Now That The Lid Is Off

Now that the lid is off, there will be few veterans of the war in Vietnam who will not have attitudes to report, if that is their instinct.

And, for that matter, the confessional mood may be extending back to World War II.

Then, too, there was an enemy who, because he was ethnically not European, was being classified as something sub-human by our propaganda and by the ethnic instincts of our own fighting men.

And then, too, the supposed rules of war were ignored more than they were followed.

In that war in the Pacific, as in this war in Asia, racial differences led to the ease with which one side sometimes fought and acted as if those on the other side were not really human beings.

Back in World War I, however, something of the same effect was achieved without the inspiration of any difference in the color of skin.

To the soldiers of the Kaiser's cutthroat and cultured Germany, rather than to those of Hitler's organized madness, that we so willingly and enthusiastically applied the title of "Kun," with the inference that they were something less than human, and ought to be so treated.

We managed these attitudes in wars which were fought between organized armies in uniform in campaigns which featured the confrontation of forces across established lines of battle.

In Vietnam almost all military activity is of the guerrilla type; there are few clearly marked lines of battle; the enemy guerrillas do not necessarily wear a uniform; the favorite weapons and strategies of the guerrilla are surprise and stealth, the night attack, the attack from the rear, the attack by booby-trap and land mine.

In this type of war, against the racially different enemy, there has been, in the field, an over-generation of that zeal for the kill which is so basic a part of the elemental training given the modern American fighting man.

When that zeal for killing takes over the mood of a unit, and leads it to violate the supposed rules of war, it takes rare courage indeed for any individual member of that unit not to join in the killing, or to show his disapproval of it. Afterwards, he would rather forget it than talk about it.

The proof that this is the general rule is to be found in the simple fact that it has taken nearly two years after what indeed seems to have been a massacre of many people at "Phinville" for the story itself to begin emerging.

There will still, even after the spell and custom of silence has been broken, be many atrocities which will remain unreported, or which will not draw very much attention, because they involved only small groups of people or only one individual.

But there need be no doubt, either, that what we are now in for is an extended reluctant look at one of the hitherto hidden faces of war. We will have to suffer it, and suffer the way in which the rest of the world watches us wrestle with it, and hope that our own ultimate distaste for this underside of our own humanity does not turn us callously and inhumanly deaf to the possibility that we have some guilt upon us.

We did, as one of the victors in World War II, lead in the creation and the retroactive application of war crime law at Nuremberg. We told ourselves then that what we were doing at Nuremberg might some day be raised against us, if we ever had the misfortune to be the losers in another war.

What has happened to us now is not that we have been defeated, and that some other nation, victor over us, is going to apply the Nuremberg code to our conduct in war.

We ourselves are forcing ourselves to face up to the question of whether or not that code applies to us, and whether or not our conduct demands punishment, and whether, if it does, we are going to make it out for ourselves.

This is one facet of us, now inescapable, as the once traditional lid on the atrocity story flies off.

The more fundamental test, of all mankind, is whether we progress from such consideration of such war crimes to the realization that war itself is a crime, the crime, even in its most "legal" form and conduct, Not to the precedents at Nuremberg, but to the still unfulfilled Charter and purpose of the United Nations - that is where we must and will turn if we are against recurrent atrocity as a world way of life.

Votes Easier Than Snow?

Having won reelection by a margin actually less than handsome, Mayor John Lindsay is apparently going to seek to avoid a repetition of some of his first term troubles.

Specifically, he has his Sanitation Department getting set to do something more about snow than they did in the last winter - on Sunday, Feb. 8, to be exact - New York City's normal snow-fighting equipment and techniques proved woefully inadequate for a big storm which came in the side door from the Atlantic.

Mayor Lindsay will never hear the last of that storm, and at the very least the streets of New York remained blocked for days afterwards.

His Department of Sanitation is making all kinds of preparations. Its regular snow-fighting forces are being given more intensive training. A special emergency force of men has been organized to form a spearhead for the department if any more storms are discourteous enough to strike on a Sunday or a holiday. Some new type snow plows, called "bombardiers," are being imported from Canada.

And, instead of trying to economize for the taxpayers by keeping payrolls low, the Department, this year, is going to mobilize all its forces for any storm that has any possibility at all of turning out to be heavy.

Meanwhile, way up north, the Lord of the Snows is chucking and gutting, blowing little blizzards off his shaggy brow, in his belated, but impressive amusement over the latest episode of mere mortals to outwit the infinite variety of combinations of moisture, wind and temperature at his disposal.

No More In Loco Parentis

There was a time not so many years ago when a respectable widow who had four clearly marked lines of battle; the enemy guerrillas do not necessarily wear a uniform; the favorite weapons and strategies of the guerrilla are surprise and stealth, the night attack, the attack from the rear, the attack by booby-trap and land mine.

In this type of war, against the racially different enemy, there has been, in the field, an over-generation of that zeal for the kill which is so basic a part of the elemental training given the modern American fighting man.

MONTGOMERY, Ala. — Unabashed and unrestrained support by Postmaster General Winton M. (Red) Blount for Gov. Albert Brewer in his forthcoming election to the office of Governor of Alabama...

Blount, a millionaire construction tycoon from Montgomery, has publicly blurted over about Brewer's 18 months as governor being the best in Alabama's history and privately urged well-wishers to support him.

Blount, a prominent Alabama Republican, is indirectly challenging the leadership of the state's leading perfectly sane Wallace's emerging strategy.

That policy is designed for what Wallace calls "the fellows who work in the filling stations and textile mills." It would wrap around Brewer's neck what Wallace will call an unwholy coalition of the Republican and Democratic national parties, militant blacks and country club millionaires, the White House and Alabama while liberals.

Blount is the most superficially plausible and potentially damnable in the accusation that President Nixon is pulling the strings for Brewer in Montgomery — a devastating charge in the state still xenophobic.

In fact, the charge will have substance. Even White House political aides admit that they regard Brewer as a shortcut to their goal of combining the Nixon and Wallace votes of 1968 into a national Republican majority.

Contrary to the conventional wisdom of Alabama politicians who make the rounds in the confidential surveys showing amazing strength for Brewer after a year of relative inactivity by Wallace, Brewer, 41, a Wallace lieutenant of years who was lieutenant governor when Gov. Lurleen Wallace died in May, 1968, has been quietly competent. His political ideology would be described elsewhere as "moderate" (still a poison word in the Deep South).

But since Wallace feels he must regain the Governor's chair for a second Presidential campaign in 1972, he is risking his future against Brewer's insatiable ambition to be the Alabama Republican party, reduced to impotency by five years of ideological transience, is mobilizing behind Brewer and has no plans to field its own candidate. Big money interests typified by Blount overwhelmingly oppose Wallace.

What the Brewer camp wants is less public support from the Republicans. With his imposing mansion outside Montgomery, Blount is the perfect foil for Wallace's little-man populism and an integral part of his strategy. Thus, Brewer was careful not to see Blount elected to the post of Postmaster General, Nov. 20. When publicly asked about President Nixon's record, Brewer is cool and critical.

That's a wise reaction considering the fact that Alabama is one Deep South state where George Wallace remains in the contest choice with respect to the students. And that is probably just as well, too, since many of the parents had abdicated their authority, what was left of it — even earlier — MERIDIAN RECORD.

There is this difference between the pleasures of the body and the soul. Bodily pleasures are greatly destroyed so long as we do not yet enjoy them when they are partaken of to the full, our liking for them soon turns to disgust.

Spiritual delights, on the contrary, are a matter of indifference and seem to us when we do not possess them, but when we begin to experience them, then we are filled with desire, and the more we enjoy them, the more we desire them.

In the pleasures of the body, desire is poor, fruition very delightful. The former, when indulged in, soon brings disgust; but of the latter we can never have too much.

New Game: Do Your Thing — Undercut the Other Guy

By DAVID S. BRODER

WASHINGTON POST
CAMBRIDGE, Mass. — At first glance, there would seem to be no connection between such recent events as Spiro T. Agnew's broadside against the press, the "disruptive demonstration" by a group of students in a Harvard dorm of a Senate vote rejecting Clement Hayworth for Supreme Court and the quarrel between a congressional committee and the Air Force over the firing of auditor A. Ernest Fitzgerald.

But all of these events are part of that contemporary phenomenon—the crisis of the institution. Or, to put it a little more plainly, they represent the many manifestations of doing your thing by undercutting, undermining, remodeling or dismembering the other man's outfit.

The urge finds expression chiefly through central agencies designed to disrupt the work routine or to challenge the power relationships within and between those institutions.

One set of confrontations involves the internal rebellion of the lower echelons against their superiors. The pope's problems and his bishops and priests, the college presidents' typically unhappy dealings with junior faculty and students, the secretary of state's touchy negotiations with foreign negotiators—all these are part of the same pattern of bureaucratic insurrection.

We also have a second kind of confrontation—the collision of institutions with each other. When a president who campaigned against the Supreme Court is stopped by the Senate on his choice for the court; when the court, impartial as always, refuses the administration for its handling of school desegregation and Congress for its handling of Adam Clayton Powell; when the universities snuff the drive right to provide pickets against the government and the government cuts back on research grants to the universities; when the foundations go into politics and the politicians fight up the tax exemptions on the foundations; and especially when the bishops and priests, the college presidents' typically unhappy dealings with junior faculty and students, the secretary of state's touchy negotiations with foreign negotiators—all these are part of the same pattern of bureaucratic insurrection.

And so they may be. The farthest back on research grants to the universities; when the foundations go into politics and the politicians fight up the tax exemptions on the foundations; and especially when the bishops and priests, the college presidents' typically unhappy dealings with junior faculty and students, the secretary of state's touchy negotiations with foreign negotiators—all these are part of the same pattern of bureaucratic insurrection.

Children's Film Set Saturday

The Cat, a 30-minute film for children, will be shown Saturday starting at 1 p.m. at the Wadsworth School auditorium, 163 Broad St.

The film is sponsored by Eta Chapter, Beta Sigma Phi. They actually came up with proposals for improving Democratic presidential nominating procedures, just as they were supposed to do.

Goodness only knows where that sort of precedent might lead. The First National Bank of Boston was founded in 1784.

Book Review

By The Associated Press

IN RUSSIA, by Arthur Miller. The author's daughter is identified as an addict, the playwright Arthur Miller and photographer Eugene Morath (in private life they are husband and wife) offer in this book a highly subjective report on recent visits to Russia.

This is not the Russia of ideological arguments or the struggle to meet production norms. As Miller remarks, his wife's many photographs omit the usual factories, dams and construction projects. After a variety of scenes in old palaces, museums and historic places, they concentrate on the faces of the people.

THE LUSHER COLOR TEST. By Dr. Max Lusher. Translated from the German and edited by Ian Scott. Random House, $5.95.

There is a paragraph marked "Important" on the back of the dust jacket of "The Lusher Color Test" book. It says that this is a "deep" psychological test, developed for the use of psychiatrists, psychologists and physicians and is not a parlor game to be used in one-upmanship.

With the book on the market shortly before Christmas, we assume the publisher hopes that it will be used as a parlor game, but not taken so seriously that the people in the parlor are practicing medicine without a license.

Miller is very sensitive to the way Russian writers and artists feel about their work, about the censorship of their efforts, and about the intense feeling that Russian writers have about their own country, regardless of today's ideological patterns.

The playwright records here his efforts to communicate with the sort of people he would feel at home with in America, the thinkers and creators. Needless to say, his report is earnest, humorous and eloquently composed.

PUPPET ON A CHAIN. By Alistair MacLean. Doubleday, $3.95.

Major Paul Sherman, of the London Bureau of Interpol, is dispatched to Amsterdam to ferret out a murderous ring of narcotics smugglers. He gets a "little learning."

A number of European psychiatrists use the full test—of 72 colors. How accurate is the eight-color test? We really don't know, but we couldn't resist poking into our own psyche with it.

The test doesn't tell you whether you're introverted or extroverted, as you might suppose. It tells, instead, logical things as what stresses you are under and what desires you have, such as a desire for recognition.

"People who like to poke into their psyches will love the book. But you could doubtless hurt yourself or hurt others with this cotica smugger." He gets a "little learning."

THE HISTORY OF IDEAS. An introduction by George Ross. Scribner's, $5.95.

For the exploring mind, this is a net named Magg's and an introduction to one of the relatively new scholarly disciplines, the study of how ideas develop, change and evolve.

Ross first establishes the difference between ideas of light and ideas of policy, then warns against the dangers of mistaking figurative speech for literal speech.

He considers how ideas change as the evidence supports them, and how new works of ideas become systems. One of the main points is that an idea develops in one field of knowledge, often spreads quickly to other fields. One example is Darwin's theory of evolution, which spread from science to literature, to other disciplines.

The author devotes one chapter to a dissent from the concept that certain ideas are characteristic of a period or age, such as the Dark Ages or the Middle Ages.

The author of "The Guns of Navarone" has constructed in this book a fancy, tricky series of plot explosions that keep the suspense taut. Miles A. Smith

CALL HIM GEORGE. By Ann Fairbairn. Crown, $5.95.

Collectors of New Orleans aren't primarily a writer. This book is probably stronger than a novel, but she slicker. Job would be by taking the author's repeats, whatever she drops them in, the reader gets a believable, three-dimensional picture of George Lewis. He came from a family of strong character; all of them worked too hard, fighting the impossible fight against poverty.

THE PRICE OF MY SOUL. By Bernadette Devlin. Knopf, $5.95.

Miles Devlin is a peppery, articulate young woman from Northern Ireland who threw some tremors into the British Parliament by getting herself elected to that body at the age of 21. She hadn't wanted to run, and when she won she soon made it apparent that she holds Parliament in contempt.

"This is her personal story, one early part of it which shouldn't be skipped over—a revealing account of her growth up in poverty, and the influences of her mother in the formation of her character.

she was raised in an atmosphere of Irish Republicanism, and she was to change her viewpoint later. She says, "I'm not a socialist because of any high-falootin' intellectual theorizing; life has made me one."

The change came when she was a student at Queen's University in Belfast, where in the process of becoming a student activist she became firmly convinced that Ireland's problems were economic rather than political.

"I realized the task was not to free the Six Counties, but to start all over again the national revolution," she writes. "I had moved from the traditional, mad Republicanism to socialism in the context of Ulster; now I was joining my new-found socialism to my old belief in a united Ireland."

Her account is an illuminating document that throws much

New Breed of CO's Bewilders the Army

By NICHOLAS C. GIBBS
The Los Angeles Times

FT. SAM HOUSTON, Tex.,—At first glance the soldiers in Echo 4 company look like the Troops in any other combat unit at the U.S. Army center on the hilly outskirts of San Antonio. They are as bewildered and awestruck as recruits anywhere.

And the Echo 4 company grounds look like any other basic training grounds — they are immaculate. But there is something different about Echo 4 company: its officers and non-coms can't call it the most unorthodox company in the U.S. Army.

In the barracks, it isn't uncommon to see a Bible on a bunk. Nor would it be surprising to find a private who refuses to salute the flag or his officers. The company's men talk even to a vegetarian menu for those who refuse to eat meat.

Officers estimate that 80 per cent of the men in Echo 4 say grace before their meals. Many celebrate the Sabbath on Saturdays.

And none of them will bear arms, train with weapons, shoot a rifle or throw a grenade. Some refuse to practice self-defense hand-to-hand combat, even though most of them eventually will end up at some Vietnam battlefield.

The 800 men in Echo 4 are conscientious objectors. After their slowest basic training course, they will get 10 weeks of advanced individual training and individual combat — last stop before going overseas.

The Army sends its conscientious objectors who join its ranks to Ft. Sam Houston because 90 per cent of them become Medics — whether they like it or not. The Army is the only military service that takes COs.

The U.S. Army Medical Training Center here trains about 26,000 medics a year. Last year this figure included 2,000 COs and this year it is nearly 3,000. The men who refuse to bear arms for religious reasons range from Seventh Day Adventists (the largest religious group represented) to Protestants, the Assembly of God, Buddhists, Apostolic Christian, Bahai, Holiness, Church of God and others.

But more and more, another breed of conscientious objector is entering the army and this is the one that bothers army officials most of all.

The new breed is the young man who objects to the Vietnam war — on his own terms, on his own moral and political code, rather than religious dogma or church policy.

While many of these may claim CO status because of religious beliefs, their objections actually range much further philosophically. "It's a war I don't believe in," they say. "I've brought out in recent interviews with more than 60 conscientious objectors at Ft. Sam Houston. The conscientious objectors are classified into one of two categories by the Selective Service System: Those who are conscientiously opposed to combat training and those who are conscientiously opposed to both combat and non-combat training.

Although the Army (and the public) had a much more lightened attitude about conscientious objectors in 1968, the consensus of many COs interviewed was that the Army often gives them the lack of his hand, especially at inspection centers. There are some of the findings brought out in private discussions with the men:

Some Army non-coms often attempt to dissuade COs from their religious beliefs, to test their faith, at reception centers even though their draft boards supposedly already have settled the issue.

A favorite question, according to the COs, is "What would you do if you came in and found a man raping your wife? Wouldn't you kill him if you could?"

COs, particularly those with professional training or college degrees, feel that the Army's traditional policy of putting round pegs in square holes applies even more to them. "Last year, Indian Chief, Accountant, no matter what, if you're a CO you're going to be a Medic whether you want to or not," said one.

The biggest doubt in the minds of most COs appears to be whether in a moment of truth they will or will not pick up a weapon and use it to defend themselves or their wounded comrades.

But none of the men interviewed expressed deep resentment about the harassment. All expressed pride at the courageous record of COs in Vietnam combat.

COs and Army regulations never have really been compatible although the Army's treatment of the men today is much improved over the years during World War II and earlier when they were humiliated, often made to carry a broom if and a frank-spoken infantryman who is itching for another combat assignment.

Despite his tough infantry attitude about the service, Castleberry is popular with the COs. He is known among the men for his fairness, his respect for their religious beliefs, and his willingness to sit down with them and discuss their problems.

But what bothers Castleberry and his cadre of non-coms is the "depth of motivation" of more and more COs coming into the company, particularly those who seem to be more politically than religiously oriented.

"By terminology they are supposed to be religious. But really they're not in practice," the captain said.

Most of the COs see the excuse, this and that, and the growing influx of antiwar objectors as inevitable, and they are not prepared for the rigors of the battlefield.

Castleberry and his sergeants have many doubts about the between political and religious objections to war are more political than religious or moral. It is these men who they believe are lowering the "caliber" of conscientious objectors coming into Echo 4.

The captain also feels the Army is conditioning the COs too much. Consequently, he says, they are not prepared for the rigors of the battlefield.

Castleberry and his sergeants have many doubts about the

Plaque Honors Negro
dedicated to Matthew Henson, the only man to accompany Admiral Peary on all of his polar expeditions, and the first to actually reach the North Pole. Peary, unable to walk, was carried to the pole by Henson's reading of their position.

Fred Friendly: TV, Radio Will Have Failed When White House Always Sends Valentines

(Editors Note: Fred W. Friendly, former president of CBS news and now Edward R. Murrow professor of broadcast journalism, Columbia University Graduate School of Journalism, delivered these remarks at the California Institute of Technology, Pasadena, Calif.)

By FRED W. FRIENDLY
The Washington Post-Outline

In defending the vice president's speech, one of the United States Senate said, "It is the pig that is caught under the fence—the broadcast journalist or the administration. Long ago, when broadcast journalism was fighting for its right to be responsible, Edward R. Murrow, then under attack, spoke words which might be paraphrased today: When the record is finally written, will anyone question, who helped the American people better understand the dilemma of Vietnam—the administration or the American journalist. History will, of course, decide that question. But I would suspect that in the recent struggle between the news media and the government, the record has been with the journalist.

The American people are worried about Vietnam, race and youth, the three crucial stories of our time. What the vice president is attempting to do is create doubt in the minds of the American public about the motivation and background of the news coverage with the responsibility of trying to understand and explain these complicated and sensitive controversies.

When Mr. Agnew asks, "Are we demanding enough of our television news presentations?" he is certainly asking a question that others, including me, inside the profession, have asked for a generation. For some, the vice president's questions seemed to be about raised eyebrows, omitted remarks and too much news analysis. For me, it was really a speech about too little analysis.

In fact, the vice president may have made a most valuable service in his Des Moines speech. He sharpened an issue that has been diffuse for too long, inviting us all to consider once again the state of broadcast journalism.

Mr. Agnew and I share the view that television journalism leaves something to be desired. We both fear the concentration of great power in a few individuals in the broadcasting industry. But we are apparently in profound disagreement, not only on the nature of the network coverage of the president's Vietnam address, but even more importantly, on our crying need for more, not less, interpretive reporting. We require bolder, not blander illumination of the issues which divide men of reason.

Where Mr. Agnew went astray, in my view, was in his suggestion that the media ought somehow to be content for the views of the government, or merely a reflector of public opinion. He was not the first, and he was not the last, to equate fairness and the possession of great power with the obligation of conformity.

The vice president has forgotten history when he criticizes ABC's journalistic enterprise in arranging for Ambassador Harriman to participate in the broadcast that followed Mr. Nixon's speech of Nov. 3. I don't think President Kennedy rejoiced in having Senator Homer Chapin (R-Ind.) criticize his Berlin crisis speech of 1961, or that Mr. Kluber's criteria, Ladd Plumlee, president of the we use them less. Here we are in 1968, Mr. Vice President, with one leg on the moon and the other on earth, knee deep in garbage. That's going to require some news analysis.

What the president says is that he wants editorially (which network news divisions don't use) labeled for what they are. Certainly it is general custom to label news analysis and comment when it is taking place, and omission of that even under the pressure of time, is a mistake.

But Mr. Agnew ought to label his speech for what it was. Did he want to encourage responsible journalism, or did he wish to silence it?

Perhaps the journalist and the party in power are always destined to be on the out. President Eisenhower was pretty sure with television news until he left office when he became a senator. President Kennedy was reading and watching more and enjoying it less. Three sets and knew how to talk back to three talking heads at once, and the Nixon administration has let us know where he stands. It is my theory that when the message from Des Moines or the White House is self is always a valentine or a garland of flowers, television and radio will have failed their purpose.

Possible Links in Killings Sought in Cult Lore Study

by JERRY COHEN Copyright 1969, The Los Angeles Times
LOS ANGELES — Detectives here are investigating possible links between the recent slaying of a young scientist and the seven murders linked to the alleged killers of actress Sharon Tate, it was learned Tuesday.

Parallels among the savage crimes are philosophical as well as physical. As a result, investigators are dipping into the lore of cabala which practice black magic and glorify sexual excess.

Under particular scrutiny is the cult which is fiercely antipatriarchal and whose beliefs include satan-worship. It is an offshoot of scientology but is disavowed by practitioners of that mystical, quasi-scientific order.

The outlaw cult is known both as "The Process" and "The Final Church of Judgment." Its members are nicknamed "mind benders" and they claim to be in direct contact with Lucifer and Christ.

Detectives have been struck by the similarities between the philosophies and the occultism of Charles Manson and his recent band of followers indicted for the other murders.

The cult is based in Los Angeles, where English author, despite great pressure, have recognized it as a legitimate church.

But it has staged major recruiting drives in the United States, which suggests the possibility of cross-fertilization between "The Process" and the Manson cult.

Christkindl Staff Sends Notes of Hope

CHRISTKINDL, Austria (AP) — The post office here is a busy place just now. The Christkindl—or Christ Child—is usually depicted as a tiny angel that delivers gifts at Christmas.

Christkindl, the name of this hamlet, is a diminutive form. A seasonal post office was opened here 20 years, with one clerk and a helper. Now the staff has grown to 14; they handled 1,400,000 letters and cards last year.

Other outlaws who had been living at the residence scattered shortly afterward. One who did stay, a slight young man who held Christopher Jesus' head as he lay dying, said he is convinced the death was not a suicide.

He said when he heard the gunshot, he entered the bedroom and found a young woman, another Manson devotee, holding the gun lightly by the trigger guard.

"She told me: 'Jesus about himself,'" the young man said. "But she had this strange faraway smile on her face, as if she were saying to me: 'This time had come, time for me to shoot him.'"

"You have to understand what these people believe — 'That you are me, and I am you' — to realize how their minds interlock, how she could have killed him and then said he did it."

It is believed that the young woman and other Manson cultists present that night fled to Death Valley, site of the clan's last commune.

High School Plans Approved by Board

The Board of Education, after a postponement of six months, last night voted to recommend to the Town Council that the town proceed with building the same plans for a 2,000-student high school that were tabled last May.

After six months of updating and reviewing plans, evaluating alternate plans prepared by the administration, and interviewing administrators in other systems, the board continues to feel that the original site, is both the best and the most economical site for a new high school.

Behavior problems during past seasons have dictated approval, and building can proceed at a rapid enough pace. The original plans called for an open lot concept, which in May of this year the Planning Commission estimated would cost $7,583,000.

At present the PBC and the Town Council have not considered any of the board's proposals, which must be done before the plans can proceed further.

The board also voted to offer the Elmwood school bleachers to the town for the town's use and disposal. At present the Board of Education is assuming the responsibility and expense of moving the bleachers around town to serve other Little League or middle school ball. The board felt that the town could assume the responsibility.

At present the PBC and the Town Council have not considered any of the board's proposals, which must be done before the plans can proceed further.

Next musical fad in United States may well be the boom of Kalimba. Dr. Hugh Tracey, who designed the instrument, holds it to show that the adaptation of the native African instrument is smaller than a cigar box.

project is financed by a $145,000 Ford Foundation grant.

The Kalimba is a native African instrument that can be traced back at least 800 years and it may go back 1500 years.

Tracey worked 10 years perfecting his adaptation. The waterkeyed kalimba can change keys by having its reeds adjusted and it has a clear, soft sound.

Tracey never has studied music formally in the western sense. "I studied in the home," he explained. "I got my doctorate the hard way."

He is in this country primarily to promote interest in this music. He lectured at the University of Maryland and spoke at a class at Howard University.

Democrats, President Trade Onus for Congress' Inaction

WASHINGTON (AP) — House Democrats are laying the onus for the administration's inaction on Congress' failure to act.

However, the Oklahoma representative said Monday, the Democratic-controlled Congress has "performed its duties, in the face of repeated administration delays, obstruction, confusion and lack of leadership."

Nixon responded to the charge at his news conference Monday night by calling it "a pretty serious control package before Congress we have had other programs in a number of fields there has been any final action on the draft."

But Albert contended the real problem is a "disorientation" by the administration. At first, he said, Congress accepted the confusion, the delays, the lack of clear stated goals and the limited leadership as the struggle of an administration seeking its way. It now is clear there is no Republican program and no sound comprehension of the problems confronting the nation, Albert said.

"It has also become clear that press agencies have been substituted for action," he said. At the same time, Albert said, the Republicans are quick to claim credit for some voter-appeal programs such as tax reform which he claimed the Democrats in Congress initiated.

His advice to Nixon was to be more consistent, to lessen the rhetoric and increase the substance and to let Congress know the administration's position so Congress may more effectively work its will.

SAC Bid for Warhead Rejected by Air Force

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Strategic Air Command apparently has lost its bid for a nuclear missile warhead with enough punch to knock out a derogatory enemy missile sites and other "hardened" targets.

Defense officials said Tuesday the proposal was rejected by Secretary of the Air Force Robert C. Seamans Jr.

But Air Force sources suggested the idea still is alive, claiming SAC has been told the concept needs more study.

The heads of Seamans' action was not entirely clear, although some Pentagon officials acknowledged money was a factor.

Also figuring in the decision could have been the possible disruptive effect of such a project on Strategic Arms Limitations Talks with the Soviet Union.

The issue surfaced with publication of recent secret testimony by Gen. John D. Ryan, Air Force chief of staff and a former SAC commander.

In a discussion of U.S. multiple warheads, Ryan said the House defense appropriations subcommittee.

"We have a program we are putting to increase the yield of our warheads and decrease the circular error probable so that we have what we call a hard target kill which we do not have in the inventory at the present time."

The word "yield" refers to the explosive power of a nuclear weapon. "Circular error probable" — CEP — is a measure of a weapon's accuracy.

12th Circuit Court Cases

ROCKVILLE SESSION — A hearing to show probable cause was waived yesterday.

Ryan testified behind closed doors in October. Some time after that, Pentagon officials said, the SAC proposal was turned down.

The Defense Department said in a brief comment "neither the Air Force nor the Navy is developing a higher yield warhead. We are always seeking to improve the CEP of all our warheads."

Defense officials acknowledged a move by the United States at this time to develop a bigger, punch warhead for the Minuteman III intercontinental ballistic missile could be interpreted by the Soviets as an effort to achieve a "first strike" capability.

The United States has sworn any effort to gain such a capability, but has chosen a course under which it has built a strategic force of long-range, land-based missiles, bombers and missile-riding submarines which could survive a surprise attack to strike back.

In line with the second strike deterrent policy, the United States has designed its multiple missile warheads to use against cities and industrial centers rather than underground missile bases and enemy command centers.

Air Force sources denied that the SAC plan contemplated a "first strike" capability. They say the purpose would be to use U.S. missiles to knock out in a retaliatory U.S. strike, any nuclear warheads that might be used to blast Soviet bombers not yet aloft but protected behind overcast clouds.

Lupton Worrying About His Image

John M. Lupton

"I want to take Tom Dodd's place," Sen. John M. Lupton told his cocktail party guests yesterday at Pina's Restaurant in Bolton. "There are a great many people in Connecticut who want someone to take Tom Dodd's place. The reason I am speaking now is that I want to clear something up."

And the something the senator from the 26th District wants to clear up is his image, which he labeled "Goldwater Republican."

Lupton and his wife, Mavis, were recent hosts to about 100 party officials from all over the state, complete with names, addresses, phone numbers, and so on. ### Congress No Aid to Nixon is over the new voting right law Nixon has asked to replace the 1965 act, due to lapse next August.

The 1965 act was drawn up specifically to reach Deep South states with a long history of discrimination against Negro voters, and it bans and expedites federal powers apply only in Alabama, Georgia, Louisiana, Mississippi, North Carolina, South Carolina and Virginia.

In his bid for southern delegates support at the Republican National Convention, Nixon promised he would never propose legislation to repeal the 1965 act.

His voting rights bill keeps that pledge.

It would extend some provisions of the 1965 act to the entire nation and relieve the southern states of what they feel is their sorest affliction, a requirement that they get approval from the attorney general before putting any new election laws or procedures into effect.

Civil rights groups are bitterly opposed to losing the pinpoint focus on the Southern states.

The issue was argued at length at the White House and the bill went to Congress. Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey, D-Minn., said he would support the bill, but that he would not support any new election laws or procedures into effect.

So did Rep. William M. McCulloch of Ohio, senior Republican on the House Judiciary Committee and his party's acknowledged spokesman in the House on civil rights. Rep. John Anderson of Illinois, No. 3 in the House leadership at the conference of the Republican Conference stood with McCulloch.

Arguing that Republicans should not be asked to reverse themselves, McCulloch and Anderson promised to support the administration bill as separate legislation if Nixon would endorse a five-year extension of the present law.

In the end, Atty. Gen. Mitchell, the chief advocate of the new plan, prevailed with Nixon, but the decision led to a humiliating defeat in the House Judiciary Committee. With 12 of the 19 committee Republicans following McCulloch's lead, the committee voted for a straight five-year extension of the act.

Minority Leader Ford, an early co-sponsor of the present legislation, now has switched to the administration side, and a close vote is expected when the House comes to the House floor this week.

McCulloch remains grimly determined to defeat it.

"I don't like fighting the White House," McCulloch said, "but maybe after this they'll listen to some of us."

McCulloch and other GOP leaders believe Nixon is listening too much to Mitchell and other political advisers and not enough to the Republicans in Congress. They also believe a show of muscle will improve their standing at the White House.

Ford is counting on the determination of House Republicans to make out their own position on anti-terror legislation, giving him — as their leader — a stronger voice in White House councils.

Sen. Scott hopes a similar result will flow from the administration's defeat last week on an amendment to the tax bill.

The amendment, offered by Sen. Albert Gore, D-Tenn., proposed to increase the $600 personal income tax exemption to $800.

Nixon was against any increase, preferring tax rate cuts voted by the House. Scott, however, felt the Gore amendment would do so he worked with Sen. Charles P. Stenholm, R-Okla., on an alternative. It would have increased the exemption to $1,000, but the Treasury — and if adopted, deprive Gore, who faces a tough re-election fight, of a substantial legislative victory.

But the Treasury Department disapproved Pery's amendment and amid much confusion at the Senate, where the administration's bill is down and the Gore bill is up, a frustrated Scott felt compelled to make public his displeasure.

"I hope the responsible people in the Treasury, in my own administration, will listen to the way we try to advise them that legislatively, we understand more about tactics and strategy than they do," the Republican leader said in a Senate speech.

Later he told a reporter he did not believe me.

No matter how bitter the dispute between the administration and the Capitol Hill legislators, criticism of Nixon personally has been muted and there is a widespread belief among congressional Republicans that the situation would improve if he took a firmer hand.

The firmer hand they complain, for example, that the administration has been late coming in many cases, thus holding up legislative recommendations.

FDA Shakeup Starts at Top Sources Claim

WASHINGTON (AP) — Dr. Herbert L. Ley Jr. will be fired soon as head of the much criticized Food and Drug Administration, government sources said today.

Ley's replacement by Dr. Charles C. Edwards, a surgeon turned management expert in medical affairs, is the first step in a wide-ranging shakeup planned for the FDA by Robert H. Finch, secretary of health, education and welfare.

At least five other top FDA officials will also be fired, sources said.

HEW has scheduled an announcement for later today.

Ley, as of early morning, had not been told of his firing.

The agency has been criticized by the industry for alleged foot-dragging on approval of new drugs and medical products; by consumer protection advocates for alleged lax enforcement of safety laws; and by Finch for alleged indecision on such issues as the health of the artificial sweetener, cyclamate.

Edwards, 46, was brought into the government last month as an assistant to Dr. Roger O. Egerton, assistant HEW secretary for health and scientific affairs.

Edwards was a practicing surgeon until 1961 when he turned to administrative medicine.

He first served as a consultant to the surgeon general, then as an assistant director for medical education and hospitals and as director of socio-economic affairs for the American Medical Association.

Stock Market

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock market prices continued lower along a broadening front in moderate noontime trading today.

Brokers said the downward trend was due to general lack of buying interest and the failure of the market Tuesday to sustain a midday rally.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials at noon was off 4.29 at 77.82.

Stocks dropping in price stretched their earlier lead to advances to 82 to 84.

Investor concern over tight money continues to drag on prices. The vice chairman of the Federal Reserve Board said today "tighter and more painful" controls might be needed to assist inflation.

AP 30 stock average at noon was down 4 at 260.4, with industrials off 1.4, rails off .3 and utilities off .2.

New York state leads the nation in the number of employed registered nurses with a total of 74,200 as of 1968; California ranks second with 68,000; Pennsylvania third with 45,800.

Fensterwald Pastime
He Continues Investigating Three Major Assassinations

By SHELLEY COFFEY III
The Washington Post
WASHINGTON — There have been periods when Bernard Fensterwald Jr. has stood near the hot center of power in Washington, when he was quoted and sought by an admiring press corps. Back in 1963, when Fensterwald was general counsel of a Senate subcommittee investigating the abuses of government, Bobby Kennedy lashed out at each other in public and in private.

Now Bud Fensterwald's pale eyes narrow slightly when he says "I know what I'm doing is unpopular." What he is doing, aside from private law practice, is pursuing a pastime that has sometimes come to be associated with a legion of fools and opportunists: He is investigating the assassinations of Robert Kennedy and Martin Luther King.

Bud Fensterwald is no ordinary conspiracy-seeker, looking to turn a fast review of flaws in the Warren Report into an instant paperback and cheap publicity. These days, he tries to arrive at his offices about 7 o'clock, to pore over documents and to write on them. He does not feel that there is any immediate physical danger in his consuming avocation; but he has set aside a sum of money for the investigation into his death should he vanish some day. He has also placed copies of his most important evidence in "places that would be very difficult to get to."

This kind of talk upsets some people, particularly those who know Fensterwald's background. He is an impeccable blond, with a proper southern Jewish family, trips to Europe as a child, Harvard Law School, a good World War II record as a naval lieutenant and the makings of a creditable career at the State Department.

"I guess part of it is that I'm a rebel," says Fensterwald, who has had several political horses shot out from under during his career. He is a member of the Warren Report into an instant paperback and cheap publicity. These days, he tries to arrive at his offices about 7 o'clock, to pore over documents and to write on them.

authorized certain writs and attorney general. The hearings aroused furor, controversy, at times and finally were "the ones that did us all in," as Fensterwald puts it these days, only a trace of edge remaining through his professionally modulated, slightly southern-accented voice.

He pondered, broods, spills great streams of the kind words, tries to keep his phone bills down. He sends reports with carbon papers Fensterwald's abilities puts it this way: "Yes, he is obsessed with the investigation, but in the best sort of way. I always felt like he had scattered his talents widely, but I think if anyone can crack this thing, it's Bud. I've never seen a more brilliant man when he sets his mind to something."

Nativity Group To Plan Sing

The Nativity Home Committee met in the Municipal Building last night to elect officers for next year and discuss plans for a community sing in Center Park sometime this month.

The purpose of continuing the committee, explained Chairman William Stevenson, is to raise money for a smaller Christmas display in the North End next year.

Stevenson was re-elected chairman last night, with John Sullivan as vice chairman and Matthew M. Moriarty as honorary permanent chairman. Moriarty served as vice-chairman this year.

Mrs. Eleanor Arvey was re-elected secretary. Charles Pire, treasurer, and Mrs. Charles Pire will be assistant treasurer. Sullivan and Ernest J. Turck, superintendent of parks, will remain as co-chairmen of the scenic committee.

Students Hear Ruby Zagoren

Miss Ruby Zagoren, author of children's books, recently spoke to the sixth grade Buckley School class of Michael Norman. She discussed her latest book, "The True Story of an African Yankee."

She briefly recounted the life of Smith, son of an African chief, who was kidnapped by black slave traders when he was six years old, and marched 400 miles through Guinea (now Ghana) to the sea. Brought to New England, he served three masters in Connecticut, but worked for 30 years to be released from slavery.

He was finally able to purchase the freedom of himself, his wife and children. For the remainder of his life, he was a ship owner on the Connecticut River, sailing out of East Haddam, where he is buried in the Congregational Church graveyard.

A native of East Haddam, Miss Zagoren is married to Samuel Silverstein, formerly of Bolton, and now lives in Torrington, where her husband is a junior high school teacher. While only a young girl, she applied for the position of East Haddam correspondent of the Hartford Courant and was given the assignment.

In the middle 1960s, she worked for the Courant in Manchester, and still does free lance work for that paper. Her first book of poetry when she was 18. She is the author of two early books of poetry: "New England Sampler" and "Israel My Israel." Last month, she attended an authors' and illustrators' meeting at the Ocean Hill - Brownville schools in Brookline, N.Y., where she spoke on fiction.

Miss Ruby Zagoren, author of children's books, recently spoke to the sixth grade Buckley School class of Michael Norman. She discussed her latest book, "The True Story of an African Yankee."

Christmas Challenge: Tasteful Decorations

By VIVIAN BROWN
AP Wirephoto

Many people lose perspective when they try their hand at outdoor decorations for Christmas. The challenge may be greater than that presented in interior design.

This year, Yuletide decorations are so high-priced—some eastern city stores have timed at $5 a box—that all may be spared "the amusement park look" that nights many pretty house facades.

Often, the problem is too many lighting arrangements. You can light a tree, windows, doors, bushes, rooftops, but it might be a bit much to light everything.

Some people are dedicated to a plastic motif—Santa, sled and reindeer on the roof, animals and snowmen placed on the lawn. Some people load the front door with tinsel. Fortunately, decorations in better taste than others, you can afford them. But many people have a backlog of psychodrama in junk and the temptation is great to use all of it.

It's a good time to take inventory of Christmas lights, tired old door wreaths and tarnished tinsel.

Try something simple in outdoor decoration. Monochromatic color schemes work well indoors for neophyte decorators. It is worth an experiment outdoors. Everything is kept to one color, but not necessarily to one tone.

If you use such a lighting scheme, you can use large lights in one area, if that is your desire. You can have a tree with blue lights on the evergreens and yellows that are close to the house. An all-white tree can go from the front lawn to the house. A tree with angel hair on the Christmas tree for a cowbody ethereal look. Green lights are pretty on an outdoor tree and a large green velvet bow tucked to a front door wreath of holly is pretty, too.

Tiny white lights that provide an elegant look can be threaded through boxwood and yews as well as the big fir and bare trees. Traditionally, white lights are pretty, providing they aren't strung up everywhere.

Marine decorations are light windows rather than trees and it is a particularly good idea for apartment dwellers who can enjoy the display indoors.

For many years, one New England house has been aglow with wreaths of golden lighted candles in 20 or more windows. There is no effort to light up the lawn. The idea has been copied by neighbors, but everyone did just a little bit more, and it doesn't come off. In one instance, red lights were used, but the effect was horrible. In addition, the red-lighted house had a dazzling Christmas tree, a sled on the lawn filled with gift-wrapped boxes, a snowman at the gate, and a large, ornate wreath on the door. It was an overwhelming sight, too many good things in one package.

One family may choose to spotlight a plastic Santa in the snowdrift, because it has child appeal. Another may like plastic animals on the lawn. Lights are used to display everything to get across the Yuletide message.

Small decorative trees and bushes provide a special look in their starkness if they are decorated with colorful objects. Poinsettias, plastic ornaments and a few green glass ornaments are fun. Everything is kept to one color, but not necessarily to one tone.

Door wreaths can be made with a heartwarming or a large wreath of Christmas trees. The wreath may be placed on a circle that has been formed from a wire coat hanger and decorated with little white wood or plastic birds, Christmas ornaments or fruit. A handsome wreath may be made with the basic green and some reds and blues. A wreath of lemons, kumquats—wired to it. The Christmas entrance look. Green lights are pretty on an outdoor tree and a large green velvet bow tucked to a front door wreath of holly is pretty, too.

Tiny white lights that provide an elegant look can be threaded through boxwood and yews as well as the big fir and bare trees. Traditionally, white lights are pretty, providing they aren't strung up everywhere.

Smog Sounding Death Knell For Giants of Forest

SAN BERNARDINO, Calif. (AP) — Twenty years ago, needles on forest giants in mountains east of Los Angeles began turning yellow. Many trees have since died and hundreds of thousands are dying.

The trees, soaring more than 700 years old, were Ponderosa pines, among the largest in the world.

Seeds from their six-inch cones feed squirrels, chipmunks and other small mammals. The lumber builds houses.

Ponderosa needles, 5 to 10 inches long and lasting up to seven years on a healthy tree, began rotting at the tip. Then the entire needles turned yellow and fell off after one season. Roots deteriorated as a result of low flow through the trunk diminished. The trees fell easy prey to bark beetles and other insects.

Foresters at first were baffled. They called the problem X-disease and blamed it on some insect. Eventually, however, they tabbed the villain: smog.

The agent that kills the needles is a smog ingredient called ozone.

It is created chemically in the atmosphere due to the action of sunlight on exhaust, the most uncontrolled major source of smog in Los Angeles. Among the characteristics is the ability to crack rubber used in tires and windshield wipers.

Overhead, formations of a near death sentence. Unlike most other pines, they have a disease and blame it on some insect. Eventually, however, they tabbed the villain: smog.

First Exact Measurements Of Mars Made by Mariner

By BRIAN SULLIVAN
AP Science Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Mariner flights past Mars have given scientists the first direct, precise measurement of the diameter of the planet.

The new measurements give Mars a radius of 2,139 miles and a diameter of 4,278 miles. Up-to-date textbook figures place the radius at 2,100 and the diameter at 4,200 miles.

Dr. Arvidas Klotz of the California Institute of Technology, in a report Tuesday to the 11th meeting of the American Astronomical Society, said even more precise figures will result when the figures are analyzed further.

The new figures are based on experiments conducted with the gate, an enormous camera that took 41 Mariner 7 last Aug. 5.

The measurements also confirm that Mars appears to be somewhat flattened sphere, much like the earth, Klotz said.

Previous estimates of the Mars measurements, he said, were based on photographs and ranged from 3,370 to 3,400 kilometers for the radius. The new figures are 2,139 kilometers, a possible error in either direction of 4.5 kilometers.

With a better knowledge of the Mariner orbital figures, Dr. Klotz said, the margin of uncertainty could be reduced to 1.5 kilometers.

The measurements were made by radio occultation, marking the points where the Mariner radio signal was cut off and then returned as the spacecraft passed beyond the planet.

In another report to the Astronomical Society, Dr. Gerard T. Wilson of the University of California at Berkeley said he had suspected for the first time the confirmed existence of ammonia in the atmosphere of Saturn.

Wilson and William J. Welch used the radio telescope at the Jet Propulsion Laboratory to look for the characteristic radiation spectra from ammonia, looking at frequencies measured in millimeters.

The discovery confirms that Saturn has a "pervasive atmosphere," much like the earth's, shortly after the earth was formed and which led to the development of organic molecules. The atmosphere of Jupiter is similar, Wilson said.

Red Cross Skeptical Of Nigerian Vow

GENEVA (AP) — Britain announced Tuesday night the Nigerian government would give safe conduct to Red Cross relief officials to Biafra, but a Red Cross official said today the Nigerians' offer was nothing new.

During debate in the House of Commons the British government said the Nigerian government would give safe conduct to Red Cross relief officials to Biafra, but a Red Cross official said today the Nigerians' offer was nothing new.

The 35-year-old leader of a communal clan he calls "the family" was brought here Tuesday night in a five-hour, 800-mile automobile trip from remote Inyo County, where he had been held on charges of arson and receiving stolen property.

Three women indicted with him Monday by the Los Angeles County Grand Jury were ordered to Superior Court today for arraignment. They are Susan Denise Akers, 21; Linda Kasabian, 20; and Leslie Sankston, 19. Manson will be arraigned Thursday.

Meanwhile, Detective L.L. Karl Deemer told newsmen police were studying a "possible similarity" between knife-gunsheer killings with which the cult members are charged and two other deaths.

Deemer referred to the slaying of Doreen Clark, 19, and James Sharp, 15, whose bodies were found in a Los Angeles alley Nov. 4. Each had been stabbed 50 to 60 times and killed by the Red Cross relief group.

The internets John Joseph Church III is continuing night flights to Biafra, but officials say these flights only provide 40 percent of the food the people in the breakaway state need.

Arraignment Thursday Clan Leader Manson Jailed In Murder-Conspiracy

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Tuesday night from Independence, the Inyo County Sheriff's Office arrested Charles Manson and six others.

Manson, long-haired and wearing fringe-tipped buckskin clothing, Charles M. Manson appeared bewildered as he arrived in Los Angeles to be jailed on murder-conspiracy charges in the deaths of actress Sharon Tate and six others.

New Look at Mideast War — From Streets of a Tent City

By JESSE W. LEWIS JR.
The Washington Post Staff

DAMASCUS — Naamah Zaa, Suleiman, a dark, ruggedly handsome woman, lives in tent no. 274 in a dusty, windwept city of beige canvas on the outskirts of Damascus.

She was holding her son Naah (which means "displacement" in English), who she said in Damascus in 1967 on the way from the newly occupied Golan Heights.

Last month her husband, Murat Yaasen, 36, died "fighting Israel's tope," she said.

Many of the Palestinian men whose families live in the 700 tents are ex-soldiers and some of them have been killed since the June 1967 war.

"Thank God he died fighting rather than living here in this camp for people without a country," Mrs. Suleiman said.

A Syrian government official said there are about 1,000 persons living in this refugee camp, one of several built in Syria since the war.

There are only four water taps in the camp. Children carry pails in their hands and men use balance buckets on their heads to take the water to their tents. The only source of water is an 18-inch-deep and 4-inch-wide concrete gutter that runs between the rows of tents.

Cooking is done on stinger-burner kerosene stoves, which are adequate for the normal meals of beans and a few other vegetables.

Inside Mrs. Suleiman's tent, where she and her six children live, there is an assortment of tin pots, boxes, clothes and broken toys. Her black ankle-length dress and the floor of the tent are covered with the dust that permeates the camp. Her oldest son, 11-year-old Yaasen, scowls at the tent in the background.

"Why does America support Israel against the Arabs?" asked a 26-year-old army colonel while eating late dinner at a officers' club on the outskirts of Damascus.

"When I was a child there was no Israel," he said. "The oldest country in the world, stretching through 4,000 years of man's history. Its residents refused their appearance the strands of the Arab with blond and red hair, blue eyes and fair complexion, as well as Syrian Arabs with dark hair, dark eyes and dark skin.

But now, two years after the Arab-Israeli war, the fact that Syria considers itself still at war overshadows the theme of unity, American, Greek, Roman, Byzantine history. When you walk through the Damascus Mosque, which was built in A.D. 706 and is one of the oldest mosques in the world, you are reminded of the Arab-Israeli conflict.

Inside the Mosque's sanctuary is a mausoleum that contains the head of St. John the Baptist.

Angry Ranchers Plan to Sue In Concert Damage

LIVERMORE, Calif. (AP) — Angry ranchers say they plan to sue for half a million dollars for damages they claim to have suffered from the weekend the Bulgarian National Folk Ensemble performed at a concert where four youths died.

In addition, Alameda County supervisors voted Tuesday to start proceedings to revoke the permit of Dick Carter, operator of the Alamo Amphitheater, who invited the Rolling Stones and other musicians to perform in the city for the first time in two years.

More than 300,000 flocked to the 80-acre amphitheater Saturday night for two outdoor concerts. Traffic was backed up for 30 miles in all directions. Some youths abandoned their cars and walked up to 10 miles across rolling pasture land to get to the concert.

C.W. Tripp, spokesman for an indignant group of ranchers, said they had authorized an attorney to file suit totaling $500,000 against Carter, the California Northwest Capital Co., and other owners of the venue.

The concert was generally peaceful until Meredith Hunter, 19, Berkeley, Calif., was stabbed fatally in a fight with members of the Hells Angels motorcycle gang a few minutes before the show ended.

Earlier, a youth drowned in a swimming pool, a child was killed by a falling rock, and a car plowed into five persons at a picnic on a hillside, killing two of them.

The horses led the pasture where the speedway littered with broken glass, empty wine bottles, paper, discarded clothes and ashes from bonfires.

Tolland Petition, Truck Purchase On Town Meeting Agenda

The Board of Selectmen last night tentatively set Dec. 19 as the date for a town meeting to be held in the town hall, pending an okay by Town Counsel Robert King. To be at the town meeting is a petition containing 72 valid signatures and originated by Umberto Palumbo. The petition seeks free use of the school grounds by all town residents, despite a decision by the Board of Education to charge for the use of the school facilities this year.

Also to appear on the call of the town meeting is the purchase of a sand spreader and a new truck. The spreader previously approved by the selectmen, and receiving finance board approval last night will be financed by a $2,600 appropriation from non-recurring expense account for capital equipment.

The balance of the $5,000 account ($2,000) will be used to purchase a new town truck which was okayed last night by the selectmen and the finance board. The balance of the cost of the truck will be paid for by borrowing in anticipation of next year's taxes.

Sealed bids for the truck were opened during last night's selectmen's meeting and the bid awarded to Brian Ford Truck Sales of Hartford for a total cost of $9,750.

Two other bids were also received, from GMC Airport Truck Center and from Backus Motor Sales in Hartford which varied from the specifications drawn up by First Selectman Charles Thiffault, Highway Superintendent William Sevelik and local contractor Clifford Williams.

The truck will be ordered immediately upon approval by the town meeting, according to Thiffault, since the town is operating with less trucks available than in previous years.

An inventory of town equipment prepared by Sevelik lists three town trucks, a 1967 four-wheel drive pickup truck rated in good condition; a 1968 Chevrolet, fair; and a 1962 Chevrolet, rated very poor.

The 1967 truck is presently in the garage being repaired. The result of an accident two weeks ago when the truck tipped over into Brewster Lake, and is expected to be back in operation Friday or Monday after $1,000 worth of damage.

In the event of an emergency the town is down to three trucks to plow and one to spread, including those already used for other town duties.

Usual operations use six town trucks, Sevelik told the finance board last night.

Lead trucks are presently being used from four of the usual six contractors. The other two have not posted certificates of insurance to protect the town, and will not be called on by Sevelik.

Furnace Repairs
The selectmen also awarded the job of repairing the furnace at the Administration Building to Benjamin Musio of Hartford on an estimated bid of $560.

Writer Takes a Second Look At Cyclamate and DDT Bans

By GERALD LEACH
The London Observer

Last month six governments suddenly banned cyclamates, the artificial sweetener. Then, "Delaney clause," in several instances without anyone seeing details of the tests.

In Britain the advisers did see the details, which immediately plunges the story even deeper into farce. For one of the first things they discovered when the fog-bound report at last reached them was that the rats had only been fed massive doses of cyclamates: the cyclamates had been mixed with saccharine.

It must have been an awkward moment. However, the committee concluded that since saccharine has been around longer without (like cyclamate) apparently doing any harm, the villain which caused the tumors must have been the cyclamate.

So, two days later, the British Minister of Agriculture was phased out, and the food trade was told to tighten up instead with saccharine and fattening sugar.

Consider the cyclamates first. The vitamins in the ration of the United States were found in bladder tumors were found in rats that had spent all their adult lives eating daily doses of cyclamate 50 times higher than those permitted with humans (allowing for different body weights).

As the science journal Nature has said, this evidence is about as solid as candy-floss. Any biologist worth his salary can get any substance — common salt, dioxin, lemonade or what you will — to produce cancer changes in animals if he pump enough of the stuff into them. The real problem is to show that normal expected doses have (or don't have) any effect on people.

With most substances this takes years of very careful study. With cyclamates a year or so of such studies have failed to find that they do harm except, very rarely, to cause mild signs complaint.

Indeed, because of this lack of evidence the British Food Additives and Contaminants Committee (the people who have now advised the cyclamate ban in Britain) have twice before recommended that they should be allowed.

Why the sudden turnabout? In America the ban was forced on the government by the Delaney Amendment, a measure that was slipped with hardly any informed discussion into the U.S. Food and Drug laws. It says that any substance shown to cause cancer when fed to animals or man (no matter how inactive the dose) must be banned.

Moynihan Signs in at Meet On Environmental Control

BRUSSELS (AP)—The Nixon administration is giving every indication to the Atlantic Alliance that environmental control and improvement of the quality of life on earth has become one of its major concerns.

At present there is little chance of this happening because the bans are concerned with our own local wild life. But if we begin to screw down on pesticides, because of entirely unsubstantiated fears that they are "poisoning" us; if we start clamoring that our present DDT levels of about two to three parts per million must be slashed, then we would have to put pressure on tropical countries.

For instance, we would almost certainly have to refuse to import many of their crops because of their DDT content. The moral of these two onslaughts on pollution is not that we should stop caring about the kind of man-made chemicals we use and drink and breathe. It is that we should care more.

Instead of acting emotionally, or branding under the blue from every quick slogan or fervent lobby group, we have to realize that these things are never as simple as they at first seem — and think about them hard before we move.

Another American pilot project on air pollution was still to come, possibly today. The conference over its existence to a suggestion made by President Nixon last February. A Belgian expert will speak on open sea pollution. West Germany is planning a study of the manner in which scientific knowledge is transmitted to political authorities charged with making decisions.

Other member nations of NATO are presenting their plans for studying various aspects of today's society today and Wednesday.

Vernon Also Gets Jan. 7 Deadline On Renewal Area Tenants

A motion passed by the Redevelopment Commission last night, gives Alco Development Corp., developers of the renewal area, until Jan. 7 to firm up commitments for the three major tenants for the commercial parcel. If the date is not met, the commission tends to look for another developer.

The motion was prompted by Lester Baum, chairman of the Redevelopment Commission, and it would allow the developers to take "early entry" of the commercial parcel if the three commitments are obtained.

Following the regular meeting, Sam DiCarlo and Atty. Harvey Hoberman, representatives of Alco, strongly defended the commission's position. Hoberman said that the commission is not in a position to make a decision until the three commitments are obtained.

The developers have been negotiating with two banks and a supermarket which will be the three prime tenants. Last night a rendering of the proposed commercial section received favorable comment from the commission. The attractive building would have a partial Mansard roof, archways for entrances to the various stores and an overhanging center.

The whole timing of construction in the commercial area even though the mortgage money is not available now. There is a promise it will be available at the end of the first quarter of 1970.

DiCarlo explained that the company could get work started now with its own money but could not promise any construction schedule as this would be dependent upon the weather and soil factors in the area.

Asked by Atty. Robert D. Beak, representing the commission, if the developer is allowed early entry if that would mean any of the provisions of the original contract would be waived, Atty. Hoberman said this was not the intention.

Following the meeting, Atty. Hoberman said, "I don't think we can make a decision based on fear of what might happen."

Ft. Bragg Holds Seminar To Ease Racial Tensions

By RICHARD DAW
Associated Press Writer
FT. BRAGG, N.C. (AP) — A white colonel leaned forward to listen as a Negro private said: "The Army's a lot of hypocrites, always talking about equality when everybody knows that right outside the base there's a Ku Klux Klan sign."

On the other side of the room, Army sergeant said: "You whites are just using slaves to fight your battles." A third Negro added: "Whites don't ever want to see a black man make any rank."

The brigade's purpose, he said, is to bring to the Army's attention problems of discrimination encountered by Negroes. "From what we've seen so far, the brigade has the potential for being a constructive force," Nulsen said.

Richard Rose, manager, said the Phone Store will move from 30 Park Pl. to the first floor of the three-story building at 1 Court St. He said that building in the area made the move to the new quarters necessary.

The office will include a work area for the 15 employees making the move, plus a conference room and training room. For added customer convenience, the company will now offer free parking in a lot to the side and another lot to the rear.

Another delay, also not the fault of the developer, Atty. Hoberman said, was the changing of the ratio of the parking spaces in the new building and out with a 2:1 ratio but no provision for a minimum of one space for every 3:1.

Asked how serious racial tensions are at Ft. Bragg, Nulsen replied: "I think the situation is serious, but I don't think it's anything near explosive."

A jury took almost two hours Monday in Tolland County Superior Court to come up with a verdict of innocent for Robert W. Bussiere of Sigourney St. Hartford, charged with theft of a motor vehicle. Bussiere was accused of taking a car, owned by Gary Phillip of Tolland, following his escape from a detention cell in the Memorial Building courthouse on Aug. 13.

Tolland County Superior Court Bolton Junior Women, Cadettes Join in Christmas Sale

The Bolton Junior Women's Club and the Cadettes in Girl Scout Troop 609 have joined forces this month to bring Christmas to Bolton.

Tomorrow evening the Cadettes will hold a sale of arts and crafts articles they have made during the Junior Women's Club "Holiday Happening" at St. George's Episcopal Church. This event, open to everyone in town, will begin at 7 p.m. Many hand-made articles will be sold and auctioned off by both organizations.

The tree will add to the festivities of the Junior Women's Club card sing Dec. 21 at 8:30 p.m. in the Green. Mrs. E. F. Fierro, Santa Claus will appear at this event, and Cadettes will serve refreshments to the children.

Next year, it is hoped to have a manger scene on the Green. The Cadettes will sing Christmas carols in the Convalescent Home in Manchester Dec. 16, meeting at St. George's Church at 8:30 p.m.

Managers of the new building and the second to be completed and occupied in the renewal area, do with the County Courthouse was taken over by the state last month on a lease basis.

Asked how serious racial tensions are at Ft. Bragg, Nulsen replied: "I think the situation is serious, but I don't think it's anything near explosive."

Stamps In the News Medical Experts Look to Future

By ALFRED FRIENDLY
The Washington Post Online

LONDON — Enormous progress in medicine, promising vast improvements in the treatment of many of the most common diseases, is forecast for the next five to 10 years by an international panel of experts.

Their projections take the form of a document, "Medical Advances in the 1970's," published last week by the Office of Health Economics, a private organization financed by the British pharmaceutical industry.

The 40 specialists participating in the forecasts, including three from the United States, see the greatest progress coming in organ transplants, prevention of coronary and vascular diseases, and the use of drugs for both viral and bacterial infections and many mental disorders, and spectacular improvements in surgery and anesthesia. Harder problems, taking longer to solve, involve cancer, arthritis and drug addiction.

Within five years, the experts foresee, there should be a "male pill" for contraceptive use after intercourse and a technique for immunizing against pregnancy.

One forecast in this field is for the replacement of pills by an embryo in the uterus at an early stage. Despite ethical objections, this will be accepted because the dangers from it will be less than from the present pill," the report says. And, since determination of the sex of the fetus in a womb will also be routine in a few years, this new type of fertility control "would also allow a degree of choice in the sex and other aspects" of the child.

The forecasts are for Britain and other western countries. A number of major categories vary about potential progress but agree that research on transplants should be concentrated on the biochemical in-variant medicines of more of the available by the late 1970s and certainly in the next decade. This is considered particularly true for psychiatric depressive illnesses. Progress toward medication for schizophrenia will be slower. By 1980 there will be dramatic progress in the control and prevention of dementia.

But, generally, "overpopulation and the use of technology will cause a true increase in mental depression and neurotic disorders," the report says. "It is likely that a greater special medical effort will be taking psychotropic medicines other than tranquilizers or sedatives."

With minor exceptions, all forecasts were pessimistic about the possible progress by 1980 in dealing with personality disorders that manifest themselves in crime and aggression.

Surgery. "By 1980 it should be possible to replace almost all parts of the brain and spinal cord by transplants or prostheses," assuming of course, that the problem of rejection by immunization reactions is solved. "Long and liver transplants should be routine. It is likely that surgeons will have a choice of either heart transplants (human or mammalian) or replacement with an artificial pump. Organ transplants may be one of the most important developments in the development of a number of anti-cancer medicines. The more optimistic forecasts predict that by 1980 there will be an understanding of the basic processes controlling cell division and of how chemical, viral and hormonal cancer producers fit into the process. The hopeful forecasters suggest that by 1980, 70 per cent of cancers will be curable. The gloomy view held by some of the specialists, however, is that "new cancers will emerge, possibly as fast as existing ones are dealt with, and that these new cancers will prove extremely difficult to control."

Graft rejection. Again problems are "difficult to very difficult to solve. The use of immunosuppressive drugs is essential to prevent rejection of a transplant," might even prove impossible. Nevertheless, it is felt that there will be "significant" progress by 1980 and "moderate" progress by 1985 or 1990.

In order to enable transplants of animal tissue to man, it is suggested that some babies—congenitally heart disease—be selected before or immediately after birth with extracts of the same tissue type as a later might be used for organ grafts, thus avoiding the immune response to normal human tissue. It is also suggested that transplantation will be widely used as early as 1975 for irreversible heart disease.

Congenital abnormalities. By 1980 there should be significant reductions in abnormalities due to a better understanding and earlier identification of the causes of those brought about by environmental and viral factors.

SURINAME

Did you ever think you would see a postage stamp depicting a pillow fight? How about a stamp illustrating an eating contest or pole climbing?

Well, all three such events are depicted on a new set of five values featuring children's games issued by Surinam. The set is the popular annual series entitled "Child World" and is intended to raise funds to help support child welfare agencies in that country.

The theme of this year's semi-postals is "Konferjar games"—fun for the young, as organized in Surinam formerly Dutch Guiana.

The 10 cents plus 5 blue and purple shows a pillow fight, 10 cents plus 8 red and yellow an eating contest, 20 cents plus 10 grey and blue—climbing a pole, 20 cents plus 12 pink and blue—sack race, 30 cents plus 15 green and white obstacle race.

A thoroughly revised edition of the Minkus New American Stamp Catalog is now on the market. It covers all types of U.S. issues, U.S. Possessions, plus a special luminous section. Famous persons on 12 stamps are listed and keyed at the back of the catalog. One section is also devoted to issues of the United Nations.

Of the more than 12,000 listings there are price changes in over 8,500. The 24 cent inverted airmail of 1958 lists at $35,000 for a single unused copy—an increase of $10,000 in just one year!

The catalog is available from your local stamp dealer or directly from Minkus Publications, 116 W. 32nd St., New York, N.Y. 10001 at a price of $4.

The Seychelles Archipelago, a group of islands lying in the Indian Ocean—is the home of a tracking station in the sun landing program. To honor the first moon shot by Armstrong, Aldrin and Collins, Seychelles has issued a five value set of stamps featuring various stages of the first moon landing, reports the Crown Agents in Washington. "Transmittal of the Eagle has landed," a simple phrase heard by millions throughout the world and transmitted by the Seychelles station was motivating factor in the issuance of the set.

Philatelic interest in the moon flight has surged to such a great extent that a new organization called the "Manne Spaceflight Society" has been formed. The Society will create and service collected covers and other stamp material for all space flights. Appropriate covers are postmarked at the Cape Kennedy launch area, Houston NASA Mission Control and other locations will be prepared.

Collectors desiring further information may write to Manne Spaceflight Cover Society, 181 Commonwealth, Houston, Texas 77008.

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP)—The value of some pre-cancelled permanent Christmas postage stamps has jumped from six cents to 25 here because of a canceling error.

Joe Fry, president of the Memphis Stamp Collectors Society, said at least 2 sheets with 50 stamps each were canceled with "Memphis, Tenn." upside down.

The U.S. Post Office Department has designated Memphis, Atlanta, Baltimore and New Haven, Conn., as cities where the pre-cancelled stamps are being used this year to determine if they speed processing of holiday mail.

The pre-postmarking of the stamps is done in local print shops under supervision of government inspectors and eliminates the step of postmarking individual letters later. Normally, holders of special permits are the only users of pre-cancelled stamps.

Fry said since it is a lost stamp even properly printed would be collector's items.

A Memphis collector purchasing quantities of the stamps in exchange with other collectors around the country, obtained 10 sheets with the mistake but down postmark before running out of money. He returned to the post office to buy 11 other sheets with the mistake, but found they had been sold.

Texas To Lead in Road

HOUSTON — With more than 5,000 Interstate Highway system miles planned, Texas ranks first in mileage. California is second with more than 2,100 miles. Delaware, with only 40 miles, will have the shortest Interstate network. Alaska plans no Interstate roads.

Suppose you're at a football game when a fight breaks out in the stands near where you are sitting. You'd probably watch the fight. But if somebody scored a touchdown while the fight was going on, you'd expect to be able to find out who made the score and how you picked up the sports section the next morning. Brinkley was an oversimplified response to a simple-minded attack. The conscientious news man can neither be just another member of the crowd, looking at whatever attracts the crowd's attention, nor the passive holder of a journalistic mirror in an attempt to give his reader an uncritical view of everything that happens. He must decide where to look and how to watch and interpret what he sees. Is it significant? Is it worth including in the report? In the lead paragraph, or near the end of the story? And everytime he makes such a decision, he abandons his "objectivity" and lays himself open to charges of journalistic bias, of slanting the news. Why didn't he tell about the fight? Is he suppressing news to try to make somebody look good? Why did he tell about the fight? Is he trying to make us look like poor sports? Both Edna Agnew and David Brinkley made it look too easy. I recall a time several years ago when I was sent to cover a panel discussion on the House Un-American Activities Committee at American University here. Scattered through the assistance were several members of the American Nazi Party, and a short time into the discussion they started trying to disrupt the proceedings. At first, they were only coughing. No problem, I could still hear what was being said from the dais. Then they started shouting disapproval. Still no problem, I recognized some of the men for who they were and made a note to include in my account the fact that the Nazis were heckling the speakers. (Even this wasn't an easy thing to do, because I was not the only reason they were behaving that way was to get being used that way.) In any case, the rest of the story I would write was still clear. The lead would be on what the panelists were saying, with maybe a paragraph near the end about the disruption. But then the hecklers got up from their seats and moved to the stage. One of them grabbed a microphone and started looking at one of the panelists. Several policemen, present because they had heard there might be trouble, moved in with clubs flying and made several arrests. And suddenly I wasn't covering a forum at all, but a riot. It was four or five paragraphs later before I could begin reporting what the panelists had said. If the fracas had resulted in a shooting or arson or a full-scale riot, the story might not even have included the names of the panelists. It had slanting the news in favor of the Nazis? I still don't know. I wish I could have read Mr. Agnew's account of that session.

He Claims State Violated His Constitutional Right HARTFORD, Conn. (AP) — The state's procedure for compelling people to mental hospital care under challenge in U.S. District Monday. Dr. Ross Thomas, a West Hartford psychologist, charged the state violated his constitutional rights when it committed him to the Norwich State Hospital July 28. Thomas' case was argued before U.S. District Judge T. Ernest Clarke Jr. His attorney, Igor Bikowsky Jr., said Thomas was committed against his will without being allowed to contact either his doctor or a lawyer. However, Francis J. MacGregor, representing the state, said Thomas had threatened to sue for libel, state law provides ample protection for the rights of patients, MacGregor said. Judge Clarke gave both lawyers until Jan. 12 to file their arguments in written form. FOUNDRY TO BE RESTORED FRANKFORT, Ky. ### Prisoners Hope to Get Way By Mutilating Themselves

By JOE DE GEORGE Associated Press Writer
LANING, Kan. (AP) — Nearly six months ago a call went out from the Kansas State Penitentiary: "Send State Troopers and gas masks."
A large-scale riot was in progress at the century-old prison. Guards, supplemented by highway patrolmen, put it down. Prison officials say things are under control but almost daily reports of blood letting by prisoners come out of the penitentiary.
Robert N. Woodson, director of Kansas penal institutions, said there have been 332 cases of self-mutilation—instances of inmates cutting themselves—since July 1.
He said the cases involve only 50 of the prison's 1,300 inmates. Of the 50, he said, 20 have cut themselves once while 60 have wounded themselves more than once, one up to 15 times.
Woodson, who was named by Gov. Robert Docking to replace Charles D. McAtee as penal director after the July 18 riot, claimed the prison has a small number of hard-core inmates who are determined to run the institution. The number was estimated at 30 to 40.
What caused the riot? Why the self-mutilations?
Authorities say the riot resulted from the manner in which a massive shakedown was conducted in the cellblocks. There had been reports that firearms had been hidden in the prison. The mid-June search yielded a large number of "contraband"—drugs, knives and money. Officials canted away three truck loads of unsorted cell furniture and other items.
Whatever the spark for the riot, the prisoners smashed windows, ripped railings from walkways and cell blocks and set numerous small fires. Cellblock locking systems were damaged.
No hostages were taken and only one inmate was wounded. Prison officials say the self-mutilations are the work of inmates seeking to draw attention to themselves or to force their transfer from the maximum security—within the institution—to the prison hospital. Woodson also feels they are trying to bring pressure to have him replaced.
The wounds have been inflicted, officials say, with razor blades, pieces of metal or slivers of glass from light bulbs.
McAtee, a Republican, said he had expected to be replaced by the Democratic governor when his term was up at the end of June. He said after the riot he could "have counted on five or six weeks," but decided on the shakedown because he did not want it on his record. If an employee or inmate had been shot or killed with a gun smuggled into the prison.
Two days after the riot, Woodson was moving from his position as highway patrol superintendent to penal director.
A fatal stabbing occurred a week after the riot.
The Leavenworth County sheriff's office said it investigated 18 killings of prisoners by prisoners from Jan. 1, 1967, to the end of 1968.
About a month after the disturbance, a psychiatric unit conducted another shakedown of one cellblock. They found more knives, hypodermic syringes and a tunnel network. They also discovered a loaded six-shot revolver.
The tunnel had been a futile attempt to burrow under the wall. It failed when the prisoners came up against a reinforced barrier beneath the stone wall.
Mel, Jim Banker, Prison information officer, said there have been seven fires since June and guards have discovered numerous fire attempts or fire bombings. He speculated inmates are reacting to administration efforts to improve security and procedural reform.
Woodson said the mutilations started in November last year. There were 50 cases in the first six months of 1969, he said.
The director said he did not want to go much into the "why" of the self-mutilations or to suggest what should be done. In advance of a report by George Thompson, superintendent of the State Diagnostic and Treatment Center. The report will be based on studies made at the penitentiary during the last three weeks by teams that included a psychiatrist, a psychologist and a social worker.
Woodson has maintained, however, that the self-mutilations were originally caused by members of what he called a "Little Mafia." Woodson described this as a power clique practicing extortion and terrorism.
"These people have done damn well what they wanted for many years and they're accustomed to threatening and making deals with the administration. They feel you can't run an institution without them. Certainly they can make things uncomfortable and difficult for us."

MINNEAPOLIS—The University of Minnesota has recognized as a legitimate student organization a group called "Fight Repression of Erotic Expression," or FREE. The members are 75 homosexuals.

Miss Phelps said FREE was needed because there was no organization for homosexuals here. She estimated the ratio on the campus is the same as in the population as a whole, or about 10 per cent.
"We want to educate people. Gay is good, and we should be free to enjoy the rights of straight students," Miss Phelps said. "We encourage our members to tell their parents — not to lash out at them but to help parents understand them."
She said that student deviates would find it easier to disclose homosexuality to parents with

Middletown Man Dies of Injuries

MIDDLETOWN, Conn. (AP) — Harold B. Gorman, 74, of Middletown was injured when struck by a car Nov. 21, died Tuesday at Middletown Memorial Hospital.
Gorman was struck as he was crossing Main Street near the Arvington Bridge. Police said the driver of the car was Joseph F. Drivell of Andover, who told police he was blinded by the 7:30 a.m. sun and did not see Gorman before the car struck the pedestrian.
He was certain he knew more about the man. "Did you know you were passing traffic laws driving down a one-way street? Therefore, Verna did what 'Ver' in the wrong direction," Verna answered, "Ho, ho, my great-uncle and local official argued about his driver's license. I always point the front of the car in the direction I want to go."
"No one will ever equal his score in dented fenders, busted telephone poles, and one-way street navigated in the wrong direction. A remarkable thing, I to remove myself from the path that he never was at of his car. Having been around when he died. "Not remarkable at all," said Ford invented the contraption. ### Inflation Could Be Stopped By Moratorium on Dreams

By JOHN CUNIFF AP Business Analyst
NEW YORK (AP)—This nation and other growing nations might be able to pay for their social needs if only they could order a moratorium on growing aspirations. But that day, human nature prescribes, will never come.
It appears inevitable instead for now desires to emerge all most simultaneously with the satisfaction of old ones. And in a total of 70 tons of pure honey, way this is probably just as
