Barber Chair Restored to an Early Use

Dave Malinoski leans back in comfort in a Camp Kennedy barber chair as Joan Thompson treats bruises on his face. The two teen-agers are volunteer counselors at the camp. The bruises on Dave's face resulted from a minor accident in Globe Hollow Swimming Pool last week. The barber chair was donated to the Manchester camp for retarded children by Joseph Mistretta of Joe's Barber Shop, on Oak St. Camp Director Harry F. Smith, looking around for a first-aid facility and remembering that barber shops once were places where wounds were dressed and minor surgical operation were made, decided that a barber chair was the logical answer. He asked his own barber (Russell Inzinga of Russ's Barber Shop on Bissell St.) if he knew of one that was available. Russ didn't have one of his own to donate but knew that Joe did. The chair was transported to the camp in a town park department truck. Smith hopes that the chair will see little use between now and Aug. 13, the day Camp Kennedy will close. He isn't anxious for any wrong place. There are many other Americans who approved of American action in Korea, legalistically, at least, under the flag of the United Nations, because there, even though the action was also on the mainland of Asia, and it was a land enforceable world law against war was to survive. But those who approved American action in Korea have not been authority, and on less clear evidence of of such Americans charge them with inconsistency in the past. In some degree, the charge has to be admitted, but there are also two partial explanations. One is that the war in Vietnam is not by any means, in its issues and justifications, any carbon copy of World War II or the Korean conflict. And the second, perhaps very imwar in Vietnam has become the first war in human experience to find its own terrible way immediately into the living rooms of a people who like to think of hemselves as civilized.

Even with such explanations, however, it has to be admitted that there has indeed been an inconsistency in the behavior of those Americans who, favoring and supporting World War II and the Korean war, have ended up renouncing their own country's role in Vietnam. After the conservative critics - have established this point, however, they are not quite content. They proceed to make another and even more interesting

They say that these very same Americans who approved the two previous wars but reject the war in Vietnam will no doubt, in some future day, demonstrate their inconsistency again, by supporting some future war which happens to stir their own particular ideological page and elsewhere, about a possible allel between the present troubles o plagued Imperial Rome during the long years of the very slow "downfall." Th turning these matters over in our houghts for some time and would offer the following for what it may be worth. There are indeed similarities in some of the problems. One of the causes of the decline and fall of Imperial Rome was the Gothic invasion. InA.D. 376 the Emperor Valens let about a million of them cross the Danube and enter the empire That infusion of a huge alien population igestion. They never were assimilated.

Since World War II a far larger num per of people, both in absolute and rela tive terms, have migrated from Southern and rural parts of the United States to a few of the big cities. It has put a far neavier strain on the American system han the Gothic migration put on the there have been resultant new problems the cities, but rather that the cities survived at all. No other civilization ever survived such a mass movement of people. Indeed, no earlier civilization ever was subjected to such a mass mi-

But to think of the problems of the cities in terms of the Roman experience the real central feature of these times. There are parallels in history, but history never repeats itself, and The more accurate context for thinking through these problems is contemporary. It starts with a plain fact. The world as we know it is dominated by both Russia and the United States (and heir rivalries). But both Russia and the Inited States are experiencing identical tifficulties. Both have recent memories f expansion. Both have memories of be ng the leading nation in their respective parts of the world. And both are right now being outpaced by smaller countrie in terms of industrial productivity and in capacity to provide a better life for their respective peoples.

At one time the United States and Russia were among the fastest growing countries in the world in size and profuctivity .Today the fastest growing is productivity are Japan and German (both Germanys). And in terms of the markets opening up to and being developed by these two leaders they are also the ones which are growing while both Russia and the United States are in a contraction of their spheres of influence and trade.

It is merely a fact of these times that tight size and a homogeneous population seem to be better suited to the handling of the problems of today than the bulk and mixed populations of the United States and Russia. In the 19th century it paid off to be big, and mixed. But the advantages of the last century seem at the moment at least to be less advan tageous. East Germany is the smallest of the East bloc countries, but the most efficient, prosperous, and fastest growing. Luxembourg is at the top of the European heap in terms of per capita wealth and social welfare. Swed en (and West Germany soon if not quite

And the lesson seems fairly obvious. Both are fat and clumsy from too little competition in terms of managerial efficiency and labor discipline. Having lived in rising prosperity inside their own huge land areas they have both forgotten the kind of intense, daily competitiveness which keeps the smaller countries on their toes and in the forefront of prog-rious repetition of whatever ailed the Roman Empire. It is challenged by the tight, tidy, small countries which are now producing more efficiently. The real question is whether Russia and the United States can adjust their bulk to modern competition, or will turn into the dinosaurs of the 20th century. - CHRIS TIAN SCIENCE MONITOR.

"They become numbers instead of persons," he observed," and it's much more difficult to control the popu-lation," adding "You never had riots at the Brooklyn jail."

The center at Brooklyn, Conn. state's case against Darwin The center at Brooklyn, Conn. is one of the smallest in the state but anyone spending much time in Tolland County Superior Court knows it is certainly the most popular. Everyone would rather go there than somewhere else. A request is likely to be granted, especially in the case of a young first offender. It's an old jail but with an average of 76 inmates last month there was a good chance they were all involved in one or more of the activities which Pigeon feels are so important state's case against Darwin during the second trial and won a conviction of second degree murder. This year he postponed his intended resignation from the post in order to present oral arguments against the last appeal in June before the state court in Hartford.

As to changes in the court-room, Pigeon said he would favor juries of six persons rather than 12 as is usually the case.

He would break up the state to rehabilitation.

He would break up the state prison at Somers which has over 1,000 inmates into smaller prisons and would increase the number of jails, keeping them small. He would locate them conveniently to the courts which they serve and would seperate the minority of hard-core with a six-man jury as with a six-man jury as with the minority of hard-core criminals from the others.

He spoke out strongly against the part former Commissioner of Correction Ellis MacDougall played in the recently televised exposure of conditions at the Seyms Street Jail in Hartford.

"I felt Commissioner MacDougall should not have prepared such a documentary setting forth the overcrowded conditions at the Seyms Street Jail when he himself was partly rewhen he himself was partly responsible for this by closing the Tolland jail and the Middlesex jail in Hamden." Atty. Pigeon observed, "He made a bad condition worse." level personnel to take care of the ever-increasing list of criminal and civil cases.

He stressed that salaries paid judges, state's attorneys and public defenders are much too

U.S. Schools May Operate Y ear-Kound By THOMAS F, DRISCOLL Peoria Journal Star For The Associated Press Once upon a time, when 90

er cent of the U.S. population ras rural, it made sense to close schools in summer so th children could work on farms. Now that 90 per cent live in urban areas—and air-condition e to close their schools from Tune to September? People all over the country have begun to ask this question, nd the result is a cautious bu discernible movement toward This fall there will be some thing like 130,000 pupils in 10 states enrolled in schools which year, and more than 15 states

For the past three years a Na-tional Year-Round School Semi-States, so school officials everyinformation with one another. Dr. Cyril B. Busbee, superin endent of education in South ing various 12-month plans. Year-round schooling goes by number of names: Extended chool Year, Continuous Learn there are two types now in oper which only three-fourths of th pupils attend class at the same time and the other one-fourth are on vacation. Every student goes to class for 45 days (nine veeks) and then takes a 16-day vacation (three weeks). The ro-vantage of 12-month utilization of school facilities. They both can also reduce the need for additional school construction because some children

The 45-15 plan eliminates th hree-month vacations, when the long days soon begin to drag forget so much of what they

The principal criticism of quarter-system schools, which have been tried before in this country, is that they retain the three-month break. If pupils are required to attend school only during three of the four quarers, thus restricting enrollment to three-fourths at any one time, some children inevitably must take three-month vacations in winter. This has always met with opposition from parents.

As a result, most quarter-system schools in operation today are optional, not mandatory. There appears to be more widespread interest across the country in 48-15 than in the quarter system. This unquesionably is due to taxpayer resistance everywhere to higher school costs, and the promiseof 46-16 to help keep these costs down. Valley View Elementary District, near Chicago, which has the most widely known 45-15 operation, has entertained more than 600 visitors from all parts of the nation since it inaugurated the plan last year. Valley View, with about 7,500 pupils in six schools, was not the first to launch a 45-15 rotation; that distinction belongs to a school near St. Louis, which started it in 1969. But Valley View was the first district to put all of its schools on the plan and to make it mandatory for all pupils.

Taxpayer resistance was not a problem at Valley View. On the contrary, residents had approved -15 consecutive bond issues. But the problem was the same: lack of funds. The district kept growing faster than its ability to build more classrooms, and it is still having that

This is the same kind of prob-lem which has made 45-15 attractive to fast-growing residential areas all over the country. California, in particular, has shown great interest in the plan. Valley View, now with a year's experience, has run into no serious objections from parents, teachers, or anyone else.

Bruce, outgoing U.S. negotiator at the Vietnam peace talks, called today for immediate negotiations on a general, internationally controlled cease-fire

Bruce, 73, made the proposal at the final weekly session of the peace talks he will attend.

He is due to leave Paris Sunday and is scheduled to be replaced soon by William J. Porter, U.S. ambassador to South

The cease-fire proposal has been consistently rejected by the Communist negotiators since it was first put forward

"Why do you object to considering a cease-fire along these lines?" Bruce asked. "You profess humanitarian goals and concern for the peoples of Indochina. You can prove this concern by joining us in an effort to end all the fighting now. "If we can accomplish this, not only will many lives be saved, but I believe that negotiation and resolution of the other issues will come much more

Bruce's deputy, Philip C. Ha-bib, is to head the U.S. delegation until Porter arrives in

At last week's session, Xuan Thuy described the cease-fire proposal as "absurd."
"I see nothing absurd about trying to end the killing now," Bruce declared today, "This is a serious proposal which does not deserve such a callous re-easily as a result."
