By GEORGE ESPEL
Associated Press Writer
SAIGON (AP) — U.S. B52 bombers launched fresh raids today in the A Shau Valley against suspected North Vietnamese troop complexes near the scene of an ambush in which five Americans were killed and 10 others wounded.

The U.S. Command said the casualties Friday included three soldiers killed and one wounded aboard a helicopter that was shot down while supporting the Americans pinned down on the ground.

The U.S. deaths were the first reported by the command since the allied operation in the valley began 17 days ago. However, field reports said there had been about 20 other American casualties in small scale actions never reported by the command.

The men were part of a reconnaissance unit of the U.S. 101st Airborne Division. Troops of the division have been moving in and out of the valley, about 275 miles north of Saigon, since the operation began April 14. The U.S. battlefield deaths were the first reported in the operation, which has produced insignificant results thus far.

Kite Flying Scene At Kent State

KENT, Ohio (AP) — The four-day Kent State University program commemorating the deaths of four students in antiwar demonstrations a year ago begins today with kite flying, music, a play and exhibits emphasizing peace.

Student body President Craig Morgan proclaimed the first day of activities as "Kent State Kite Flying Day" to ease the tensions on campus. It will also feature bubble gum blowing and Frisbee throwing.

A spokesman for Morgan said the purpose "is to go out and have some fun and be human to each other."

The campus was quiet as an estimated 200-300 students left for Washington Friday to participate in antiwar demonstrations during the weekend. Many others went home.

Protesters Seek Support For Activities in Capital

WASHINGTON (AP)—With hundreds of military policemen standing ready just across the Potomac, antiwar demonstrators are drumming up support for militant activities they hope will disrupt the national government.

The Defense Department announced early today that as a precaution it transferred "a few hundred personnel of the 619th Military Police Battalion from Ft. Meade, Md., to Ft. Myer, Va."

That puts the troops within two miles of the four main Potomac River bridges over which thousands of federal employees commute from suburban Virginia into the District every working day.

The demonstrators—in their most ambitious campaign in the capital since the Vietnam war began—have made those bridges and other key traffic intersections in the Washington area targets for disruption Monday and Tuesday.

By tying up traffic at those 21 points, the protesters contend, they can bring the federal city to a halt.

But the federal city is ready, officials say.

Deputy Atty. Gen. Richard Kleindienst called threats to shut down the government "a lot of hot air." He said 7,900 police and National Guardsmen will be on hand to prevent traffic tieups. The Pentagon added six helicopters to the force, some choppers to ferry high officials to work, others big enough to move cars from the highway.

The demonstrators launched a series of rock concerts to boost crowds for the Monday and Tuesday tieups.

Many of the youthful campers streamed into the capital city overnight to join an estimated 1,600 who had camped just west of the Tidal Basin below the Lincoln Memorial.

Friday, 335 antiwar protesters were arrested at the Justice DE department where they blocked every entrance to the building in a "sit-down" campaign. The arrests brought to 3,300 the number made by Washington police during a week of demonstrations on Capitol Hill and at various governmental agencies.

Rennie Davis, a Coalition organizer, predicted that 50,000 persons will be on hand for the sit-ins.

Police estimated far fewer. Briefings held on Capitol Hill for members of Congress included crowd estimates of 5,000 to 10,000. Senate Republican Leader Hugh Scott, one of those briefed, said officials assured him there will be no encirclement of the Capitol, which had been predicted.

And Kleindienst promised official Washington the threatened traffic tieups would be "an irritant only."

FBI Agent Says Pardue Made 'Dying Declaration'

NEW HAVEN (AP) — An FBI agent says accused bomber and bank robber John R. Pardue made a "dying declaration" providing "satisfactory answers" to questions about bank robberies and killings in three states.

Special Agent Charles Weeks said Friday that Pardue was asked about two bank robberies in Missouri, one in New York and one in Connecticut. Pardue was also questioned about "two or three murders" stemming from the Connecticut robbery, the kidnaping of a state police man in connection with the New York holdup and two slayings in Maryland, Weeks said.

Weeks responded Friday to criticism by Theodore Koskoff, the attorney for Pardue, who died Thursday night in Springfield, Mo., of complications from gunshot wounds sustained in an escape attempt April 8 from the Federal Building in Bridgeport.

Koskoff charged that the FBI "dragged out death's door," although the federal agency had asked to interview Pardue and Koskoff denied it.

Pardue was transferred to Missouri earlier this week from Bridgeport where he had been hospitalized since the shooting incident. He remained in critical condition for almost three weeks and developed complications.

While hospitalized Pardue underwent surgery for a gastric ulcer, and then developed kidney problems.

Pardue attempted to escape while standing trial by pulling a sawed-off rifle which was allegedly smuggled to him by his 25-year-old wife Nancy. He had been charged in connection with a series of bombings and bank robbery in Danbury, Feb. 18, 1970.

Some 20 persons in all were injured when bombs went off at the police station, a bank, and

Rogers Heads For Saudi Arabia

ANKARA (AP) — Secretary of State William P. Rogers headed for Saudi Arabia today to launch his new effort to promote peace in the Middle East.

Rogers flew to Riyadh, Saudi Arabia's summer capital, for private talks with King Faisal and other Saudi leaders. Then he goes on to Jordan, Lebanon, Egypt and Israel.

"I wish him copious success—but I don't know whether he will be able to arrive at this result just on this trip," Turkish Premier Nihat Erim told newsmen as Rogers ended a two-day stay in the Turkish capital.

Rogers had a similar cautious view. He said he didn't expect any spectacular breakthrough in the Arab-Israeli dispute from his personal diplomacy, though

Amtrak System Begins Operation

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Amtrak rail passenger system went into operation today, killing nearly half the nation's railroad passenger trains in a government-backed effort to restore the others to economic health.

Beginning at 12:01 a.m., the National Railroad Passenger Corporation assumed responsibility for operating 182 passenger trains and allowed the 20 participating railroads to drop 178 others.

The corporation was established by Congress last year to establish and maintain a backbone national rail passenger system connecting the nation's principal cities. This came in the face of mounting railroad requests to get rid of passenger trains being operated at losses running $300 million a year.

Sporting a new red-white-and-blue livery, Amtrak today began assembling the newest and best railroad passenger cars from its 20 member railroads for its 182 trains serving 214 cities and towns on 20,600 miles of track on 21 basic routes.

The new passenger network was inaugurated with ceremonies in Washington's Union Station and the boarding of 70 VIPs

Rally Leads To Killings In Manila

MANILA (AP) — At least three persons were killed and several more wounded today when a labor day rally by workers and youthful activists erupted in explosions and gunfire in front of the Philippine Congress building.

"There are so many, so many of them still being treated" for injuries, said the emergency room nurse at Philippines-General Hospital. Two men and a woman were dead on arrival from bullet wounds, the nurse said.

The violence erupted as several hundred demonstrators conducted an "anti-imperialist" rally on the steps of Congress.

Police and demonstrators gave conflicting accounts of what happened.

Ericson Baculino, president of the student union of the University of the Philippines, said a demonstrator was giving a speech when suddenly police began firing into the crowd from inside and on top of Congress.

Police said bombs and gunfire were directed at the demonstrators.

Two news reporters covering the demonstration said that explosions similar to those from homemade bombs erupted as three policemen tried at dusk to lower the Philippine flag flying in front of Congress.

The explosions were followed immediately by bursts of automatic weapon fire and the demonstrators dashed in all directions, the reporters said.

The gunfire echoed down the broad boulevard fronting Congress for about 20 minutes as scores of youths huddled in a grassy park directly across from the high-domed legislative building.

After the firing stopped, two men on the grass were found shot through the head. One young man was dead.

The pavement and trees were pocked with bullet holes.

The steps of Congress were scorched in at least four places by apparent explosions. Splintered

Berrigan Case Government Says Plot Puts Kissinger in Mock Trial

By PAT KEITH
Associated Press Writer

HARRISBURG, Pa. (AP) — A new indictment against eight antiwar activists carries copies of letters that the government says show plans to kidnap presidential adviser Henry Kissinger and make him the defendant in a mock war crimes trial.

The trial would be filmed for broadcast on television, the handwritten but unsigned letters say. Photostated portions are attached to the indictment.

The new 16-count indictment was returned Friday by a federal grand jury investigating an alleged bomb-kidnap plot. It superseded the original indictment returned Jan. 12, expanded on the charges and added two defendants to the original six, who included the Rev. Philip Berrigan.

It retained two basic charges: that an antiwar group led by three priests plotted to kidnap Kissinger and that the group schemed to blow up at least five heating tunnels under federal buildings in Washington, D.C., 31, and Eqbal Ahmad, 40, unto dramatize its opposition to the war.

The newly named defendants are Mary Cain Scoblick, 32, a former nun who is married to Anthony Scoblick, one of the original defendants; and John Theodore Gilck, 31, of Lancaster, Pa., son of the president of Keuka (N.Y.) College. Gilck is now serving an 18-month prison sentence in Ashland, Ky., for ransacking offices of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, U.S. attorney and Selective Service in Rochester, N.Y., last September.

Three of seven coconspirators named in the original indictment were stricken from the list and three counts and 13 overt acts were added.

The expanded charges dealt with alleged plans for a number of raids on Selective Service boards in the Northeast.

The new indictment, backed up with photostated portions of letters, alleges that letters exchanged between Berrigan, 47, and Sister Elizabeth McCallister, 31, and Eqbal Ahmad, 40, unvelled plans to kidnap Kissinger and hold him for a week.

During this time "big wigs of the liberal ilk would be brought to him—also kidnaped if necessary which for the most part it would be—and hold a trial or grand jury affair out of which an indictment would be brought." (The alleged letter from Sister Elizabeth and Eqbal said, "... the liberals would also be released as would a film of the whole proceedings in which, hopefully, he (Kissinger) would be far more honest than he is on his own territory.")

"The impact of such a thing could be phenomenal. Reasons for wanting to do it: it will ultimately be done by someone here and end in fiasco or violence and killing..."

The indictment charges that Berrigan hatched the plot while in federal prison at Lewisburg, Pa. He now is in federal prison at Danbury, Conn., for burning Selective Service files at Catonsville, Md.

Bank Blasts Continue In California

SANTA CRUZ, Calif. (AP) — A pipe bomb damaged a wall and shattered windows today in a Bank of America branch and broke windows in nearby homes. It was the 33rd assault in 15 months on the bank's properties by arsonists and bombers.

Police said the bomb in a wooden box was placed in the rear of the one-story stone and stucco building in the city's West Side. Damage to the bank was estimated at $10,000.

The blast also broke windows in four nearby houses and a piece of pipe from the bomb went through a wall of one of the houses.

There were no injuries and no arrests.

Late Thursday, a black powder bomb shattered 20 windows in the Bank of America's Montebello branch in Los Angeles.

In the last five weeks there have been five other bombings of bank branches in Berkeley, Oakland, Mill Valley and Sausalito, all in the San Francisco area.

The 16 bombings and 17 arson attempts by set fires or fire bombs began in February 1970.

To Each His Own "Law Day" We have been watching the annual May 1 observance known as "Law Day" come out a different thing every year...

They wished, for the negative part, to set up a counter-observance to the talk about the Constitution in the world, emphasizing the route of progress through law rather than by revolution.

And they hoped, for their great positive gain, to keep on with the long but necessary task of educating and leading the world toward that "rule of law" which, as illustrated in the potential future development of the United Nations, alone can guarantee civilization its most elemental need, which is that of survival.

Since its founding, "Law Day" has come down to everything, including fervent pleas for that most elemental link before we can hope for international survival — the kind of law which creates safety in our own neighborhood streets.

We doubt, however, that in all the evolutionary observance of "Law Day" there has ever been anything quite like the double perversion which took place down in Washington on this week in two adjoining hotel banquet rooms.

In one banquet hall, the Law Day District officials sponsored by the District of Columbia Bar Association and the Federal Bar Association was hearing Robert C. Mardian, chief internal security official of the Justice Department, deliver a Law Day speech in which he defended better and more intensive investigation and surveillance of suspicious people as a possible safeguard against future assassinations.

These young lawyers, in their ramp Law Day observance, heard Senator Harold Hughes of Iowa and other speakers denounce what he said was the Nixon Administration's "trend toward repression" in the retention of wiretapping, bugging, no-knock entry, subpoenaing of private notebooks and tapes from news reporters, increased surveillance by the Government of dissident political groups and the attempts by the Government to intimidate the communications media.

They then, pro and con, saw "Law Day" the observance which was originally launched in the idea that the blessing of international law might come day be extended to the world in time to save the world from its last war, being used as a forum for invidious debates over the degree to which Americans should engage in the business of spying on one another. The proper meaning of Law Day, said the speaker, was a preservation of the guarantee of rights of privacy for the individual set forth in the Constitution. The debate is pertinent and important enough, and one way to have some kind of guarantee against the arrival of a police state among ourselves is to have the possibility talked about to have in the open.

But one thing has been coming clear, during the few years of observance of Law Day we have had. In the observance of this particular "Day" each year, all citizens, are truly a law unto themselves when it comes to deciding what the "Day" is supposed to be about.

Preserve The Dartmouth Man The word from Hanover, New Hampshire, is that the board of trustees of Dartmouth College has voted to formally consider, at its meeting in October, the establishment of an associated school for women.

This would be a legal device by which Dartmouth would, despite having formally to admit women to Dartmouth College itself, and which would protect Dartmouth College against any possible future compulsion upon coeducational schools to abandon any fixed ratios of men and women students.

But it would, nevertheless, amount to letting women on the Dartmouth campus, and it is, therefore, entitled to the fierce opposition of every Ivy League traditionalist.

There is a whole barrage of reasons for such opposition to change at Dartmouth. First, all the other Ivy League colleges who, as soon as the pill was invented, rushed into coeducation on the theory that it would now be socially safe, have now had their second thoughts and those second thoughts have been strong enough to renege the hope that at least one institution would maintain itself as a precious example of what a male campus should be.

Second, ample experience over the historic kind of weekends Dartmouth is famous for indicates that there is a double threat involved in any mixture of the sexes at Hanover, the one a relatively minor threat to the reputation of the ladies attending, but the major threat centered on the possibility that the soft charms of the ladies may work a deleterious effect on the great rough-hewn image so carefully created and nurtured by Dartmouth men of many generations.

Clearly, it is all at risk of what might happen to the gentle ladies of our time, if exposed to the elemental quality of life as they are enraptured at Dartmouth. But ladies can be redeemed, or sent back to restraining schools.

There is, on the other hand, no possible substitute or replacement for, or possible re-creation of what is known as the Dartmouth man. The Yale man, the Harvard man, the Williams man, the Princeton man can all be obtained by placing any relatively docile piece of youth flesh into the permanent molds maintained at these institutions, but the Dartmouth man is a direct, authentic, creation of nature itself, born, not made for his role, and shaped, not being shaped, by the college he is predestined to attend. When the trustees do meet in October, let them vote like Dartmouth men should.

State Police Changes Connecticut's new state police commission is adopting a series of moves that is clearly show that he knows what he is about, is ready to be flexible and try new approaches to difficult tasks.

His first move was to pave the way for younger officers to be promoted (by asking for retirement of a number of senior officers), then he transferred troop commanders so that they would not become wedded to certain districts, and now he is instituting a series of changes in traffic enforcement.

Inside Report

WASHINGTON — The Presidential campaign of Sen. Edmund Muskie of Maine is now seriously pondering an intriguing move: To challenge Sen. Birch Bayh of Indiana in his home state's Democratic Presidential primary.

Democratic politicians (Bayh included) have been assuming all candidates would bypass the May 2, 1971, Indiana primary, giving Bayh a free ride there. But Muskie is now being advised to make a bid for the nomination, though no firm decision will be made for some time.

One reason is that, oddly, Bayh is taken less seriously as a genuine Presidential prospect back home in Indiana than he is in Washington, or several key states (particularly California). Furthermore, although Bayh is a Hooper party leader and the state's Democratic Congressman all support Bayh for President, many dislike him and would like nothing better than to see him get his communique.

Behind its rough, tough exterior, Atty. Gen. John Fischetti's Justice Department is vacillating all last week over how to handle massive civil disobedience by antiwar protesters. By reducing the number of judges in the court, the Justice Department had no firm strategy for dealing with the civil disobedience campaign by protesters scheduled to begin Monday.

At his request, the Justice Department had no firm strategy for dealing with the civil disobedience campaign by protesters scheduled to begin Monday. Barth Explodes Perseus Myth

John Barth, described as one of the best American novelists to emerge in the past 20 years, entertained on Wednesday a number of students and faculty grouped into the front middle section of Jorgensen Auditorium, few enough to prompt Barth to comment that it became a kind of seminar.

John Barth

He spoke from a platform close to the seats, armed with a pile of cardboard fold-ups, one of which turned out to be seven feet long. These were diagrams and signs which he would pull out, straight-faced, to exaggerate a simple point. He was also armed with an intense comic delivery as he read from his novella, "Perseid."

This concerns a goodly bit of Greek mythology undoubtedly done with extreme accuracy as to the general official happenings which make up the tale of Perseus, but particularized and done in a manner, from a vantage point and extended in such a way that it is fresh, surprising, new, different and very funny. Barth confessed a fascination with "received" stories rather than invented ones, and he picks up the story of Perseus right where mythology puts it down, in middle life, when the exploits are over but recounted and ripple on for a bit.

Perseus is the son of Zeus, conceived in a shower of gold. It was he who cut off the head of Medusa, rescued and married the Ethiopian princess Andromeda, who was about to be devoured by a sea monster. He turns his enemies to stone with the help of Medusa's head which he carries about, it's dripping blood falling on the desert sands and breeding there into a swarm of venomous serpents.

Barth has a verbal ball with the rich detail of the plot plus some flat and funny commentary. "I said 'hello,' she said 'hello,'" Barth said. He puts his kind of thing, some frustrating so the idea of "how people get turned into stars instead of stones," He liked the kind of story where the process of telling it becomes the story itself, a cyclical repetition like "Sicilian Air."

Modern Themes He said that one of his favorite things about myths is the "infinite regression of prerequisites." The hero does an incredible labor and is immediately sent to do another. "I love the moment he exterminates the labor by exterminating the taskmaster." He also noted that some myths lend themselves to modern themes, women's lib, certainly.

He added that there were also "stupid little motives" nobody would understand, except another writer, and said that among all the sensible and serious reasons he had for writing "The Sot-Weed Factor," he'd always wanted to write a really fat novel. He gestured, "I love the best of books."

He said he also thought it would be fun to concoct a plot "more complicated and more perfect even" than the plot of "Tom Jones," not in terms of literary merit, but rather in terms of "raw complication of plot." As he described the basis in the third year of the writing, it would take two hours just to get all the strings in hand to go to the next sentence.

He said there are also "the secret adventures of order," which "perhaps one ought to keep secret, but there are always others."

He uses mathematical or geometric concepts, in "Perseid" it was a logarithmic spiral which he used some of his cardboard to illustrate. The most obvious use of it here was in the great hall containing the frescoes leading to the inner chamber containing the nymph, who also had some spirals of her own. This kind of workings he termed "dramatic geometry" and said it is fascinating to examine in other people's work.

Another such device he talked about, all of this somehow came out of very few questions, were the frame tales, "tales within tales within tales."

As her own wedding night approached, the young girl who had seen and heard everything and done nothing is given pre-nuptial advice from her older sister, a few private words. "That haunts me," said Barth, "an image of where we all are — trying to write stories at this late hour," and he asked "What story will she tell?"

middle life problems with a seductive nymph. One of the most comic stories recounted by the hero was his shortstopping of the single eye and tooth which belonged to the "three gray ladies" (the three Graiae) as they passed them from one to the other to either see something or say something. Perseus becomes aware of being in a God-heaven when he first sees himself immortalized in a series of frescoes. Says Barth, "I like the idea of the hero of the story seeing himself transcribed into another media."

Asked why he chose Perseus he explained that when you write something you always have 16 reasons, some you can talk about, some you can't. He said Perseus was particularly interesting because of certain narrative possibilities, his seven adventures and the idea of having the second half of the story an ironic recapitulation of the first half, "a kind of re-tary," "I said 'hello,' she said 'hello,'" Barth said. He puts his kind of thing, some frustrating so the idea of "how people get

Lectures, Mock Trial Stress Role of Law

By GENE DUSSEAU (Herald Reporter)

Does society have the right to prevent a person from harming himself? What moral and legal difference is there between a mandatory law for wearing seatbelts and one demanding speed governors on automobiles? These were among the contemporary legal problems encountered in the Law Day speaking program at Hilling Junior High School this week.

Headed by Atty. Laurence P. Rubinow a committee of lawyers who work or live in Manchester have scheduled discussions with eighth grade social studies classes this week to stimulate their legal curiosity in the spirit of Law Day.

Officially proclaimed as May 1 by Governor Meskill and Mayor James Farr, Law Day is set aside annually to celebrate the vital role of the American judicial system in our society.

Mayor Farr asked in his declaration yesterday that Manchester's citizens, "seek an increased understanding of, and respect for, the rule of law."

Manchester's effort is sponsored by the Manchester Bar Association and the Manchester Federation of Women's Clubs, and will include several events clustered around the May 1 date.

According to Law Day Chairman Joel Janenda, the plans include a staged trial at Manchester and possibly Bolton High Schools.

During his 50-minute session Atty. Rubinow elicited a lively response from the eighth graders, who raptly listened to his story about a religious fanatic.

The story involves a man who, according to Rubinow, is currently seeking release from a state mental hospital where he has been held for 30-years. This person allegedly maimed himself twice in moments of religious vision and has been held by the state for his own protection.

As evinced by the discussion, the state's rights to protect an individual from himself involves a legal Pandora's box. Questions of suicide, and proposed laws governing seatbelt use and mechanical speed controls on autos, kept Rubinow and his audience busy as they discussed the practical and moral aspects of such laws.

Also speaking with the same discussion format at Hilling this week were Atty. Sanford Pieper, Thomas O'Mara, Joel Janenda, Dominic Squaritto, and William Bronell.

All the lawyers tried to give the students a general introduction to law and the law making processes. Celebrated each year in Connecticut since its inception in 1957, Law Day has gained increasing recognition in efforts to reaffirm the basis of law in America. In his official statement, Gov. Meskill said the main purpose of Law Day is to change America must face will be implemented "through adherence to the rule of law."

Statewide plans this year include an award for the best local program.

A mock trial of a shop-lifter, complete with defense counsel, prosecutor, court clerk, and a jury of students, will be presented the morning of May 4 at Manchester High School.

Atty. Scott Clendaniel will defend the shop-lifter who will be picked from a Manchester High School Social Studies Class. The presiding judge has not been selected.

Janenda said earlier plans to try a youth on drug charges were abandoned. "We did a drug trial last year, and by now the kids know all about this problem. I think they still don't realize, though, the seriousness of a shop-lifting charge."
