road programs which would "take the farmer out of the mud."
In progressive states like Connecticut, that goal was accomplished many years ago, about the time the farmers who had particularly needed rescue had gone out of business.

Now, in some of our sister states where progress was, fortunately, a little slower, and where there are still some occasional dirt roads left, there has arisen a new crusade from rural areas.
It is a crusade to force state authorities to leave country roads as they are, and refrain from straightening them, widening them, and then paving them.

In New Hampshire there is a bill providing for the preservation of country byways. In Vermont several regional movements are trying to prevent the improvement and modernization of local roads.

Why don't such people want to be taken "out of the mud"?
Their reason is that they have realized, belatedly, that getting out of the mud, which is at worst merely a temporary problem in a New England spring, involves getting into year-round nuisance and trouble.

They have observed that narrow, winding dirt roads are not conducive to speeding. They claim there is no statistic which shows an automobile fatality as having occurred on a dirt road. They remember that roads once used to be for walking and for bicycling as well as for vehicles. They note that highway departments don't try to use de-icing salts unless they have pavement openings.

Part of the crusade has to focus on getting a change in the system for allocating road grants to the towns. Now, in most instances, such grants are limited to programs for "improving" roads by paving them, not for preserving country roads by paying for the kind of upkeep the minimum need to give them that annual spring drag.

For such a change, the carpooling scenery lovers of New Hampshire and Vermont may have some assistance from the farmers still left on some country roads. One thing farmers discover, when a black road comes along and takes them out of the mud, is that the more they get, the more they want. It is not that they are greedy, but that they are pragmatic. They would like to see the mud they are in indefinitely sacrificed lives to a struggle against it.

There was, of course, the memory of long time negotiations in Korea, the negotiations which were prolonged, primarily, because one American President, Truman, did not dare risk accepting conditions which might be considered soft, and something less than victory.
But that impasse had been resolved when a new President, who was himself a military hero, took courage, and was in position to take the terms Truman didn't dare take.

Surely, it seemed in the spring of 1968, with the election of a new President coming up, American policy would have the pliability to help create a settlement at Paris.

All such hopes and expectations have been disappointed. The talks have gone on for three years without producing anything. The killing has also gone on, as if both sides were still toying with the idea of altering that original tacit concession of stalemate which brought them to Paris in the first place.

In place of diplomatic movement at Paris, the clear thing that has been happening, at the initiative of the new American President, has been the steady withdrawal of American manpower from the war. This is being presented to us as if it were a solution to the war. Praiseworthy as it is, however, it offers only an end to American casualties in the war. Perhaps, beyond that, it can, by the way it stimulates South Vietnamese own military strength, also help bring about the arrival of a de facto peace in the field.

But, looking hard at the central picture, it is difficult to believe that we can ever make a satisfactory exit from Vietnam by just leaving Vietnam, and when we honestly ask ourselves what it is going to take to give us such an exit with honor and without self-recrimination afterward we have to answer that it would take a negotiated settlement which would establish terms and international enforcement procedures for a cessation of all fighting, by no matter whom, in Vietnam.

And that realization points us straight back to that hitherto fruitless bargaining table at Paris. It says that sooner or later, we must be willing to make peace, not just by extracting ourselves from the mess in Vietnam, but by taking our part and our responsibility in a settlement which will give the people of Vietnam their chance, too, to escape prolongation of their tragedy. It seems to me that neither President Nixon, with his own program for disengagement, nor the reckless peace doves in Congress, who act as if we could get out at any moment, nor the peace doves who act as if we could get out at any moment we choose, have been looking into our own involvement and obligations deeply enough. We must like to do, and the one thing neither side has yet done at Paris — negotiate.

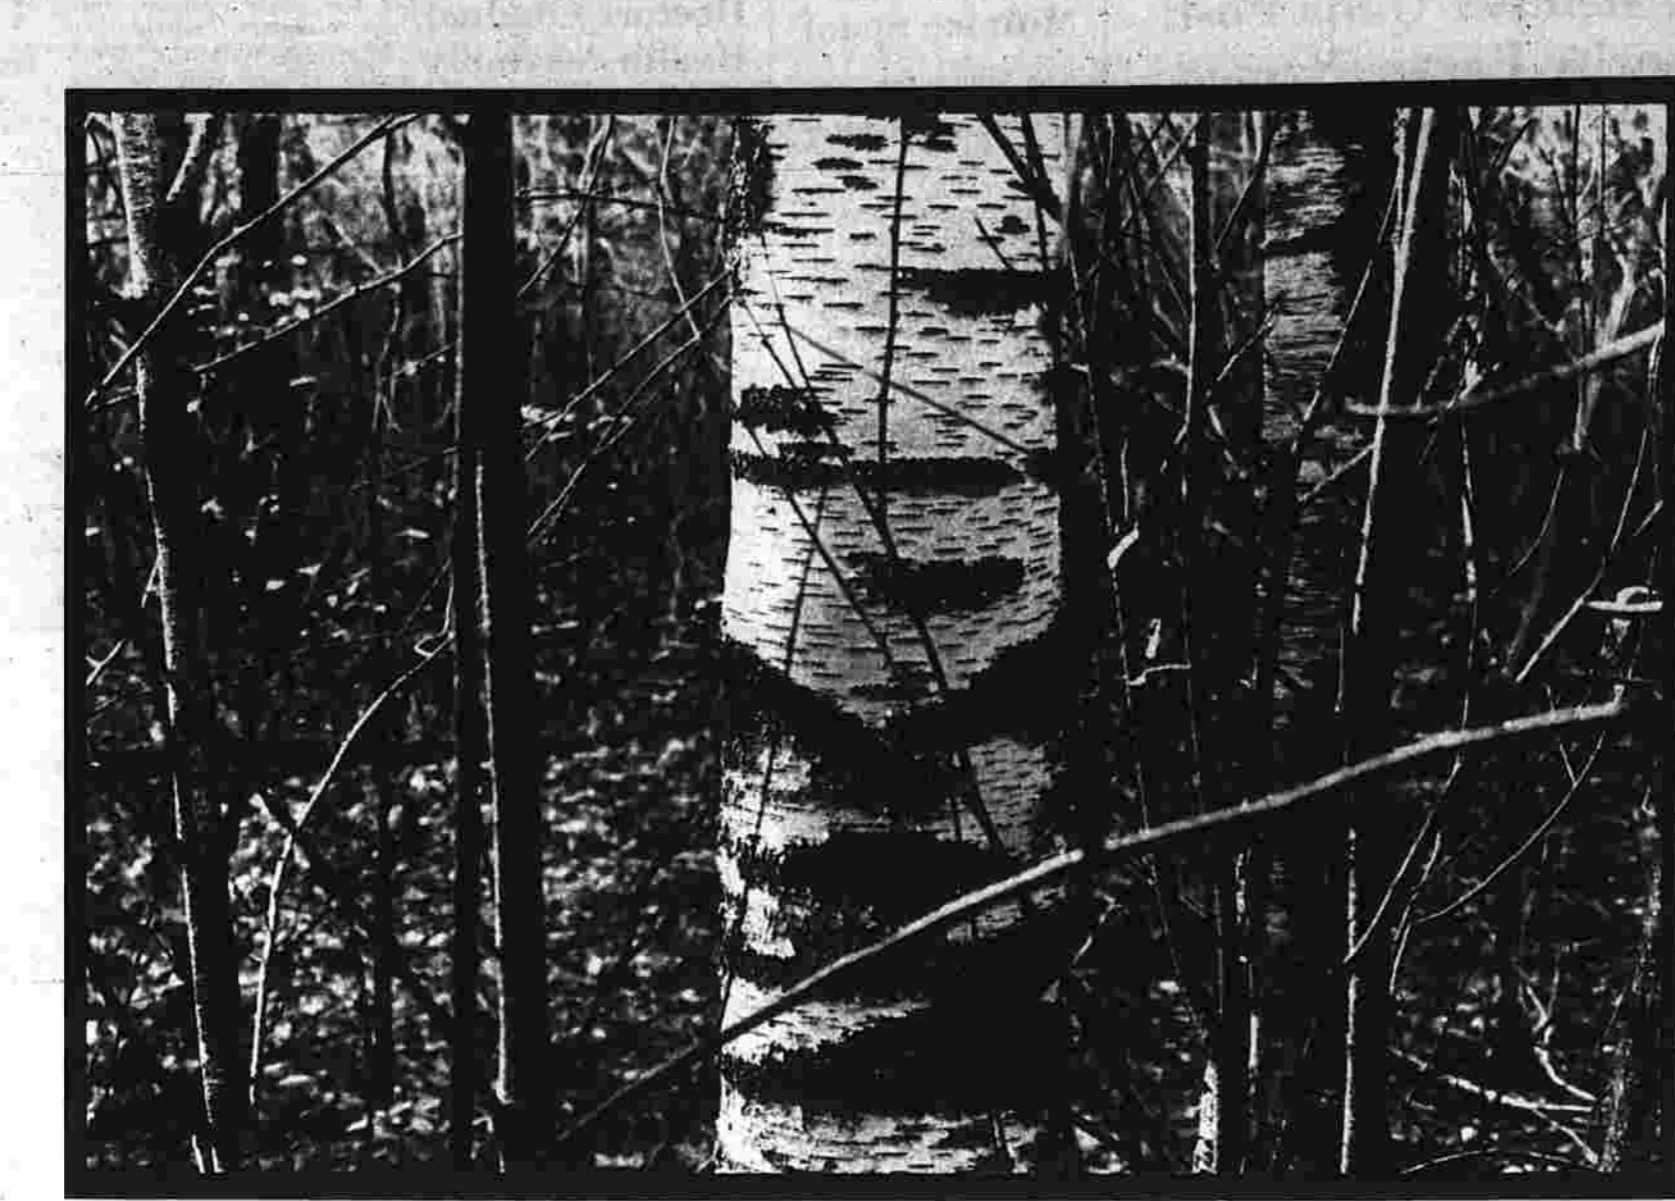

Three Years ago in Paris
When, three years ago, the three-way peace talks opened in Paris, the predictions of those observers who thought they might go on forever without ever making any kind of visible progress seemed unduly pessimistic.

Some of us would have been quite willing to bet, then, that the Paris talks would have come up with something long before this third anniversary of the beginning of the talks could be reached. It seemed, then, that by the mere act of agreeing to hold talks both sides had tacitly agreed there was to be no old-style victory in Vietnam for anybody.

The existence of a stalemate thus being tacitly conceded, it seemed impossible that the two sides could go on indefinitely sacrificing lives to a struggle against it.

There was, of course, the memory of long time negotiations in Korea, the negotiations which were prolonged, primarily, because one American President, Truman, did not dare risk accepting conditions which might be considered soft, and something less than victory.

But that impasse had been resolved when a new President, who was himself a military hero, took courage, and was in position to take the terms Truman didn't dare take.

Inside Report

Booster Connally

By Rowland Evans Jr. and Robert D. Novak

John B. Connally, Secretary of the Treasury, showed again last week at an unpublished White House meeting how the Cabinet's only Democrat has become the Cabinet's most enthusiastic booster for President Nixon.

Mr. Nixon invited some 40 Republican Congressmen, headed by Rep. Dan Rostenkowski of Tennessee, to the White House to report on their nationwide tour as salesmen of the President's New American Revolution.

Mr. Connally's role was to give the three main speakers after Rostenkowski a good report were the President's Ministry Leader, Richard L. Strickland, and a "man of vision and courage" who got the biggest hand.

Some present saw in that someone a further hint that Connally has an eye on possibly becoming Mr. Nixon's running mate in 1972. Moreover, old-time Democratic allies nationally are slowly coming to the same conclusion.

Those who believe the closer Mr. Connally comes into the 1972 Republican picture the more he loses influence among them, his old Democratic ally, his ally in former Gov. Alas Shivers, perhaps the single most influential Democrat in Texas until he backed Dwight D. Eisenhower over Adlai Stevenson in 1952. One who broke with his own party, the influence and the man who voted against the bill to repeal the income tax, and he never recovered his former position.

Mr. Connally is a man who has had no time to duplicate his campaign of earlier this year (which included scarce stories that the SST might cause skin cancer). Moreover, Democrat Rep. Sidney Yates of Illinois, the stunning switch by the House last Wednesday on the supersonic transport (SST) resulted from careful strategy of keeping the attempted revival of the widely-opposed aircraft secret long enough to prevent the ecology lobby from mobilizing.

That was why the House reversed itself, 201 to 177, in favor of the SST. Before the ecology lobby could generate grass roots pressure against the SST, some boom, House Republican leader Gerald R. Ford and White House lobbyists had turned around enough Republican Congressmen for victory.

A Thought for Today Sponsored by the Manchester Council of Churches

In a library in Seville, Spain, is a book which belonged to Columbus himself. The book, called "Trinago Mundi," written by a scientist of those days, says that the earth is almost all land. When the ocean was reached to the Orient, was Columbus started off by a bad luck, and discovered the Indies. This was a tremendous world by mistake. Thank God for our inspired mistakes. Rev. Liked Performance "With Special Gratitude"

Under the excellent direction of the ever competent Miss Martha White, the M.E.S. Music Department presented a smashing successful "Amble Get Your Gun" to an extremely enthusiastic and appreciative audience on Friday evening at Bailey Auditorium.

A delightful cast of leading characters on down through the chorus, orchestra, and the very important backstage production crew all did a fine job which clearly indicated many weeks of diligent rehearsal and exceptional behind-the-scenes efforts volunteered by so many of our dedicated young people.

The capacity crowd gave the play a thunderous standing ovation and is it any wonder a very warm feeling was shared by all in the knowledge that the youth of Manchester are capable of such a "great happening."

Rham District School Board To Present Second Budget Proposal

For the second time, the Regional District 8 Board of Education will present its proposed budget Monday evening at a meeting in the Rham High School auditorium.

The revised budget is $20 less than the first one presented which was turned down, mainly because of an 8 percent increase in teachers salaries and insurance.

Under the state law, voters may either accept or reject the budget. No cuts may be made approved by the board. The proposed contract increases teachers salaries by almost $7,000 and teacher insurance by $15,000.

The Rham PTO will hold its final meeting for this school year on May 24 at 7:30 in the cafeteria.

Guest speaker will be Dr. J. S. Shivers of the University of Connecticut.

Pope's Voice

ROME (AP) — Pope Paul VI has voiced criticism of both workers and employers who have extreme ideas.

At his regular Sunday noon blessing of the crowd in St. Peter's Square, the pontiff deplored industrialists who "do not want to adjust" that workers can aspire to a higher standard of living.

Headaches Can Be Big For Small Businessman

Charlotte, N.C. (AP) — Tolson Sanders Jr. is a small businessman with big debts and a lot of other problems.

Business Mirror Mutual Fund Industry Continually Creates Stir

By JOHN CUNNEY
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP)—Any industry that controls the use of $54 billion in assets is bound to create a public stir every so often, but the mutual fund industry, which has attained that status, has not.

It takes little effort to recall the legislative hearings that led to stiffer regulation, the criticisms about the quality of performance, the accusations about overcharges, their dumping of shares and so on.

In a quieter way, the industry is now providing a lot of information within the financial community, specifically in regard to matters of advertising, liquidity and redemptions.

Town Plans Curb Work For Spring

The town has begun its annual asphalt curbing program. Officials hope that some four miles of curbs will be installed by the time the program is completed.

The amount of work completed will depend on available funds, according to Jacob Boer, assistant town engineer.

The program, usually completed in the fall, is being done in the spring this year to avoid the problems which falling leaves present when installing curbs.

Mayfair Gardens

Mayfair Dedicated, Diana Regrets Delay

Blue skies and a bright sun prevailed Saturday, permitting the formal dedication of Mayfair Gardens, Manchester's third federally sponsored housing project for the elderly, to be held outdoors in ideal weather.

Mayor James F. Wacker, presiding over the ceremony, said the delay in the project was a disappointment.

Strike Closes Most Rails In Country

House Republicans Leader Gerald R. Ford said "Congress must act immediately." He blamed the Democratic leadership for Congress' dealing with the national rail strike threat.

The strike came despite government efforts to mediate a settlement between the union and the National Railway Labor Council.

GOP Leadership Asks Promptness In Deficit Cuts

HARTFORD (AP) — Republican legislative leaders, pointing to the 2 1/2 weeks left in the current legislative session, are asking their Democratic counterparts to agree on a tax program that would include prompt payment of the state deficit.

The statement was made over the weekend by Sen. Alden A. Ives of Torrington and Rep. Francis Collins of Brookfield, the GOP leaders of both houses.

2 Senators Oppose Aid To Lockheed

HARTFORD (AP) — Connecticut's two U.S. senators, Republican Sen. J. William Olin and Democrat Abraham Ribicoff, said over the weekend they oppose a plan to help the ailing Lockheed Aircraft Corp. with a $20-million loan guarantee.

The plan is backed by the Nixon administration.

Easy Way Out Comes at Cost

BUNGER HILL, Va. (AP) — "It just shows you the lengths some people will go to to escape work," says Bill Parker, whose firm is helping the federal government help a small-business man survive.

The man, who is a former engineer, said he was able to get out of his job by claiming a medical condition.

Hartford Man Drowns

SUFFERED (AP) — A 46-year-old Hartford man drowned Saturday night when he fell out of a boat while crossing the Windsor Locks Canal, police said.

The victim was identified as Zymon Siewierski, 14 Windsor Locks Ave., Hartford.

The Foundation Holds Promise

YREKA, Calif. (AP) — If Bay County officials ever dig a basement under the courthouse, they probably won't give the dirt away.

The county has a large tract of land that it has been unable to sell because of zoning restrictions.

Tolland County Grandma's Tea Scheduled By Twins' Mothers

The Tolland County Twin Mothers Club will hold its annual "Grandma's Tea" on Wednesday night at 7:30 at the Mesadown Brook School in Tolland.

The tea is a fund-raiser for the club, which provides support for twin children.

Welfare Budget Cuts Requested By Sen. Houley

State Sen. Robert Houley has challenged the state welfare budget to be passed by the General Assembly.

Houley said the budget would result in a 10 percent cut in welfare benefits for many families.

Nine From Area Become Citizens

Nine area residents became United States citizens Friday in ceremonies at the Federal Courthouse in Hartford.

The ceremony was presided over by Judge M. Joseph Blumenthal.

Odds Against Sunday Work

FITZGERALD, Ga. (AP) — Harry Merritt's service station used to be open seven days a week.

"It's not any more," Merritt said. "Due to circumstances beyond my control, my God and my wife, this station will be closed all day every Sunday."

Members of the Coventry

Members of the Coventry Orange will hold a bake and treasury sale at the same time as the Porter Library project.

The bake will be held at the library on Saturday from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m.

Suspect Chooses A Poor Window

CLAYTON, Mo. (AP) — Two identification cards and a check handed over by a suspect, 23, at Downs Men's Store rang a bell.

The suspect was identified as a member of a local gang.

Unit-pricing... before it was a law, it was at Stop & Shop

On January 1st, the unit-pricing law went into effect. Now every food store in Massachusetts will be required to indicate clearly the price per pound, ounce or other measure of the items on their shelves. Unit-pricing will be new to a lot of food shoppers. But not to Stop & Shoppers. We've been talking about unit-pricing for a long time. And doing something about it since last year. That's when we conducted our Shopper's Poll to find out how you, our customers, felt about unit-pricing. You voted in favor of it by a 5-1 margin. And when you talk, we listen. So we joined the fight that led to the first unit-pricing law in the country. Then we got busy unit-pricing thousands of items on our shelves. To let you see at a glance the best buys for your family. We would have done it whether or not the law was passed... because you asked for it. And because our prime concern at Stop & Shop is to make food shopping easier in every possible way.

Dr. Thomas F. Malone

dent. His subject will be "Some Considerations of the Human Environment."

Arrangements for the dinner and the social hour which will precede it at 6:30 are being made by Mrs. Robert Welas.

Dr. Malone is vice chairman of the Committee on Environmental Policy for Connecticut which recommended much of the environmental legislation now being considered in the General Assembly. He also served on the earlier Clean Water Commission and the Clean Air Task Force and in 1968 was named Connecticut Conservationist of the Year.

A native of Sioux City, Iowa, Dr. Malone graduated from the South Dakota State School of Mines and Technology with high honors in general engineering. A meteorologist, he received his doctor's degree from the Massachusetts Institute of Technology where he subsequently served on the faculty.

In 1965 he was appointed director of The Travelers Weather Research Center and later became a vice president of The Travelers Corporation.

He is a member of the National Academy of Sciences where he has been chairman of many committees including the Committee on International Aspects of the Human Environment. He is author of more than 30 articles for professional, technical and literary publications and has served as an advisor or consultant to the United States Departments of State, Commerce, Transportation, and Health, Education and Welfare.

Reservations for the dinner may be made by phoning Mrs. Welas, of 71 N. Lakewood Circle. Husbands and friends are welcome.

Harioan Given Research Grant

Alan J. Harioan of 46 Green Rd. is one of seven undergraduates named by Drew University, Madison, N.J., to carry on biological research this summer under an $8,880 National Science Foundation grant to Drew.

The son of Mr. and Mrs. Jacob A. Harioan, he is a 1968 graduate of Manchester High School and a pre-medical junior at Drew. He will examine various factors affecting the intestinal transport of amino acids. Dr. Harold C. Rohrs, assistant professor of zoology at Drew and project director, will be his consultant.

Each student will receive $80 a week from June 1 to Aug. 7. The NFS grant makes available a concentrated period in which to devise and perfect the required research techniques and begin to compile useful data. Research will be conducted and written up during each student's senior year.

Town Teachers Join Sorority

Three Manchester teachers were inducted into Alpha Delta Kappa international honor sorority for women educators on Saturday at the annual get-together of the seven Connecticut Chapters at Tamarack Lodge in Voluntown.

They are Miss Gloria Norbert, a teacher at Verplanck School; and Mrs. Joan Tyler and Miss Eleanor Skinner, teachers at Bennet Junior High School.

The organization's first scholarship award was received by Miss Margaret Kulmattich of Hartford, a junior at Smith College, Northampton, Mass.

Mrs. Bernice Maber of Manchester presented Miss Alice Tranberry of West Hartford, immediate past president of the Connecticut Chapters, with a past president pin.

Other members of the Manchester chapter attending the meeting are Miss Marita Kemp, Mrs. Marion Harlow, Mrs. Harriet Osborn, Mrs. Ruth Bonney, Miss Susap Harkins, Mrs. Carol Lenihan, Mrs. Cecilia Moore, Mrs. Joan Wood, Mrs. Melle Farr and Miss Catherine Shea.

COEP Program Lawrence Topic

Nell Lawrence, occupational coordinator at Manchester High School, will be program speaker at the annual spring meeting of the Connecticut Personnel and Guidance Association. It will be held Wednesday at the Gengras Center of the University of Hartford, with registration at 5:30 p.m. and dinner at 6.

Lawrence will discuss the cooperative occupational education program at MHS, a work-study program which combines practical, supervised work experience with the student's academic work. Slides of students at their work stations will be shown.

Outgoing President R. Brayton Bowen of the G. Fox and Co. personnel department will present the slate of new officers. Winners of the membership contest will be announced and prizes awarded.
