and $39,448 for a 7 1/2 percent contingency.

New Diplomacy: To Help Other Nations But Not To Fight Their Wars for Them

By DON McLEOD
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) —

Richard M. Nixon told the Vietnamese people, "and may eventually take over the least defense of Vietnam."
The date was Nov. 2, 1969. Nixon was vice president in the White House. The place was the White House. The occasion was the end of the Vietnam War.

May 17, 1966 Cleveland news conference. "China will then have the power to deliver atom weapons."
"If we are in war in Asia five years from now," he repeated in Charleston, W.Va., on Nov. 2, 1966, "we're making atomic war with Communist China."
The date was Feb. 23, 1969. Nixon said in Portsmouth, N.H., the United States faces the "greatest danger of another world war since the end of the Second World War."

Nixon conveyed the "congratulations of the American people" on the birthday of the fighting Vietnamese army and subsequently recommended that the United States furnish supplies for the war against Communist guerrillas.
Eleven years later Nixon was back in Vietnam. In Saigon on April 2, 1968 he commented that the organization and training of the native troops was much better than they had been on his 1965 visit: "But of course that is a venture that failed."

"Young men I have seen training are obviously very active," Nixon observed. "Their morale factor is decisive."
Back in Washington on April 18, 1964, Nixon said, "This is a war which could be won and which can be won by the United States with proper support."
Now that Nixon is president and in a position to implement this view, Vietnamization—or turning over the principal military and administrative functions to Vietnamese troops—has become the heart of his policy on the war.

Nixon said in Superior, Wis., on Feb. 22, 1968 that the United States should not try to oust the Communists in the war.
"This nation does not tolerate a long war," he said. "The Asians have no respect for human life. They don't care about body counts, whether the count is 9 or 10 or one against them."
"We need a policy to shorten the war," Nixon said May 17, 1968 in a speech to the House of Representatives. "It is time to fish or cut bait."

While campaigning in the Wisconsin Republican primary at Eau Claire, Nixon said on March 20, 1968 that the United States "cannot continue to carry the major burden of maintaining freedom around the world."
"We must enlist others in the free world to come to their own defense," he said. "Let's help them fight the war, and not fight the war for them."
"If the other nations of the free world want to remain free then they must rise in their own defense," Nixon said in Milwaukee on March 27, 1968. "They can no longer afford the luxury of relying on American power."

Nixon said Vietnam had been a "deeply troubling lesson in the limits of U.S. power."
In a Chicago radio speech Oct. 19, 1968 Nixon proposed that the free nations of Asia be guided into a mutual security pact to deal with future communist threats.
"The important thing," Nixon said, "is that the Asian nations themselves be prepared in the future to make the initial response to any new aggression in their area."
On Oct. 26, 1968, Nixon told a group of Associated Press editors that the way to end the war was in "developing programs which enlist the people of South Vietnam economically and politically and militarily in their own defense."
Shortly after he became President, Nixon served notices to Asian leaders that these views were becoming American policy.

"Peace and progress must be shaped and protected primarily by Asian hands," he said in Manila last July 25. "The contributions which my country can make to that progress should come as a supplement to Asian energies and in response to Asian leadership."
The next day Nixon went further to say that the aim of the United States in Asia had shifted to "furnishing material support instead of manpower support."
"This is our goal," he said. "This is a goal we can achieve."
But echoing out of the past comes the catch-phrase Nixon said in an August 1964 issue of U.S. News and World Report, "is that where the will to resist does not exist it is not possible to save the people from coming under Communist domination."
"The problem is in getting our message and the message of the free nations across," he had said Oct. 23, 1963. "We must recognize that there are millions of people in this area of the world who honestly believe that the United States is just a great threat to the peace of the world as is the Soviet Union and Communist China."
While Nixon has supported the war, he also has consistently voiced an urgent need to get out of it if acceptable terms can be reached.
"War with China will be inevitable if we are in Vietnam five years from now," Nixon said in

"In Indochina we see the most effective of those new techniques," he told graduates of Whittier College on June 12, 1964. Here is the greatest danger to the free world.
"No soldier has marched across the border and none landed on the shore," he said. "Yet Indochina is in grave peril to the free world could be desperately serious."
"When you let the Communists get by with a bluff, you encourage them to try the same thing in more important areas," he said in a speech at Tucson, Ariz., April 22, 1964.
"Anything we do which gives rise to doubts here will lead to the free world will support further communist expansion in Asia and Indochina, we must take the risk now of putting our boys in, I think the executive branch has to take the political risk and I personally would support it," he said in a speech at Chicago, Sept. 27, 1960.
"It's ironic that a Republican should be defending President Johnson, but I feel that the present policy in Vietnam is the best one," Shalopee, Minn., Sept. 27, 1960.
In an Atlanta news conference Feb. 11, 1960, Nixon called for "as much bombing as possible" of military targets in North Vietnam and an economic boycott by U.S. allies to shorten the war.

Once the United States was in the war, Nixon continued to support it, even after John F. Kennedy replaced Eisenhower in the White House. In a speech in Chicago May 5, 1961, Nixon said the disaster of Vietnam on military invasion should not deter the United States from "taking decisive steps in the future."
"This is why I gave President Kennedy the assurance that I will support him to the hilt in backing positive action he may decide is necessary to win the communist aggression."
In a Hong Kong news conference on April 4, 1964, Nixon said he would support the war in North Vietnam, but only "if that is necessary to win the war."
In Tokyo on April 10, 1964, Nixon said the United States "must be prepared to do whatever is necessary to assure victory" and would not say if the United States would fight in Vietnam at that time were "advisors."
On television from New York on May 27, 1964 Nixon said the war could not be won unless it was carried into North Vietnam and Cambodia.
"Until the rules of that war are changed, changed not for it."

On the same time, he called for a major increase in American ground and air strength. "I can ground and air strength, I would say we need 25 per cent more than those forces already scheduled for Vietnam," Saigon, Aug. 7, 1966.
On Aug. 26, 1966, appearing on a network television show, he said the war "must be prosecuted more vigorously, so that the communists will see that they can't gain on the battlefield."
Nixon said in New Delhi on April 2, 1967 that if the United States had not gone to the aid of South Vietnam, the aggression would have been light in Asia.
"The decision to go in was right and history will so regard it."

And on May 27, 1964, he followed up by saying on a television panel show that any slackening of U.S. determination in Asia would be a determination in the hands of the Communist who any gain or victory in South Vietnam that would lead to a big war in Asia because communism would spread. The only way to avoid it was to win the war in Vietnam.
Nixon's stance on Vietnam has been based on the Domino Theory, which holds that if the Communists win in Asia, they will spread to other parts of the world.
"When history is written, it will be recorded that those brave young Americans in Vietnam are fighting a war to prevent World War III," New York, May 5, 1966.
Nixon has supported the war from the beginning. His first official mission as President Eisenhower's vice president was to visit Asia and size up the situation.
"Because of the strategic importance of the war and because the morale is high, equipment should be provided if it can be absorbed," he said in Hanoi, Nov. 4, 1963.
On April 15 a high ranking Eisenhower administration official would be then almost impossible to solve," Bangkok, Oct. 29, 1963, told the American Society of Newspaper Editors convention in Washington that American troops should be sent to Indochina if necessary to save the situation.
The speech was "off-the-record" and the remarks were printed without attribution. But the report stirred such an uproar in Congress the administration later contradicted the speaker had been Nixon.
"Here is the way the statement was reported:
"The United States as the leader of the free world cannot afford further retreat in Asia. I think we can do it without further communist expansion in Asia and Indochina, we must take the risk now of putting our boys in, I think the executive branch has to take the political risk and I personally would support it," he said in a speech at Chicago, Sept. 27, 1960.

"It's ironic that a Republican should be defending President Johnson, but I feel that the present policy in Vietnam is the best one," Shalopee, Minn., Sept. 27, 1960.

"The United States as the leader of the free world cannot afford further retreat in Asia. I think we can do it without further communist expansion in Asia and Indochina, we must take the risk now of putting our boys in, I think the executive branch has to take the political risk and I personally would support it," he said in a speech at Chicago, Sept. 27, 1960.

Choosing a College Church-Related Schools

By BROTHER PATRICK ELLIS, S.J., Director of Development, LaSalle College, Philadelphia, Pa.

In the United States today the church-related college—once the enclave of protection for tradition—is now actively seeking to diversify everything about itself. Its reasons for diversification are primarily educational, but they are also connected with religious doctrines themselves.

Ecumenism, in just another word for this broader understanding of other people's ways of looking at one's own religion, is just another word for this broader understanding of other people's ways of looking at one's own religion. Thus church-related colleges must widen their horizons if they are to be faithful to their religious commitment.

Education reasons for diversification, however, are still more compelling, for no one can be prepared for today's society in any kind of ghetto.

Thus, all-male and all-female colleges are gradually becoming coeducational, for there is a ghetto of gender in the economy. Catholic colleges are actively recruiting students of other faiths, so that the education of the Catholic student will be more complete. Institutions which for understandable reasons, are nearly all white, are even sending students to desegregated schools, so that all students will be ready for the real world. Similarly, colleges are more active than ever in the recruitment of foreign students, typically, church-related colleges have been the first to go in all these areas.

Another way of widening their horizons is to widen them upward. Once plagued with a group mentality, church-related colleges now have the ambition of the best graduate and professional schools for their students and they are enriching curricula for their benefit.

Another way of widening their horizons is to widen them outward. Where once less exacting standards of achievement were thought to meet the college's goals, now the standards are necessary to widen faculty horizons as well as those of students. Church-related colleges have awakened—almost all at once—to the need for more broadly based financial backing. Offering a better education, than ever, they cannot price themselves out of the student market by relying solely on ever-increasing tuition. They have left the by lower and have pointed out to their various publics the dollar value of their church-related colleges provide capable citizens at hundreds of dollars a year less per capita.

Pentagon To Trim Fat From Budget

By BOB HOYTEN, AP Military Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — For the past eight years the Pentagon has gone on periodic drives to trim fat from its defense establishment. It's diet time again.

Secretary of Defense Melvin R. Laird's announcement Wednesday detailing new base closings, consolidations and cutbacks brings to 1,407 the number of such economy actions reported by the Pentagon since 1961.

By the Pentagon's way of bookkeeping, those moves are saving the country almost $2.3 billion.

Looked at one way, that's enough to pay for the first phase of the expanded Safeguard missile defense system.

From another viewpoint, it requires about 3 per cent of this year's $78 billion defense budget.

Or it would finance only about one month of the Vietnam war based on recent spending rates.

Some Pentagon critics contend that because economies from base closings are projected into future years, the savings are to a certain extent of the paper variety.

Pentagon officials argue, however, the savings are just as real as those a family might achieve by cutting back the weekly grocery bill from $80 to $38.

A chart drawn up by the Pentagon showed reported economies in money, manpower and military installations from 1961 through this week:

- United States and Puerto Rico — 1,229 actions, with calculated annual savings totaling $1.84 billion.
- Overseas — 228 actions, with $482.2 million in savings and 16,778 civilian and 51,088 military jobs eliminated.
- Total savings — $2.29 billion, 106,100 civilian jobs, 185,801 military jobs.

Pentagon spokesmen say Laird is sensitive about the latest cutbacks, calling attention to his statement in August warning that U.S. military readiness will suffer.

But the defense chief also cautioned that further reductions are still to come under his congressionally inspired plan.

Although there have been some howls of anguish from members of Congress whose districts are suffering payoffs and a replacement has been on the job only 10 days.

Dobkin Says He's Confident GOP Will Remain in Office

"We have all the essentials to win the election on Tuesday and I am confident that the voters will return us to office," said Manchester's Republican town chairman last night.

M. Adler Dobkin, addressing a turnout of about 50 committee members at GOP headquarters, acknowledged that "there is a lack of lull in the current campaign."

He attributed it in large part to the orderly administration we Republicans have had in the past three years.

He said, "Our record is our accomplishment. It is evident. The people are content. We try to administer along the lines indicated by the public."

"The Democrats, in their ads, are attempting to lead us to our accomplishments," he said. "They are attempting to lead us to a swimming pool, and a ski slope, and a hospital, a road, and capital improvement funds for maintenance and repair, but we did not do that."

He said he appreciated the funds and he fulfilled the accomplishment.

Dobkin called on those GOP candidates who were present to give their impressions of the campaign to date.

Mayor Nathan Agostini commented, "If the people remember that we have fulfilled our campaign pledge of three years ago, to be responsive to the public, then they'll return us the winners on Tuesday."

Town Treasurer Ronald Quish said, confidently, "We're going to win Tuesday."

Town Director David Odgers remarked, "We've had three years of working for people and for people. The many I've talked to appear to be with us."

And, Town Director Donald Wells said, "I feel very confident of victory on Tuesday. We must keep reminding the people of our accomplishments, and we must get out the vote."

Comments were made also by:

- Donald Kuehl, candidate for the Board of Directors. They appear happy with the status quo. We must get out the vote. We must remember that had officials are elected by good citizens who fall to vote.
- William Dineen, candidate for the Board of Directors. "This is my first campaign and I don't know for sure how things are going. The voters appear to favor us."
- James Farr, candidate for the Board of Directors. "I feel confident that if we get out the vote, we'll win."
- Anita Murphy, incumbent school board member. "Regardless of what happens Tuesday, we should be proud of our accomplishments. A large turnout Tuesday will win for us."
- Walter Doh, incumbent school board member. "If the voters weigh our accomplishments against our opponent's promises, they will cast their ballots for us."
- Robert Spillane, candidate for the Board of Education. "I am greatly encouraged. The people I have talked to appear to approve of our accomplishments."
- Douglas Kehl, candidate for

New Voters Favor Us; Cummings

Democratic Town Chairman Ted Cummings, when asked today if the Democrats will have a committee meeting before Tuesday's election, as the Republicans have done, said he would not do so.

"A lack of issues does not denote a lack of interest. People are looking for a change in their homes, and indications are that they favor us," Cummings said.

He said that all Democratic candidates are out working on their campaigns and that meeting the voters is the important thing.

Cummings declined to predict the results of next Tuesday's municipal election.

"The name of the game," he said, "is 'Get Out the Vote.' We get out the people who have been registered as heavily Democratic in the past year, then we have a good chance to win. It all depends on how many people vote."

He noted, "The Republican break and entry with criminal intent, seven counts of larceny and a count of attempted break and entry with criminal intent, now face only the break and entry without permission charge."

The other two youths had their cases continued until the court determines their status with the Armed Forces. Robert Gagnon, 18, originally charged with two counts of break and entry with intent, two counts of larceny and a count of attempted break and entry without permission, now faces only the break and entry without permission charge.

Robert Gagnon, 18, originally charged with two counts of break and entry with intent, two counts of larceny and a count of attempted break and entry without permission, now faces only the break and entry without permission charge.

12th Circuit Court Cases

The court took into consideration the unblemished past records of five East Hartford youths yesterday who were arrested in the summer and charged with a series of break and entry in this town.

The prosecution reduced eight counts of larceny, eight counts of break and entry with criminal intent, and a count of attempted break and entry with criminal intent to a single charge of break and entry without permission.

Callahan pleaded guilty to the charge and was given a 60-day suspended sentence and placed on probation for a year.

He will return to court next Thursday for sentencing.

The court continued a number of other cases including those of Michael D'Auria, 19, of 77 Vernon St., and Donald LaCourse, 20, of Groton, all charged with breach of the peace, to Nov. 20.

Francis Carilli, 22, of 43 Constance Dr., charged with illegal possession of a narcotic drug, in an unrelated arrest, to Dec. 11.

Bruce and Roberta Macauro, of 73 W. Center St., both facing charges of illegal possession of a narcotic and illegal possession of a controlled drug, to Nov. 6.

JoAnn Matarone, of Hartford, charged with shoplifting, to Nov. 3.

Son Is Best Man: Divorced Pair Remarried On Initial 25th Anniversary

TRENTON, Mich. (AP) — Formed before a judge in Trenton, the new Mrs. Rochon fell into her son's arms, weeping into her son's arms.

"I'm not, take it easy, will you," he said. "You got him now. You got him."

The best man was Wayne Rochon, their 26-year-old son.

The two were divorced in their native Canada in 1944 when they were 18. In 1948 they were divorced in their native state of Michigan.

Second marriages to different persons also ended in divorce. About two years ago Rochon said, he worked up the nerve to call his first wife and ask her for a date.

They dated warily for months, trying to understand what happened to their first marriage. "I was irresponsible," said Michael S. Jelsavcic, who has headed the American Express office for nine years, received the ultimatum Wednesday.

Through the U.S. Embassy, he advised her to get out of his life in the Detroit suburb, "I wanted to live a little."

He said he enjoyed going out with her in his company, and also wanted a new car. Jelsavcic, a native of Yugoslavia and a naturalized American, said a Soviet citizen had lured him into the path of his car as he was being waved forward by a policeman at a crowded intersection. He said the man was seriously injured.

Jelsavcic also said that if he leaves, "I'm tantamount to a divorced officer" because two Soviet employees quit recently and a replacement has been on the job only 10 days.

Board of Director Candidates Tell Views

Nathan G. Agostinelli Republican

Nathan G. Agostinelli, incumbent Republican mayor and chairman of the Board of Directors since 1966, is a local businessman who graduated from Manchester High School and attended Holy College. A Korean veteran, he is a major in the Connecticut National Guard.

He is chairman of the Connecticut Regional Council of Elective Officials, a member of the Board of Trustees of the Community Renewal Team, Connecticut Conference of Mayors, U.S. Conference of Mayors, American Legion, and the parish council of Assumption Church. He lives at 18 Clarendon St. with his wife Helena and two sons.

His answers:
1. Master plans have been taken in this direction during the past two years; for example, the ski slope, Swanton pool, etc. Also, a proposal to develop the Globe Hollow tract has met with favorable response. With the newly formed Youth Commission we now have a wealth of talent which is willing and able to tell us other things that are needed for our town.

2. We must continue to practice economy in our local government. We must also provide services our people demand, as based on the ability to pay. The State and Federal governments must provide to us the best possible use of the limited funds available. We must continue to approach all problems of money on a businesslike approach.

3. As chairman of the Capitol Region Council of Elective Officials, I feel my position is very clear on this question. I believe that we must continue to cooperate in order to maintain our autonomy. Presently we are cooperating on sewer problems, purchasing problems, etc. all on a volunteer basis, but as a result money is being saved by ourselves and the surrounding towns.

4. The rising costs of town government are the result of increased demands for services by the community as well as material and labor costs. These costs should not be reduced to the detriment of necessary services. The town government to the individual level is the best means of providing the services desired by widening the tax base.

5. I propose extension of the present plans to open more existing school facilities for after-school recreational use. These facilities include playgrounds, gymnasiums, play grounds, and other recreational areas. Some additional areas should be developed with regard to the changing needs of the community. To see that necessary services are not provided, and to determine compliance with the best practices of sound fiscal policy.

6. Each project proposed must apply only to projects which are in the town involved and which are of benefit to the town. There are many examples of inter-town cooperation in the area of public services, such as sewerage, health, fire, and police. Any cooperative action should be mutually beneficial to both towns. We must not be completely voluntary, but we must be cooperative. We must be able to pay for the services we receive.

7. To meet these rising costs, we must revise existing programs to determine if they are economically sound. Study fee levels in my duties if I am elected. We must also consider certain projects advantageous to Manchester.

Study Hall System Has Been Revised

"You don't always get what you want though you may get it if you try hard enough." This quote from the Rolling Stones may very well express the sentiment of the students body as regards our new study hall changes.

For approximately the last six months study halls have been the butt of much criticism by the student body. Many of the criticisms have been on the revision of our system and a great many faculty members have expressed their disapproval of the changes.

Mr. Rogers, Thibault, and Mr. Emminger began work on the study hall system in the fall of 1968. They have been working on it ever since. They have had many meetings and have received many suggestions from the student body.

SEC Race Spotlights

NEW YORK (AP)—Three teams that were supposed to be just mediocre but are far from it, add three equally dangerous squads, throw in a jinx or two, add an arch-rivalry ... and what do you get?

A slam-bang trio of college football games as far as the SEC's Southeastern Conference is concerned.

Trinity appears to have too much offense for Coast Guard. The Panthers have averaged over 41 points in their last three outtings.

Brigadier and then appear equally matched on offense, all three of the Bridgeport defense appears to have an edge.

Both are among the nation's top-ranked teams on defense, Dartmouth the nation's best against passing attacks and Yale 4th-ranked rushing attack.

The Indians crushed Harvard 41-0 last week without showing any new wrinkles in their multi-formation offense.

In other games, Connecticut (2-1) seeks solace for an up-and-down year at Boston University (6-1), ranked third in New England.

Attractive Grid Schedule Saturday for Schoolboys

Wagon ignited the Indians' offense, defensively, Bill Lopez, Greg Vinick and Joe Brownson continue to impress Coach Dave Wagon with their block busting tactics.

Northwest, playing the Indians for the first time in any sport, will depend greatly on the services of quarterback Tom Callahan and the hard running of fullback Jack O'Neil.

East Catholic, with a 1-2 record, will probably see action against St. Paul's Saturday.

Fullback Perry and halfback John Whaley continue to give East Catholic, after an opening game setback to Rockville, has come on strong and has scored five straight victories.

The Eagles may have lost the senior quarterback Tim Yam and Bruce Siskward who help come from the backfield of Jack Knapitz, Len Van, John Dunn and Mike Zile.

The line is well balanced with a 4-1 record also at 1-30. Rockville (6-1) plays host to Southington, with a 4-1 record also at 1-30.

Manchester surprised Maloney High last weekend scoring twice with less than a minute remaining to win their second game in a row.

HUNTING and FISHING. MALT WATER FISHING. The peak of the Fall bluefish run in eastern Connecticut is under way.

The peak of the Fall bluefish run in eastern Connecticut is under way. Excellent catches of 4-17 pound fish are being made.

Blackfish are fair to good at rocky areas all along the coast. Better spots are located at central Connecticut, including the Basin, Brantford Reef and the Cow and the Calf.

Winter flounder fishing is very good inshore. Small fishing is rapidly improving in coastal streams and estuaries.

Trout fishing is good in most trout ponds throughout the state. Fishermen out for panfish, bass and pickers are having generally good luck.

The first segment of Connecticut's split duck season ends on Saturday, Nov. 12.

Bill Stanfill Gains Spurs In Pro Ball

MIAMI (AP)—Georgia farm-boy Bill Stanfill is busting up pro offensive lines as easily as he did in college, but a Miami coach says the 200-pound Dolphin punter remains "a mere baby."

Stanfill had worried about his first American Football League season despite being All-American three times with the Georgia Bulldogs and winning the Outback trophy as college football's best punter.

Good as Bill is, he's just being born into pro football, said the Dolphins' defensive line coach. "There's no telling how good he can be. That's up to him, but the personal equipment he has is above the rest."

Stanfill draws a line when he speaks, the way most he does down in Cairo, Ga., where his father owns a farm. That's pronounced "Koy-row," Stanfill says.

He has grown up since starting in football and basketball for the Cairo High School. He signed a three-year Miami contract for $100,000, drives a $6,000 car and bought a new home in Athens, Ga., near the University of Georgia campus.

His philosophy is changing too. "In the pro, you have to pay yourself to get up for games," he said. "At Georgia, you just showed up and were ready to go. In the pro, you have to concentrate on the time. Concentrate on the time. Concentrate on the time."

Bill had just finished one of the most exciting games of his life. He had just finished one of the most exciting games of his life.

Players from the 1969 Connecticut All-Time football squad, as selected by the current era, are ranked in the minds of those voting.

the broad and better ballistics for UConn fans in his three years with the varsity. One four-back better than Gaudino, Norm Gerber, current varsity football assistant coach at Central Connecticut and a local resident, was a tiger on defense during his career with the Huskies as a lineman.

He too didn't attract votes in the popularity poll. But that's the way it goes. The men selected on the All-Time UConn squad will be split between the halves at the UConn-Rutgers Centennial Day game at Storrs Nov. 8.

It will be the most popular lifetime team, not the best all-time team.
